THE HERALD FOR 1896.

As is customary at this season the HERALD this week publishes a brief prospectus for the coming year which for the most part was written by our late proprietor during the last week of his work upon the paper.

Again the "Old Reliable" greets its patrons. The hard times of the past two years are slowly but surely improving, and we have reason to expect a fair business year during 1896. It behoves us all, therefore, to set our house in order and be prepared to take advantage of the revival when it comes.

The HERALD will enter the coming year prepared to meet all requirements upon it—to tide over the close times, if such shall be its destiny, or to make hay while the sun shines, if the opportunity shall be offered. In any event, therefore, its weekly visits will be continued during 1896, as they have been for over forty-five years. The character of the paper will be substantially the same as heretofore. First and foremost, it will fill the bill as a first-class local newspaper, giving such additional matter as seems to be most satisfactory to a majority of its patrons. It will not be the organ of any party, sect or clique, but will be independent in all things, and it will never shrink from expressing its honest convictions on all subjects, whenever occasion seems to demand it. Our rates have been placed upon a hard pan basis for '96, and we offer a very few extra combinations for those who regard them with favor; and we take pride in the fact that though they are few in number they are greater bargains than ever before offered in this paper. By special arrangements and liberal advertising we have procured two articles we will give our subscribers the full benefit of. They are articles which should be in every home. The latest and best map of Michigan ever printed, and the latest and most complete History of our own country ever written in one volume and by the greatest living historian, of America.

We print in part the most favorable club list ever presented in these columns and any periodicals not mentioned here will be procured at the lowest price. Here are the two combination offers in detail.

NUMBER ONE.

Everyone knows something about the great map publishing firm of Hand, McNally & Co. Their atlases and wall maps have gained a world-wide reputation. Their new state map of Michigan is the best one ever issued. It is 41 by 58 inches in size, full mounted with rollers, showing all organized townships, beautifully colored, and sells for $2.00. The former price was $3.00. This map can be furnished at the remarkably low price of $1.40, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included.

NUMBER TWO.

The People's History of the United States has just been issued by the noted author and historian, John Clark Ridpath, L.L.D. It is the very best history of the United States now extant, comprised within the limits of a single volume. The cloth bound edition is sold only by subscription at $3.75 per copy. We can furnish this great work at only $2.10 per copy, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included. This is an unprecedented offer.

We append a partial list of most favorable clubbing rates to advance paying subscribers:

Tecumseh Chapter, No. 42, R. A. M., held its annual election Christmas night. Beside exemplifying the royal arch degree and disposing of a genuine holiday banquet, the officers were elected as follows:

H. P.—P. S. McKinnon.
K.—J. A. Boyd.
S.—Horace Holdridge.
Sec.—F. J. Temple.
Treas.—T. Elliott.
C. H.—R. M. Boyd.
P. S.—J. F. Hicks.
R. A. C.—B. J. Garlinghouse.
G. M. 3rd V.—G. B. Garlinghouse.
G. M. 2nd V.—Wm. Britton.
G. M. 1st V.—T. R. Kyle.

Though in a somewhat more modest way than was the custom of our society gentry in recent years, the annual Christmas party was held at the armory Wednesday evening in a style and manner becoming a social function of that character. The armory was very tastily decorated, the music excellent and the supper all that those well sharpened and fastidious appetites could desire. About thirty couple participated in the event, among whom were the following from abroad: The Misses Emma and Dora Shultz and Miss Ellenore Lehn, of Manchester; Messrs. Chas. Bidwell, Raynor Anderson and Earle Slayton, of Detroit; Arthur Hall, of Toledo; Will Carlton, of Adrian, and Merton Burlingame, of Canal Dover, Ohio.

The many friends here who were awaiting news from the operation which Mrs. Geo. Kies, of Clinton, underwent at Detroit last week, were disappointed to learn the fatal outcome last Friday. The funeral was held in Clinton, Monday, Rev. Blachford officiating, and was attended by many from Tecumseh.

In his lecture before the class in international law, President Angell, of the U. of M., even goes beyond the stand taken by Cleveland and Olney on the Monroe doctrine. He advances the opinion that that this country should interfere in the acquisition of American territory by European powers, whenever it would be prejudicial to our interest, even though the country directly interested should acquiesce. This is a bold, aggressive stand and carries weight, coming as it does from one of the most conservative and able exponents of international law in this country.

The officers and teachers of the Methodist Sunday school prepared for their scholars a beautiful Christmas arch for their entertainment and to fittingly celebrate the most joyous anniversary in the christian calendar. The affair was gotten up especially for the children, of course, but where they are entertained and are the entertainers as well, there you will find their parents, brothers, sisters, uncles, aunts and grand-parents, all agog with interest and for a time young again themselves with the mirth and joy of the youngsters. Thus the Methodist church was crowded to the doors on Christmas eve and it was an evening well spent, to see the fine display and hear the excellent songs, recitations, etc., of the scholars. When Santa Claus appeared the climax was reached and the appreciation and joy of the small ones was manifest by a fine exhibition of lung power.

The background and pad are printed in various delicious brown tints. A change of venue is all right sometimes and very necessary to the administration of justice. However, it is often a little hard on disinterested taxpayers. At least the Washtenaw county taxpayers think so, as they will have to put up over $1,000 for the trial of the case of Wm. Whalen vs. Michigan Central Ry. brought from Jackson county. PIONEER DEAD.

Ionia, Dec. 20.—Sanford A. Yeomans, who served in the state legislature for two terms, died Thursday at the advanced age of 79 years. He was probably the wealthiest man in Ionia county and one of the founders of the First national bank here, having resigned its presidency on account of ill health. He had a severe stroke of paralysis seven years ago and failed steadily ever since. He came to Ionia in 1833, settling on his 40-acre farm, which he increased to 150. He was one of the commissioners appointed by the state to lay the Ionia, Houghton and Mackinaw state road. In 1867 he was a member of the state constitutional convention. In 1876 he was elected to the state legislature and served two terms. In politics he was a republican, an original whig, and in religion orthodox.

The site is now occupied by a $65,000 building. Monday five of the heirs of Johnson Patrick, the original owner of the land, filed suit against the association for $20,000, claiming they never signed the deed to Senator Stockbridge. The square on which the building is has always been used by religious societies, that being one of the conditions of the deed. Four large churches also occupy the square.

Besides running various kinds of businesses, the municipal affairs of the village are conducted by women. They are at the head of a dozen local societies, and generally bring success to the undertakings they engage in.

REUNITED AFTER YEARS.

Long Search of Michigan Brothers for Each Other Happily Ended.

Morley, Dec. 24.—B. D. Williamson, a hardware merchant of this village, has been in search of two sisters and a brother for many years. His father having died before he was born, and his mother dying when he was only six years old, he went to live with his uncle in Flowerfield township, St. Joseph county, and the members of the family gradually drifted apart. It was recently published that Hiram Williamson, of Pierson, had been granted an increase of pension. B. D. Williamson at once wrote him to learn the name of his father and mother, and received an invitation to visit him. It developed that they were brothers, and last Thursday they held a reunion, it having been 45 years since their last meeting. The sisters are living in the southern part of the state, and Hiram Williamson has lived 17 years on a farm near Pierson, only 13 miles from his brother, and each was in search of the other all this time.

A LAKE NAVY.

Its Effectiveness in Case of War with Great Britain.

Detroit, Dec. 20.—Alex McVittie, vice president and manager of the Detroit Dry Dock company, believes that in case of immediate war England would be at a vast disadvantage with respect to a lake navy. He says his company could turn out two ships of 4,000 tons each, fit for fighting, in six months, and the other shipyards along the lakes could turn out eight more. A great many of the larger boats now in service on the great lakes could quickly and easily be transformed into fighting machines, especially the big car ferries in the straits of Mackinaw. These vessels, in Mr. McVittie's opinion, would be able to cope with anything Great Britain could bring here in several years.

When she sprang into the water she carried in her arms her only child, a three-year-old daughter. Her husband on returning from business found a note written by her directing him to search for her in the cistern.

TURNING GRAY AND THREATENED WITH BALDNESS

The Danger is Averted by Using

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray and began falling out so rapidly that I was threatened with immediate baldness. It stopped the hair from falling out, stimulated a new growth of hair, and kept the scalp free from dandruff. Only an occasional application is now needed to keep my hair of good natural color. I never hesitate to recommend any of Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. Hagood, Avoca, Neb.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Dec. 29. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, Children Included.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Acts x, 2; xi, 14; xvi, 15, 31, 33.

That children before they have committed willful sin are in God's favor and saved is clear from the Saviour's own words and deeds. If the kingdom of heaven is composed of such, which is the language of Christ, then they must have some rightful place in the earthly church. They have the right to nurture, watch, care, protection and true affection.

As in the Jewish church the rite of circumcision was the covenant sign between Jehovah and his chosen people, and this was bestowed upon the male child at 8 days of age, so in the early days of the Christian church baptism seems to have been administered to the whole household when they turned from heathenism to Christianity. No special mention of children is made, but the plain implication is certainly given. In the case of the household of Cornelius, Lydia and the jailer at Philippi, no other adults are mentioned as professing faith in Christ, and as the households were baptized, the only reasonable inference is that children must be intended.

This Grace Also.

There are many members of the League who are faithful in attendance upon the services of the church and often sing and pray and speak in the meetings and pass for first rate Christians, who never gave any serious thought to the matter of the expenditure of their money and of the ability of using it in the Master's service. What proportion of our members fixed proportion of their income keep any fair account of the amounts spent for personal gratification and those given to the cause of God? If one will for a little while keep strict account he will be surprised to see how much he spends on his own pleasures, how little he gives to help others, and perhaps may get his eyes open to the fact that he knows little of self denial, much of self indulgence, and that in spite of all his self complacency he is really a very selfish specimen of humanity. A little vigorous self denial would prove beneficial to the one exercising it and would bless many others beside. Paul exhorted one of his churches that as they abounded in other gifts they should abound in this grace also. The exhortation is timely now. Let us deny ourselves, take up our cross daily and follow Christ.

The Junior League.

What opportunities lie undeveloped in this organization! Every exertion should be used to start the boys and girls on the right track in social, devotional and literary lines. If wisdom is exercised in these regards we shall have small cause for complaint as they grow older that they are drawn away by the allurements of the world. Get habits of reading good and helpful books formed in early childhood, and the bad book will never give any trouble, because there will be no taste for it, but rather disgust. Supply innocent, healthful and helpful recreation, and the dance and card table will never attract in later years. Give attractive society, and there will be no seeking evil companions. Purity, sweetness, beauty are attractive to childhood. Use them in all wise ways to form habits, and as these crystallize into character the young people will be safe.

Childhood Under Christianity.

In nothing is the contrast of the heathen systems of religion and that of Christianity more forcibly shown than in their respective estimates of childhood. Nowhere outside of the religion of Jesus Christ is there any true appreciation of the worth, the rights and the nature of children. Here alone are they shown as objects of God's special care and regard. Only slowly has the church been awakening to a full appreciation of her duty and privilege in training her young for the service of God. This has been well called the age of childhood. And true it is that, as never before, the child nature and wants are being studied and supplied and a purer and higher manhood and womanhood are surely arising from this better culture of the childhood of the times.

Good Resolutions.

Many sneer at the custom of making good resolutions at the beginning of the year. Nevertheless it is a good thing to do. Here is a turning point. It is a good time to begin a better course of living. Has the reading of the Bible been neglected in the pressure of home cares and business life? This is a good time to begin to read it regularly. So of private prayer and family devotions. So also of attendance upon the services of the church. Make your vows to God and then fulfill them faithfully. Make the next year a better one than any of its predecessors.

Worth of Missions.

General Samuel Merrill, late American consul general at Calcutta, on the eve of his departure for home, said in an address to a Sunday school: "My friends, that which made the deepest impression during my three years' sojourn in India has been the sight of those who have left their homes on the other side of the world, to enter the hovels of the outcast, to point to the heavenly friend and the celestial mansions. When all other pictures of the orient have vanished, this, upon which a radiance from heaven falls, will eternally abide."

Doing Good.

Alone amid life's griefs and perils
The stoutest soul may quail;
Left to its own unaided efforts,
The strongest arm may fail.

Then let us learn to help each other,
Hoping unto the end.
Who sees in every man a brother
Shall find in each a friend. —Anon.

SCOVEL C. STACY.

Memorial Resolutions by the County Bar Association.

The following resolutions have been adopted by the Lenawee county bar and ordered spread upon the journal, as a manifestation of respect to the memory of the late Scovel C. Stacy, of Tecumseh:

Resolved, That it is with great sorrow that the bar of Lenawee county are called upon to announce to this court that its roll of membership no longer contains the honorable name of "Stacy."

Scovel C. Stacy was admitted to the bar on the 29th day of May, 1868, and at once began the active practice of law with his learned father, C. A. Stacy, at Tecumseh, in this county. He died Dec. 7, 1895. For several years he gave great promise of equaling, if not excelling, the remarkable ability and skill of his partner and parent.

Unfortunately, however, as the mind of young Stacy grew clear and brilliant, his physical strength gave way, until finally his hearing became so deficient that he was compelled to give up further practice in the proffession for which he had so well prepared himself, and which he graced, honored and loved so much. The members of this bar who knew him personally, and practiced with him, respected and loved him. Those of the younger members, who only knew him as a lawyer by reputation, cherish his good name.

The Great Tobacco War.

Many of our readers know of the war existing between the manufactures of plug chewing tobacco and few, perhaps, are familiar with the cause.

For years some manufacturers have been making enormous profits by giving consumers a small piece of plug for ten cents. Recently a very large manufacturer, seeing that the time had come for better things, has placed a new brand called Battle Ax on the market which gives the consumer a very large piece of most excellent quality for the same price. This has raised a great storm among those who are hurt by it, but it gives joy to those who use the goods. In Battle Ax they get a greater quantity for their money, while the quality is equal to the finest of other brands. This has naturally had the effect of greatly decreasing the business of those who have held to the old way, and it has materially curtailed their enormous profits. On the other hand Battle Ax now taxes the resources of three large factories, which by running night and day, are still unable to satisfy the enthusiastic demand.

The people want a good thing and the most of it that they can get for the price. The manufacturers who do the best by them will get their trade. Their rivals naturally do not like it. They raise a mighty howl, but the Ax will cut them down.

A Captalist Preaches.

The famous S. V. White, who has for so many years been such a power in Wall Street, and has meanwhile represented his District in Congress, appears in a new role in the columns of EVERY WHERE. He delivers a lay sermon to young men and women, on the text "Keep that which is committed to thy trust;" and it is the general verdict of business men, that his remanks ought to be framed in gold, and hung in every counting-room. If heeded, they would save much of the financial dishonesty which is ruining so many young men.

The other departments of the paper are up to their usual standard, which is saying a great deal. The name of the editor Will Carleton is in itself worth a whole corps of ordinary contributors, and the three poems entitled "Bird Rhymes" in this paper are worth the whole price of subscription for one year, which is only fifty cents. An Interesting Announcement.

We have secured for the exclusive use of the HERALD a series of articles on the Sandwich Islands by the distinguished historian and novelist, John R. Musick. These articles are being prepared by the author on on the spot. He is now at Honolulu, and will visit each of the islands of the Hawaiian group. They will have the peculiar freshness that can only be given to such when written at the place on the very days the writer beholds them. They will be a series of descriptive and historical articles, or letters about that country. Mr. Musick will furnish us, therefore, articles rich in descriptive scenery, filled with authentic history and facts, and lightened by incidents of travel and adventure, making them more fascinating than a novel.

No portion of the world is to-day attracting more attention than the Sandwich Islands; and yet, much as they are talked about and as much as they have been mixed in American politics for the last forty years, the masses of readers know but little of the social life and customs of the Islanders, and could not tell off-hand whether they lived in modern houses, in huts, wigwams, or caves.

It will be the object of these letters not only to briefly sketch the past and present of the Hawaiian Islands, but to carry the reader directly into the private life of the people who inhabit them; their past and present government, the overthrow of monarchy, and the setting up of a Republic will be narrated from a non-political standpoint. In this respect they will have a peculiar interest because in the coming Presidential contest the question of annexation will be agitated. These letters will contain hundreds of items of great interest, all told in a highly entertaining, instructive and unbiased manner. In short, we have a rich treat for our readers for the entire winter.

We urge you to get your neighbors and friends elsewhere to subscribe for the HERALD. The articles alone will be worth much more than the subscription price of this paper. Then always remember these letters are exclusive; no other paper in this vicinity can furnish them. They are for the HERALD.

A Great Newspaper Combination.

For the past 53 years, over half a century, The Michigan Farmer has been published, and it is the oldest regular agricultural journal under one name on this continent.

With largely increased capital and under new management that has had 23 years successful experience in agricultural journalism, this great paper is making rapid strides toward the top in the galaxy of agricultural literature of America. It is most beautifully printed on high grade paper, and employs the most eminent writers on the science and practice of Agriculture, Horticulture, Live Stock, Dairying, Apiary and Poultry. Has a standard veterinary department for free treatment of all diseases of farm animals. A legal and medical department. Contains all the agricultural news of the country and an invaluable literary and household department every week. Admits no swindling nor immoral advertisements. And is in fact in every way a great, sound, pratical, agricultural, live stock and family journal, that the agriculturists of Michigan may justly feel proud of, and subscribe for with satisfaction and profit. We are pleased to be able to announce that we can furnish to our subscribers the Michigan Farmer and the TECUMSEH HERALD both one year, making a total of 104 papers, for the low price of $1.60 certainly a barrain that should be liberally patronized. For free specimen copy send address to Michigan Farmer, Detroit, Mich.

A DEAD MAN'S LUNCH.

They found him sitting bolt upright on a pile of boards just back of the little toolhouse where the men were building, holding in his stiff, dead hands lunchbox like those that children often carry, and after glancing at his dirty working clothes and the roughness of his somewhat slender hand they were astonished at his sumptuous dinner.

In the box were fruits and cake that any king might envy. The napkin was of damask linen, and the chicken tender and delicious.

No one knew him as other than one of their own kind—a laborer, strangely sad and morbidly retiring.

After examining his companions as far as possible the authorities at last decided to investigate his dinner. Every crumb was tested with an expert's care, and the presence of poison proved beyond all question.

Then they took the body to the morgue and began a right search for the evildoer.

At last a boy was found who said that for several weeks he had been employed each noon to carry a tempting lunch to the murdered man and gave the name of the lady living in the magnificent house across the way as the one who had thus employed him.

At first it seemed incredible, for the lady's husband was a worthy millionaire and she of excellent reputation. But there was no other solution forthcoming, and at last the lady admitted her guilt in open court with her still adoring husband by her side, and insisted upon giving the following explanation:

"When I was but a girl, I loved this man, the one whom I have killed," she began unsteadily, "and, oh, how dearly was I beloved by him who is now my victim! Happy as the birds, we strolled about our native heath and swore eternal faith to one another. He was a noble lad, handsome and strong, and our souls were knit together until it seemed that death alone could part us. And then the war broke out and my lover left my side. I bore the parting bravely, but wept and pined when he was gone, certain that nothing could console me.

"The days went by and finally they told me he was dead, and after two long years of grief I married him you see beside me. He was poor then, but gentle and attentive, and his affection soothed me for a time until one glorious morning when, returning from early prayer, I met my former lover.

"Oh, how I wept upon his breast, for now I realized that love had never died, and from that day we lived for one another as wholly as we ever had before my wretched marriage. I was his wife and his alone. I lived for him and every passion of my heart seemed satisfied by his affection.

"It was then that the ambition to be rich first entered my lawful husband's mind. Knowing nothing of my secret love, he pictured to me visions of a wealthy home, position, luxury and joys that women dearly prize and gradually as these visions were realized I found myself turning slowly from my first love to bask in pleasures that he could not give.

"At first I tried to wake in him this same ambition to be rich, but Roland, poor, dear Roland, only laughed at my desires and twitted me of growing worldly like all the others of my sex.

"The change was gradual, but no less sure because months passed before it grew apparent. I loved him still, in a strange, remorseful way, but the thought that he could not give me gold at last resulted in a bitter malice. His happy nature chilled me when I remembered how little satisfied his soul while my husband's all absorbing greed for what would give us comfort and position inspired me with a keen regard and made my lover small in consequence.

"Then there were years of silence after we had fiercely disagreed, and when I looked upon his face again it was to see him clad in homely laborer's garb and struggling day by day to earn his meager living. From the windows of my lovely home I looked upon his haggard face and felt down deep within my heart the twinges of remorse and sorrow.

"I loved him while I wronged him so. I loved him still, even when his low position should awaken my disgust, and as the days passed slowly by I heard his hammer ring upon the stones until the echo tortured me with thousandfold regrets.

"At last I ventured upon a plan to be of some substantial aid, and thus, without making myself known in any way, I daily sent a dainty lunch and watched his pleasure from my curtained window. And day on day as I stood and watched the same old hungering pain of love crept back, and I would willingly have given the half I owned to rest upon his bosom as in the days of old, before ambition came between us.

"Then frenzy took possession of my soul, and more than once I raised my window wide and would have called his name with eager voice, but something, some small remnant of my pride, restrained me, and I closed the sash unheard.

"O God! the horror of those days! To know that he was near, to even see his careworn face and know that he was still alone, was almost more than I could bear.

"Each day with my own hands I packed his dainty lunch and each day grew more eager to rush forth and clasp him in my arms, but always pride and caution held me back, and in the struggle that grew daily intense my very reason tottered on its throne. Then to my brain there came a sudden thought. I must be free of either love or pride, and after groveling in the very dregs of woe, I placed the poison in his food and sent him to his death."

The sins which pride commit the gilt of gold will cover, oftentimes, for though they judged her guilty of an awful crime her husband's wealth secured the wretched life, but never since the day they found him dead has wealth, position, love or ease brought happiness or comfort to her soul. —Exchange.

Applying a Desperate Remedy.

The Boston 2-year-old was crying.

Not in the boisterous, crude, uncultivated style of the barbarian youngster of other localities, but after the restrained and comparatively decorous manner in which the thoughtful infant of New England's intellectual metropolis abandons itself to grief.

"Waldonia," said the nurse, "think of the impropriety of this! Remember you are not in the solitude of your own apartments, but out in the open air. Reflect that to some extent the eyes of the world are upon you and endeavor to restrain your feelings."

Regardless of this eminently proper and reasonable reproof the infantile Bostonian still wept. The faithful attendant, losing all patience, stopped wheeling the perambulator, stepped around to the front of the vehicle and shook her long finger at its occupant.

"You bad child!" she exclaimed: "I'll punish you for this! I'll never take you to another lecture as long as I live!"—Chicago Tribune.

Scribner's for Christmas.

Frank R. Stockton has a Christmas love story, which bears a characteristic title,—"The Staying Power of Sir Rohan." Its illustrations are quaint and exactly suitable.

A thrilling Detective story by C. E. Carryl, entitled "The River Syndicate," perhaps equalling Sherlock Holmes' best work. Illustrated.

Sentimental Tommy
By J. M. Barrie.

Those who have read (and who has not?) "The Little Minister" and "A Window in Thrums" can anticipate what Mr. Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy" will be.

It is to be the chief serial in Scribner's for 1896, beginning in the January number.

Two Years for $4.50

Scribner's Magazine costs $3 00 a year, but new subscribers can have all the numbers for 1895 and a year's subscription for 1896 for $4.50;

Scribner's Magazine is going to be better next year than ever. It is going to have new features. Its publishers are not satisfied with past successes. It proposes to more thoroughly deserve the confidence of the reading public.

The History Serial—Last Quarter Century in the United States—will be continued. Just now it is approaching a period of absorbing interest to the present generation—the first administration of President Cleveland.

Scribner's Magazine ought to get careful consideration as a Christmas gift. The $4.50 offer ought to get double consideration.

Morals of Anecdote.

Journal of Prison of Imperial Diet [illegible] Last Week, and the Same Night.

It is appropriate, at this time, to consider a subject which has been written about and talked about a great deal during the past year, and which will be written about and talked about a great deal during the year which is now upon us. We refer to the subject of anecdotes. Many of the anecdotes which have been used during the past year are now entirely obsolete and abandoned. Their use, however, was better than their action, and few have observed and noticed the [illegible] which [illegible] the anecdote [illegible] universal practice and consent a distinction has been preserved between the worker and his work. Each has been judged separately, and thus some of the priceless intellectual and artistic treasures of past times have come down to us, whereas otherwise they would have been lost. It was chiefly reserved for this century, and notably since the days of Wesley and Lord Byron, to attempt to measure a man's work by the standard of his moral character. This spirit, however, has never been so remarkably exhibited as during the last few weeks. And as it appears to be supposed to extend away and to the public welfare, we desire to question its utility and therefore its morality.

Lately an author and playwright has been convicted by a jury of infamous criminality. Before his conviction—indeed, as soon as he was charged—his works were in some places withheld from the public. Even a member of the Westminster Vestry gave notice to move "that they be withdrawn from the two public libraries in Westminster, and that the other local Authorities in London be requested to take the same course in regard to the libraries under their control." Several libraries had already done this, perhaps without sufficient consideration. We have never had any acquaintance whatever, beyond common repute, with the author in question or his literary works. But these, we presume, were good to have because so popular, and if they were good then they must be the same now. Here we regard only the principle involved. This resolves itself into the query—Should we prohibit or refuse good work because of the immorality of the author or doer?

The absurdity of an affirmative to this question should be self-evident, and if carried out, would land us into endless difficulties. If our baker bakes good bread, or our bootmaker makes good boots, we do not ask what are the morals of these tradesmen before eating the bread and wearing the boots. It would be agreeable to know that they are worthy people, and sad to think them the reverse, but the usefulness of their handiwork would not be affected by either sentiment. Indeed one ought to be thankful to be able to get a good thing at all without troubling about the moral deliciousness of the makers.

We do not inquire before buying a picture whether the artist is moral or otherwise. The quality of the work is all we regard. If literature is to be an exception to this custom, there would be little left but that of inferior value, for, unfortunately, as we have said, the men of highest genius have been too frequently of extremely shaky morals. The virtuous yeoman of Westminister no doubt goes to church regularly and enjoys the Psalms of David and the Song of his son Solomon. But the worst of modern authors are the pinks of propriety compared to those old Poetic Jews who perpetrated every villiany under the sun. Therefore we do not on that account move that those immoral and religious effusions be withdrawn from Westminister Abbey, and our other churches. On the contrary if their perusal will do any one good, by all means let people read more. And let us thank God that it is possible to obtain good from the evil, and to paint the beauty of the rose and the fairness of the lily from the depths of the cesspool.

A WONDERFUL ESCAPE.

(From the Jackson Citizen.)

Mr. A. E. Wing resides at 612 N. Jackson Street, Jackson, Mich. He is a keeper in the Michigan State Prison, a man of sterling integrity, and whose word is beyond dispute. He tells the following story of a wonderful escape, and the incidents connected with the dangerous position in which he was placed. He says, some months ago my attention was attracted by a swelling of my groins, which began to increase in size to such an extent that I was alarmed. It spread down my legs to my feet, and I was bloated from my waist down, so badly that I could not pull my pants over my legs, and I had to open my shoes fully two inches before I could get them on. Even my face became puffed up; and my whole system seemed affected. I could hardly drag myself upstairs to unlock my men. I consulted a physician, one of the best in the city. He said the swelling was caused by an irritation of the kidneys, and I commenced treatment with him. But I seemed to be getting worse. I was strongly urged by a friend to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and I finally consented. After the first week I commenced to see a change, and felt much better. This was encouraging, and I continued their use. I took five boxes in all, with the happy result that I was completely cured. I have never heard of any medicine which had such a pronounced and radical effect, and yet not affect the system generally and leave it in such a good condition. I feel better now than I ever did. After the effect was once established the swelling gradually disappeared until it was entirely gone. I regard Doan's Kidney Pills as a most wonderful agent in the curing of any form of kidney disorder.

Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. Tainted Blood.

Scrofula is in the blood of almost every one, and it is the cause of many of our ills before. If it attacks the breathing organs, the tissue is consumption; if the digestive apparatus, the issue is dyspepsia and debility; if the muscles, the issue is rheumatism; if the nerves, the issue is paralysis; if the glandular system, the issue is in boils and other superficial exhibitions of corruption. It is a mistake to characterize it as unseen. What festers your skin on every little abrasion? Scrofula. What gives the hack to your cough on exposure to the slightest impaired soul? Scrofula. What makes your food an oppression? Scrofula. What racks and twists the leaves and sinews as you grow old? Scrofula. It operates by withholding nutrition and defeating all efforts toward nourishment; life becomes a burden, and the victim knows not the blessing and happiness of health. It is your duty to yourself, your family, and your race, to manfully oppose and dislodge this demon. How? We can only say, that others, who were afflicted as you are, have found relief and a cure in a moderate use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that compound in which the skill of modern pharmacist and the science of the most advanced medical knowledge unite for the benefit of suffering humanity.

Medical Writers.

The best medical writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will, by its own action, reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh during the past few years proves that only one remedy has met these conditions, and that is Century Catarrh Cure. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and surgeons concede this fact. The most distressing symptoms yield to it. For sale by C. A. Mrs. W. L. Jones, accompanied her nephew, W. T. Bush, to his home at Brooklyn, N. Y., leaving Thursday evening for a few week's visit with her sisters.

Married, at the home of the bride's parents near Holloway, Mich., Dec. 24, 1895, by Rev. J. N. Boyer, Mr. Lavern J. Linn and Miss Adella P. Fritts, both of Ridgeway, Lenawee county, Mich.

For various reasons there was not as large attendance as usual at the reunion of class number 10, of the Sunday school held at the church New Years eve. Refreshments were served, as has been the custom, and a very pleasant evening spent by those present.

The following named scholars were present every day during the fifteen weeks of the fall term: Ella Boyd, Laura Palmer, Mary Culbertson, Carroll Culbertson and Fred Temple. The percentage of attendance was 94 for the term, which is very good considering the distance some of the scholars have to come. Special mention should be made of James and Lizzie Murphy, who drive six miles, and were present 74 days of the 75 in the term.

In noticing the Palmer-Sutton wedding last week from lack of space we were forced to omit the list of presents which were as follows: $100 in cash, Chas. Sutton, wife and Lottie; 1 dozen silver knives and forks and 3 tablespoons, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Palmer; one half dozen silver tea-spoons, Cyrus A. Palmer; silver butter dish and knife, Mrs. Joseph Exelby and family; silver tea set, E. W. Palmer and Addie Sherman; goldlined berry spoon, B. E. VanDeventer and wife, G. I. Chalker and wife and E. J. and C. A. VanDeventer, Ithaca, Mich.; silver sugar shell, John J. Allison; butter knife, Cora B. Sometimes the most careful women are the most careless. Many a woman bundles herself up, to keep out sickness—when she is neglecting the very worst sickness that can come to a woman. She allows a slight disorder to become worse, to slowly sap her vitality. The little pain and the other slight indications of trouble seem to her unimportant. She goes on with increasing suffering, until life itself becomes a drag. Nervousness, sinking spells, digestive disturbances, and fifty other complications may arise from the derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. Over thirty years ago the need for a reliable remedy for so-called female complaints was recognized by Dr. R. V. Pierce, then, as now, chief consulting physician to the World's Dispensary and Invalid's Hotel, at Buffalo, N. Y. He prepared Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the most wonderfully effective remedy that has ever been used for such maladies. The Mount Lebanon Shakers recently performed a great deed of charity, although it was not designed as a charity, being nothing more nor less than an advertising scheme. It however resulted in great good just the same. They gave away 1,000 bottles of their Digestive Cordial to those suffering from stomach derangements. It was so effective in curing those who used the remedy that they were loud in their praises of it and in consequence a large demand for the cordial was at once created. The druggists of this town have little books that tell all about it. Their Digestive Cordial creates an appetite, aids digestion and brings about a rapid increase in flesh and strength.

Catarrh in the Head.

Is due to impure blood and cannot be cured with local applications. Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured hundreds of cases of catarrh because it purifies the blood and in this way removes the cause of the disease. Hood's Pills become the favorite cathartic with everyone who tries them.

To the Sufferers of Rheumatism.

After using Groff's Rheumatic Cure for some time in my practice I take great pleasure in saying that it is the most wonderful remedy for rheumatism; in fact, it is the only one I have found for the cure of this disease in all its various forms. DR. E. E. TULL, Chicago.

HEART DISEASE, like many other ailments when they have taken hold of the system, never gets better of its own accord, but Constantly grows worse. There are thousands who know they have a defective heart, but will not admit the fact. They don't want their friends to worry, and Don't know what to take for it, as they have been told time and again that heart disease was incurable. Such was the case of Mr. Silas Farley of Dyesville, Ohio who writes June 19, 1894, as follows:

"I had heart disease for 23 years, my heart hurting me almost continually. The first 15 years I doctored all the time, trying several physicians and remedies, until my last doctor told me it was only a question of time as I could not be cured. I gradually grew worse, very weak, and completely discouraged, until I lived, propped half up in bed, because I couldn't lie down nor sit up. Thinking my time had come I told my family what I wanted done when I was gone. But on the first day of March on the recommendation of Mrs. Fannie Jones, of Anderson, Ind., I commenced taking Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart and wonderful to tell, in ten days I was working at light work and on March 19 commenced framing a barn, which is heavy work, and I hav'nt lost a day since. I am 56 years old, 6 ft. 4½ inches and weigh 250lbs. I believe I am fully cured, and I am now only anxious that everyone shall know of your wonderful remedies."

Dyesville, Ohio. SILAS FARLEY.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 27, '95.

Whether President Cleveland and Speaker Reed are playing politics, or both are acting upon an understanding arrived at when they had an extended conference several days ago, is a question upon which the opinions of prominent members of Congress do not agree. Some think that the President promised to allow the bill which has just been passed by the House, making the tariff upon wool, woolens and lumber 60 per cent of what it was under the McKinley law, and making a general increase of 15 per cent in everything, except sugar, in the present tariff, to go into effect upon the passage of the act and to remain in effect until August 1, 1896, to become a law without his signature (provided it gets through the Senate) in return for the authority to issue 3 per cent bonds and 3 per cent Treasury certificates which is contained in another bill, also just passed by the House; others contend that Mr. Cleveland has been very much surprised at the alacrity of the House in adopting his eleventh hour suggestion of working through Christmas week, and still more so at its promptness in passing these bills. The latter think that the President was only trying to place the responsibility for the bonds he intends issuing upon Congress, and that he expected no legislation. No matter which is right, the bills have now gone to the Senate. But they will not be acted upon so hastily there. The tariff bill may get through the Senate, but the bond bill is going to have a rough road to travel and the chances are it will be smashed before it reaches the end of the route. At least that is what the present talk of Senators indicates.

The announcement that Russia had offered this country $400,000,000 in gold to make it independent of the European money ring created a sensation in Congress. Although it has not been officially confirmed it is generally believed that the offer was made. Should the offer be accepted it would create a worse panic in the Rothschilds crowd than did that Monroe doctrine message.

The Indians are very much interested in the several bills proposing legislation affecting Indian Territory. Each of the five civilized tribes is represented in Washington, the latest arrivals being Chief Mays, ex-Chief Harris, George Benge, and Joseph Smallwood all Cherokees. They say they expect to remain during the entire session of Congress, and that they will endeavor to persuade Congressman that no change in the relations of the Indians to the government is needed. They and other Indians have a hard task ahead of them, owing to the demands for legislation from the representatives of the white residents of the Territory and the unfavorable nature of the report of the Dawes commission.

As was predicted when the extension of the civil service rules to the Government Printing Office was made those rules have come into collision with the typographical union and with few exceptions the Public Printers have aided the printers in enforcing this rule. But the civil service rules contain no recognition of the Union. They merely say that when a man or woman has answered a certain percentage of the questions asked at the periodical examinations he or she shall be placed upon the eligible list from which all appointments are to be made. The other day a batch of appointments were made by the Public Printer, and among them were four non-union printers. This has upset the union printers. It may be that they can in some way influence the four non-union printers to come into the union and thus save for a time the prestige of the G. O. P. as a union establishment; but whatever the result in these cases it is only a matter of time when the civil service appointments will make the largest printing office in the world a non-union office. And the union printers clamored for the extension of the civil service rules.

Representative Beach, of Ohio, has introduced a bill in the House authorizing the President to invite the governments of the other American republics to appoint plenipotentiaries with full powers, to meet in conference at the city of Washington within one year from the approval of the act, for the formal acceptance and declaration of the Monroe doctrine as a principle of international law, the Secretary of State to be the plenipotentiary for the United States. A similar bill has been introduced by Senator Allen.

Representative Johnson, of Cal., introduced a bill in the House for the protection of American staples and American ships, which provides for the payment of a bounty on all agricultural products exported. The idea was indorsed at a conferance of the representatives of a number of agricultural organizations recently held here.

The man who kicks about accepting worn silver coins will do well to familiarize himself with a decision of the U. S. Supreme Court rendered this week, declaring that silver coins are legal tender as long as they bear the semblance of the coin. Of course this decision referred only to coins worn by circulation. Mutilated and defaced coins are not legal tender, even if they are new.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

One of the best meetings the club has held for some time was held at the commodious farm residence of Mr. and Mrs. Israel Schreder on the last evening of the old year. Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves and a profitable as well as social time was the result. The program for the evening had been well prepared and the discussion was of interest to the many tax payers present. The argument did not wholly pertain to the right of the Supervisor to tax land for more than its cash value, although nearly all believed he would not be justifiable in doing so. But how shall assessments be made more equal? All believed that land should be assessed for just what it would bring if sold. Another argument was that the land owners should strive to elect a Supervisor who would work for their interest more than many officers do. It was a discussion that brought out many views on the tax question, but however argued would not diminish the burden of taxes of the past year one cent.

The club will hold the next meeting at Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Bowens, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 14, Program:

Essay—Mrs. O. P. Remington.
Dec.—Delmar Finch.
Select Reading—Mrs. Bowen.
Dec.—Clare Gillespie.
Music—Bowen brothers.
—Question—What financial question would be the most beneficial to the farmer? Opened by Philip Kehoe.

Silver Mile Post.

In spite of roads and weather, about 85 relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome F. N. Bowen last Saturday evening, Dec. 28, for the purpose of helping them celebrate the 25th anniversary of their marriage, and they succeeded right royally, showering favors and congratulations in profusion upon the bride and groom of a quarter century ago. Light refreshments were served and a general good, social evening spent. Among the many beautiful and useful presents was one which attracted attention. It was a solid silver table spoon which belonged to Mrs. Bowen's grandparents and upon it were graven the figures "1830." Present from abroad were Mrs. C. F. Mather, Mason; C. E. Lovett and daughter, Adah, Owosso; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Greenamyer, Mrs. R. S. Brewster and children, Mrs. Will Armstrong and children, Coldwater; Mrs. H. E. Young, North Adams; Mrs. F. P. Zellers and daughter, Myrtelle, Jackson; Prof. Elbert Bradner, Hudson, Ind.

An Interesting Announcement.

We have secured for the exclusive use of the HERALD a series of articles on the Sandwich Islands by the distinguished historian and novelist, John R. Musick. These articles are being prepared by the author on on the spot. He is now at Honolulu, and will visit each of the islands of the Hawaiian group. They will have the peculiar freshness that can only be given to such when written at the place on the very days the writer beholds them. They will be a series of descriptive and historical articles, or letters about that country. Mr. Musick will furnish us, therefore, articles rich in descriptive scenery, filled with authentic history and facts, and lightened by incidents of travel and adventure, making them more fascinating than a novel.

No portion of the world is to-day attracting more attention than the Sandwich Islands; and yet, much as they are talked about and as much as they have been mixed in American politics for the last forty years, the masses of readers know but little of the social life and customs of the Islanders, and could not tell off-hand whether they lived in modern houses, in huts, wigwams, or caves.

It will be the object of these letters not only to briefly sketch the past and present of the Hawaiian Islands, but to carry the reader directly into the private life of the people who inhabit them; their past and present government, the overthrow of monarchy, and the setting up of a Republic will be narrated from a non-political standpoint. In this respect they will have a peculiar interest because in the coming Presidential contest the question of annexation will be agitated. These letters will contain hundreds of items of great interest, all told in a highly entertaining, instructive and unbiased manner. In short, we have a rich treat for our readers for the entire winter.

We urge you to get your neighbors and friends elsewhere to subscribe for the HERALD. The articles alone will be worth much more than the subscription price of this paper. Then always remember these letters are exclusive; no other paper in this vicinity can furnish them. They are for the HERALD.

A Great Newspaper Combination

For the past 53 years, over half a century, The Michigan Farmer has been published, and it is the oldest regular agricultural journal under one name on this continent.

With largely increased capital and under new management that has had 9 years successful experience in agricultural journalism, this great paper is making rapid strides toward the top in the galaxy of agricultural literature of America. It is most beautifully printed on high grade paper, and employs the most eminent writers on the science and practice of Agriculture, Horticulture, Live Stock, Dairying, Apiary and Poultry. Has a standard veterinary department for free treatment of all diseases of farm animals. A legal and medical department. Contains all the agricultural news of the country and an invaluable literary and household department every week. Admits no swindling nor immoral advertisements. And is in fact in every way a great, sound, practical, entertaining live stock and family journal, that the agriculturists of Michigan may justly feel proud of, and subscribe for with satisfaction and profit. We are pleased to be able to announce that we can furnish to our subscribers the Michigan Farmer and the TECUMSEH HERALD both one year, making a total of 104 papers, for the low price of $1.60, certainly a bargain that should be liberally patronized. For free specimen copy send address to Michigan Farmer, Detroit, Mich.

Coin's Financial School.

This little book is one of the most extensive treatises on the money question that has ever been written. It shows up the evil effects of our present monetary system in a most emphatic manner. Every voter in Lenawee county, regardless of party affiliations, should read it. The Chicago Times says: "A book that will create a profound impression throughout the United States." The New York Recorder says: "It mercilessly scourges the money changers in the Temple of the Republic." The Chicago Inter-Ocean says: "This book tells its readers more about gold, silver and currency, generally, than any other publication we know of, and in a way that every man can fully comprehend." A supply is kept on hand at the HERALD office. Single copies 25 cents. Every new advance paying subscriber to the HERALD will receive a copy free. Now is your time to get good reading cheap. No one ever thought of introducing so expensive a feature as lithographic color work in the days when the leading magazines sold for $4.00 a year and 35 cents a copy. But times change, and the magazines change with them. It has remained for The Cosmopolitan, sold at one dollar a year, to put in an expensive lithographic plant capable of printing 320,000 pages per day (one color). The January issue presents as a frontispiece a water-color drawing by E. Io Pape, illustrating the last story by Robert Louis Stevenson, which has probably never been excelled even in the pages of the finest dollar French periodicals. The cover of The Cosmopolitan is also changed, a drawing of page length by the famous Paris artist Rossi, in lithographic colors on white paper takes the place of the manilla back with its red stripe. Hereafter the cover is to be a fresh surprise each month.

The We Nine girls constitute an organization chiefly known through its brilliant social functions which are carried on in a manner to give them considerable distinction in our midst. However, the youthful members seem to be ever mindful of the serious obligations which an association of this character should sustain in reference to those in our community who have been perhaps less fortunate than themselves. On several occasions have they fulfilled the letter and spirit of their motto. "Do those little kindnesses which are nearest at hand." This year they gave a very pretty Christmas tree laden with a goodly supply of useful presents to a number of needy hopefuls of our town at the home of Winnie DeWolf New Year's eve.

The pleasant home of Mathew Boyd, who has been living for the past few years on the Bidwell farm, was last Monday visited by death under circumstances which seem extremely sad. Mrs. Boyd had been ill for about three weeks though at no time considered dangerous. On Saturday last Mr. Boyd received a telegram announcing that his father, who lives at Genesee, N. Y., had sustained very serious injuries from a maddened steer having one eye almost completely gouged out. Mr. Boyd left at once and was with his father at Rochester when another message from Tecumseh announced the sudden death of his wife here. Leaving his father at the hospital he returned to Tecumseh, to bury the companion of his home, whom he had left with every assurance that his return would find her well. Mrs. Lottie Barber Boyd was 30 years old last October. She was born in Dansville, New York, where her parents now reside. At the time of her death she had been suffering about three weeks, but on Sunday seemed better and Monday morning made the assertion that the night's rest was the best she had had during her sickness. In less than an hour, however, she was seized with heart failure and expired almost immediately. The funeral was held this afternoon at the house Rev. Varner officiating.

Our safest counsellors, our wives, Harry Larwill. Remarks were also made by ex-Judge Pratt, of Hillsdale, and Howell, of Detroit. About 75 participated.

MICHIGAN JUDGES.

Grand Rapids, Dec. 27.—The state association of circuit judges opened its annual session Thursday afternoon with a large attendance. Judge William E. Groze, president of the association, in his annual address suggested that judges and not the sheriff should appoint the court crier; that better laws are needed for the protection of minor children in ex-parte divorce cases, and that the distinction between law and equity cases in court practice should be abolished on grounds of greater simplicity and economy. The afternoon and night were devoted to reading papers and discussions on judicial work, court practice and legal methods. Judge Donovan, of Detroit, suggested as a remedy for inordinate cross-examination that the court compel the lawyer to stand during its progress.

Judge Corbett, of Traverse City, admitted that the present jury system is far behind the times and that the day is past when knowledge or impressions of a criminal case gained from the newspapers should disqualify a juror. Judge McMahon, of Ludington, showed that the personality, character and bearing of the judge influenced the members of the bar, the juries and the communities in which they lived. Papers were read by Judge Ted B. Aldrich, Cadillac; Judge A. C. Maxwell, Bay City; Judge S. A. Daboll, St. Johns, and ex-Justice of the Supreme Court Benjamin F. Graves.

Grand Rapids, Dec 28.—The Association of Judges of Michigan Friday morning heard papers by Judge R. H. Person, of Lansing, and Dean H. B. Hutchins, of the state university, decided to meet next year at Detroit and elected as officers: President, S. B. Daboll, St. Johns; vice president, J. H. Palmer, Big Rapids; secretary and treasurer, Ted B. Aldrich, Cadillac. At night a banquet was served, with Judge John W. Champlin acting as toastmaster.

TEACHERS MEET.

Forty-Fifth Session of the State Association at Lansing.

Lansing, Dec. 27.—The 45th annual meeting of the Michigan State Teachers' association began Thursday afternoon at Representative hall. There were several hundred educators present from all over the state. In his annual address President E. C. Thompson, of Saginaw, said that revolutions are about to take place in matters and methods, and these will involve many minor details of school-room equipment and life. The world will learn, he said, that costly palaces in which thousands of children are gathered in closely-crowded, ill-ventilated school-rooms are not the most desirable for character building, but that numerous, cheap, but well-ventilated buildings, with large rooms and pure air, will serve the purpose better. The time is not far distant when the masterpieces of art will adorn the walls of our school-rooms. At night an address on "Some New Results of Child Study" was delivered by G. Stanley Hall, of Worcester, Mass., president of Clark university.

SEVEN FOR A QUARTER.

Detroit Council Accepts the Street Car Company's Offer.

Detroit, Dec. 31.—Tom L. Johnson Monday night offered through the common council to accept an ordinance giving seven tickets for 25 cents, good day and night, with transfers as on a straight five-cent fare. The ordinance was adopted by a vote of 20 to 9, there being only three absentees, two of whom favor the proposition, and one oppose it. One of the 20 so voted that he could move a reconsideration. Although this is the most generous offer ever made by the Citizens' Street Car company, and two years ago would have been quickly taken by the city, Mayor Pingree demands eight tickets for a quarter with transfers. It is believed that he will veto the ordinance, and that the friends of the measure cannot muster votes enough to pass it over his veto.

ELECT OFFICERS.

Fruit Growers of Michigan Decide to Hold Another Convention.

Grand Rapids, Dec. 30.—At the session of the joint convention of the fruit growers and horticultural societies of western Michigan Saturday, after several papers had been read and discussed, a resolution was adopted calling for a delegate convention to be held in this city before February 1, to discuss uniform fruit packages, better transportation facilities, better rates and other topics upon which united action is desirable. All horticultural societies in the state will be invited to send delegates, and representatives of the shipping lines and the basket manufacturers will also be invited to participate in the discussion. The West Michigan society Saturday afternoon elected as officers: President, Judge F. J. Russell, Hart; secretary, R. M. Kellogg, Ionia; vice presidents, E. H. Hunt, Saranac; D. W. Michigan Branch of the Order in a Healthy and Flourishing Condition.

Lansing, Dec. 31.—The seventh annual convention of the Michigan Knights of the Grip is attended by about 500 members. In his annual address the president, R. W. Jucklin, of Detroit, reported the affairs of the order to be in a flourishing condition. During the year there has been a net increase of 269 members, the total membership now being 1,818. Posts have been organized at Kalamazoo and Battle Creek during the past month. There were 18 deaths during the year and 12 death benefits, aggregating $6,000, have been paid. The general fund balance is $766.30 and that of the death fund $358.58. But two assessments have been levied this year, although the death loss was greater than any previous year. Monday night's banquet was a brilliant affair.

TREES LIKENED TO ANIMALS.

Fruit Grower Says They Have a High Degree of Intelligence.

Grand Rapids, Dec. 31.—R. M. Kellogg, of Ionia county, one of the most successful fruit growers in western Michigan, and secretary of the West Michigan Horticultural society, believes that a tree has its likes and dislikes; that it knows its friends and its enemies when they approach, and has a high degree of intelligence generally. He believes that trees are as alive to their surroundings as animals, and that their sensibilities must be touched to gain the best results. He has made a lifelong study of fruit trees and fruit growing. He exploited his theory at the joint convention of western Michigan horticultural societies in this city last week. His position was not controverted by any in attendance and many agreed with him.

SPLINTER CAUSES DEATH.

Detroit, Dec. 27.—Florence Mack, daughter of V. N. Mack, of No. 393 Trumbull avenue, aged 17 years, died Wednesday morning. The wound of a tiny splinter was the cause of her death, it having produced lockjaw. Last Saturday morning Miss Mack ran a small splinter under her thumb nail. It broke off, leaving but a quarter of an inch imbedded in the flesh. She was unable to remove it and was sent to the family physician, who removed the bit of wood and told her to poultice the thumb on returning home. She, however, disregarded the instruction. She was taken ill Sunday, and Monday became unconscious and remained so until her death occurred.

Aitken, the free silver republican congressman from the Sixth district, in letters to Lansing politicians announces himself as a candidate for governor before the republican state convention next summer. A SERIOUS CRIME.

It Is Charged Against Man and Wife by a Coroner's Jury.

Flint, Dec. 28.—The coroner's jury which has been investigating the death of Mrs. Hiram Latimer brought in a verdict Friday afternoon charging Mr and Mrs. John Latimer with having caused her death by administering some kind of poison. No warrant was sworn out for the arrest of the couple, however, and they are still at liberty.

Mrs. Latimer died at her residence in Thetford township December 13 under circumstances pointing to poisoning by arsenic. John Latimer and his wife testified that the old lady was naturally sickly and that they had only given her medicine left by a physician. They did not know until after her death, however, that she had deeded all her property to Edward Latimer, another son.

Edward testified that his mother had never been ill until John and his wife came to live at the house. After that time both his mother and himself were taken ill at times after eating food. He also had seen Mrs. John Latimer giving his mother some green powders, although the doctor swore he left only white powders to be given to the sick woman. His mother had expressed the belief to him that she was being poisoned.

A deputy sheriff was sent out to the Latimer home Friday to bring in the couple to testify again at the inquest. He found the house barricaded, but managed to break through a window. John Latimer was found under a bed rolled up in a blanket, while his wife was in another bed feigning sleep. They gave no explanation of their strange actions.

Lansing, Dec. 28.—Secretary of State Gardner has issued a census bulletin showing by age, civil condition, and as native and foreign born, the number of United States, confederate and Mexican soldiers, and by civil condition and as native and foreign born the number of United States sailors and marines in the state at the close of the last fiscal year. The bulletin states:

"Although the state of Michigan sent 97,000 soldiers to the civil war, there are 42,544 soldiers from all states now residing in the state. Of this number 34,946 are of native birth and 7,598 foreign born. The ages range from 40 to 95 years. Only 33 are of the lowest named age and only five are over 95 years of age. The largest number reported at any one age is 3,187, at 50 years. The average age is 57.07 years. Of the natives 1,762 are single men, 26,078 married, 2,772 widowed, 296 divorced, and for nine the civil condition is not reported. Of the foreign-born 155 are single, 6,057 married, 567 widowed, 89 divorced and for four the civil condition is not reported.

"The total number returned as sick or disabled is 6,165, which is 14.23 per cent., or about one in seven of the whole number.

"The number of confederate soldiers in the state is 148, and their average age is 57.41 years. The number of United States soldiers and marines is 350. Although no report of the soldiers of the Mexican war was required, yet the census enumerators report 41 on the date of the census. The average age is 72.34 years.

MUST GIVE UP EXCESS PAY.

Michigan State Officials Must Refund Those Illegal Salaries.

Lansing, Dec. 27.—By virtue of an opinion filed by the supreme court, the ex-state officials who drew increased salaries under the fraudulent constitutional amendments of 1891 and 1893 will have to pay back the excess. Ex-Attorney General Ellis drew an excess of $5,200 and ex-Commissioner of the Land Office Berry and ex-Lieut. Gov. Giddings $800 each. The court says the board of state auditors has no authority to settle or compromise the claim and denies the order asked for by Ellis to compel them to do so. Ex-Attorney General Ellis has concluded after reading the opinion to give up the fight to retain the money paid him by the state under the fraudulent salaries amendment, and has deposited with the auditor general a certificate for the amount, $5,218.

KILLS HIMSELF.

John Sullivan Finds Clothing Four Children a Heavy Burden.

Grand Rapids, Dec. 30.—John Sullivan, a farmer living a mile south of Grandville, committed suicide by taking aconite. He was about 50 years of age, and until six months ago was a bachelor and very saving of his money. He married a widow with four children, and to buy shoes and clothing for the children broke his heart. He had many quarrels with his wife, and Saturday she declared she would commit suicide. He said if anybody died he would be the one. Sunday morning he took enough aconite to kill a horse and lay down to die. The drug did not work as rapidly as he expected, and getting up he went to the barn and did his chores, and then returning again lay down, and two hours later was dead.

Decides Morgan vs. Eames Case.

Kalamazoo, Dec. 28.—Judge Buck, of the Kalamazoo circuit court, decided in favor of the defendants in the ejectment case of the executors of the estate of Lucy W. S. Morgan vs. Wilfred Eames. This case is one of several pending in Detroit and in Watertown (N. Y.) courts and involving an estate of $2,000,000. Frauds are alleged in the settlement of the estate.

Failure of a Bank.

Ewen, Dec. 27. The Exchange bank has failed. Its liabilities are estimated at $10,000, with about $5,000 assets. Cashier Gardner says the failure was due to hard times. Village funds are involved in the failure.

Will Try for Gold.

Ishpeming, Dec. 28.—Peter Gingrass, owner of the land on which the once noted Michigan gold mine was located, has set up a small mill on the property and will reopen the mine.

Pennock Discharged.

Contract Let for a Memorial Stone to Michigan's War Executive.

Jackson, Dec. 26.—Gen. R. A. Alger, of Detroit, and Dwight S. Smith and Gen. W. H. Withington, of this city, comprising the Blair memorial commission, appointed by Gov. Rich last spring to contract for a memorial statue to Austin Blair, Michigan's war governor, closed the contract Saturday with sculptor Potter, of Enfield, Mass., for the work. Sig. Goetano Trentanove, of Milwaukee, was the other competitor. The statue is to be placed in the capitol grounds at Lansing within a year, and $10,000 is the amount of the appropriation made.

Killed by a Brass Doorkey.

Niles, Dec. 28.—Daniel Haggart, a resident of Pawpaw, died recently from causes which the doctors were unable to explain. Before his death in a delirium Haggart said he had swallowed a large brass door key. The doctors held a post mortem examination, and sure enough a brass key was found in his stomach. The poison produced by corrosion of the key caused death.

Post Office Robbed.

Adrian, Dec. 26.—The post office at Jasper, a village eight miles south on the Fuyette branch of the Lake Shore road, was robbed of all mail, registered matter, stamps and supplies. The office was in a small store and contained no safe. Postmaster Goodsell cannot tell the amount of the loss.

Committed Suicide.

Menominee, Dec. 30.—Martin Haines, one of the oldest stationary engineers of Menominee, committed suicide early Saturday morning by hanging himself in an outhouse. An approaching surgical operation for a cancer is supposed to have induced the act.

Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Hearne are on trial at Bowling Green, Ky., for the alleged murder of Mrs. Hearne's former husband, Amos J. Stillwell, seven years ago.

Lost his Position. That really happened to a certain grocer's clerk, because he couldn't induce customers to take an inferior brand of washing powder in place of Pearline. The grocer said, "If you can't sell what I want you to sell, I don't want you." Now it doesn't take a very wise woman to decide whether this was an honest grocer. And a woman wise enough for that, would be likely to insist upon having nothing but Pearline. There is nothing "as good as" or "the same as" Pearline, the original—in fact, the only washing-compound. If they send you something else, send it back. 397 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

"Two years ago, I had the grippe, and it left me with a cough which gave me no rest night or day. My family physician prescribed for me, changing the medicine as often as he found the things I had taken were not helping me, but, in spite of his attendance, I got no better. Finally, my husband,—reading one day of a gentleman who had had the grippe and was cured by taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,—procured, for me, a bottle of this medicine, and before I had taken half of it, I was cured. I have used the Pectoral for my children and in my family, whenever we have needed it, and have found it a specific for colds, coughs, and lung troubles."—EMILY WOOD, North St., Elkton, Md.

Health and strength carry us through dangers and make us safe in the presence of peril. Disease germs do no harm in a healthy body. A germ is not a big thing, and it is only physical weakness that makes it dangerous. A perfectly strong man with rich, pure blood, has nothing to fear from germs. He may breathe in the bacilli of consumption with impunity. Nature is continually working to throw off any impurities that may come into the body, but if there is a weak spot where the germs may find an entrance to the tissues, then the trouble begins. Disease germs propagate with lightning-like rapidity. Once in the blood, they quickly fill the whole body. The only way to get rid of them is to kill them. This is what Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is for. It purifies the blood. That means that it kills the germs, but that is only part of what it does. It assists in the digestion of food and puts the digestive organs in a perfect condition. It stimulates the secretion of digestive fluids, so promoting assimilation and nutrition. It fills the blood full of healthy red corpuscles. It purifies and enriches every drop of blood in the whole body and so supplies the tissues with the food they need. It builds up strong, healthy flesh and puts the whole body into a disease-resisting state.

Nine-tenths of all human ailments come from the same cause—impurity in the blood. Take almost any disease you please and trace the cause of it—you will find it in the blood. Purify and enrich the blood and you remove the cause, and so you cure the disease inevitably and infallibly. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures all diseases depending upon poor, impoverished, thin, impure blood.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Jan. 5. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, Resolution and Prayer.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Eph. iv, 13.

"I will earnestly seek for myself and do what I can to help others attain the highest New Testament standard of experience and life." This is the first part of our Epworth League pledge. This is the definite aim of our society. At the opening of the new year it is desirable to set clearly before all minds this purpose. In the meetings of the chapter for business, in the social and literary work, as well as in mercy and help and devotional services, let the clear thought be higher attainments in Christian living. This will not necessarily mean more meetings and longer ones, more speeches and songs, but it will mean more careful thinking, more promptness and willingness in all work, more joyfulness of heart and kindness of speech. It will specially mean more frequent, longer and more earnest study of the word of God, that the mind of the Spirit may be known. How can one hope to attain to a standard which is not clearly known? How can one expect to know what New Testament piety really is unless the New Testament is faithfully studied to discover its standard? Study the chart if you would know how to lay your course through the reefs, shoals and sand bars of life safely into port.

The Mother of Methodism.

Few women have had greater influence upon the destinies of mankind than Mrs. Susannah Wesley. This was not due to her social position in any large measure. It was not the result of wealth or eminent intellectual talent, but almost wholly from sound practical piety and uncommon good sense. Her field was her home. She was faithful to God in training her children, and in consequence was blessed in them. But for the Epworth home there would have been no John Wesley for Methodism and the church of God. But for Susannah Wesley there would have been no Epworth home. Let the League study her life and discover the secret of its power in her acquaintance and life with Christ.

Your Measurements.

Much attention is given at the present time to physical development. Trained teachers are employed in our public schools for this purpose. They find no two persons exactly alike in the proportions of various parts of their bodies. Careful comparison of the measurements of several thousand persons of various ages has resulted in the preparation of a table showing the average height, weight and proportions of people at different ages. When any one goes to a physical instructor now for examination, a chart of his condition is made showing how he compares with the average man. This is of value in telling at a glance where deficiencies lie and what parts need special care to bring the whole system to harmonious development.

In spiritual matters we have a better system adapted to practical use. The chart of the ideal man is before us in the Bible. Examples of all kinds of deficiencies are cited and explained. Directions for self measurement are given. It is our business individually to "size up" ourselves. It is fatal to deceive ourselves as to our condition or position. Let each one examine himself on all points of Christian character. Discover the points of overdevelopment and correct them. Learn the deficiencies of your life and round them out to fullness. If you are troubled with weakness of heart or knees, with shortsightedness, with slow footedness, with incipient paralysis of the pocket nerve, study your case on the New Testament chart and practice in the school of Christ.

Remember our goal: "Till we attain unto the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a full grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

The Pattern.

In all making of things an ideal must first be had, a vision of the thing to be. This must then be given a material existence, embodied. Then copies can be multiplied indefinitely. So with men. The Divine ideal, the vision of the Man, was not adequately set forth in the first person of the human race who appeared in time, but only in Him who is the first man in eminence and worthiness. The anointed one of God, the Divine Man, Jesus of Nazareth, alone of all the race adequately displays the eternal thought of humanity, God's purpose in the creation of man. He is the type, the model, the "full grown" specimen Man. The New Testament standard of experience and life is not found in Peter, Paul or John, but in Jesus. Entire sanctification is not to be after the Pauline, or Johannean style, but after the manner of Jesus Christ. "Unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ"—that is the goal of all striving. Fix your eyes upon Jesus.

Vanity is the talent of failures. The great step is out of self. He who can be little will be great. He who can bear to be nobody will be somebody.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The Proceedings of the First Session.

The senate on the 24th repealed the proscriptive disabilities bill passed at the close of the war against the services of ex-confederates in the United States army and navy. A resolution was introduced to coin the silver in the treasury and another urging the Latin-American union, in which all the republics of the western hemisphere would make common cause against European encroachments.... In the house a bill was introduced providing for a duty on certain grades of sugar.

There was no session of the senate on the 26th.... In the house a revenue bill was passed, the operation of which is limited to 2½ years, and which is designed to raise $40,000,000 for the relief of the treasury. The vote was yeas, 205; nays, 81, and was on strictly party lines, the populists voting with the democrats against the bill.

The tariff bill was received in the senate on the 27th and referred to the finance committee after a long debate. Mr. Quay (Pa.) introduced a bill to increase the duty on leaf tobacco. Mr. Hill (N. Y.) introduced a resolution providing that any bonds hereafter issued may, in the discretion of the secretary of the treasury, be made payable in United States gold coin or in standard silver dollars, at the option of the holders. Without action the senate adjourned to the 30th.... In the house Mr. Barrett (Mass.) introduced a joint resolution authorizing the president to arrange a conference between the United States and nations possessing territory on the American continent for the settlement of boundary disputes. The bond bill was discussed, but no action was taken.

The senate was not in session on the 28th.... In the house the bond bill was passed by a vote of 170 to 136. The measure permits the issue of three per cent. coin bonds redeemable after five years at the pleasure of the government and payable in 15 years, with the specific proviso that nothing in the bill shall be construed to repeal the act of 1878, for the reissue of the greenbacks, and that the bonds shall first be offered for subscription at the subtreasuries and depositories of the United States. Adjourned to the 31st.

Traveling In Kashmir.

Our conveyances were brought around, and we looked at them with some astonishment. There were two horses for my husband, and for myself and my little daughter were two of the state jampans, such as the court ladies would travel in. They were about the size and shape of a small boat, but most dreadfully heavy and cumbrous. They were ornamented with a great deal of wood carving gilding and vermillion. A canopy covered the top, supported on poles, and between these were curtains of crimson gauze embroidered with gold stars. The inside was lined with white velvet stamped with colored flowers, and there were more cushions than I knew what to do with. Four men carried each, and four more ran beside to relieve them. It was none too many. The weight was enormous, and all the comfort might have been secured with one-third of the material used. It seemed a shame to grumble, as everything was provided at the expense of the state, but I did pity those unfortunate bearers toward the end of our 18 mile march. Eighteen miles seemed nothing after the 60 miles we had accomplished the day before. But such an 18 miles!—Cornhill Magazine

A True Ghost Story.

Here is a true story: The wife of a gentleman living in New Mexico lay dying in Philadelphia, but the fact was not known by the family at home. During the night a ghost—that is as good a name for it as any other—appeared at the bedside of the favorite servant and nurse, woke her and whispered, "Teresa, be good to my children!" The nurse was frightened and woke the household. She told her story, but the husband laughed at her, declaring that his wife was well and that Teresa had had a nightmare. Then, in the morning, at about 8 o'clock, a telegram came, announcing the fact that the wife had unexpectedly died the night before. Queer world we are living in, isn't it? Now, if you deny the statement and a million or two other statements of the same kind, why that is one thing, and you wouldn't be complimented by my opinion of your judgment. And if you don't deny the statement how do you account for the occurrence? What really happened, and why did it happen in just that way? Think about it for a few months.—New York Herald.

Two of Lincoln's Kind Acts.

Among the wounded Bull Run prisoners returning from Richmond after many weary months in Libby was a lad named Will Upham of the Second Wisconsin infantry. This boy found his way into the presence of Lincoln, who sympathetically drew from him the story of his adventures in battle and in prison and sent him away with an appointment to West Point, from which academy Upham was subsequently graduated with honors. Recently this protege of Lincoln was chosen governor of Wisconsin. One day Lincoln was found counting over and dividing into parcels a small sum in greenbacks for a negro messenger in the treasury department who was in the hospital with the smallpox, unable to sign the roll and draw his pay. The president of the United States cheerfully undertook to cut the gordian knot of red tape, procure the poor man's wages and make the desired disposition thereof.—Leslie J. Perry in Century.

Cromwell's Head.

A correspondent writes: "It may come as a surprise to many to learn that Cromwell's head, in, under the circumstances, a fine state of preservation, is at the present time in the possession of a gentleman who resides in Kent. The head was lately shown to Mr. Hamo Thornycroft, who is executing the bust of the Protector, which has been subscribed for by the ex-premier and others, and the sculptor, it is said, entertains no doubt whatever as to its genuineness. A study of the head has afforded Mr. Thornycroft material assistance, though one of the casts—of which there are several in existence—taken almost immediately after death, has probably been a safer basis in the execution of the work. The hair on the head, which is of a red, or rather auburn, color, is in perfect preservation, and so is the short beard."—St. James Gazette.

Waited For "Amen."

The dog of a clergyman in Yorkshire had certain religious instincts, and when he saw the books brought out for evening prayer retired to his corner. One evening they were brought out while he was gnawing a bone. Instinctively he dropped it and withdrew. The cat, being a pagan and carnivorous, took possession of the bone. The dog glowered at her, but budged not an inch. Scarcely had the last "amen" sounded when he made one spring. The fate of that cat I have not words to describe.—London Spectator.

A Spider Goes A-fishing.

Professor Berg, at Buenos Ayres, has made the discovery of a spider that catches fish at certain seasons of the year. In a shallow part of the stream it weaves between the stones a double sided or funnel shaped net, into which, running upon the water, it drives little tadpoles, those well known fishlike larvæ of the frog. The shriveled husks or skins of these creatures, which lie strewn in great numbers about the spider's snare, show plainly that it thoroughly understands its business.—Buntes Allerlei.

Kindness.

Kindness are the common shelter of the hard hearted, the false, and the impotent when called upon to assist; the real great alone give instantaneous help, even when their looks presage difficulties.—Lavater.

A Welsh Name.

A shepherd at Chambery, Savoy, employs a horse instead of a dog to keep the herd together. The horse understands the orders given him, and executes them just as intelligently as the best trained dog.

The Lenawee county teachers' institute held at Adrian was rather poorly attended on account of the weather, but much interest was manifested.

The Ann Arbor Argus indulged in the following inexcusable style of paragraphing: "A young son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Young, of Chelsea."

Adrian papers are congratulating themselves on having discovered signs which point unmistakably to a consolidation of the Lake Shore shops in that city. Hope it may be so.

Prerident Walter H. Mumby of the state base ball league, in an interview at Lansing, recently, expressed the opinion that a first class league would soon be organized for the coming season.

Peter Dusbiber, of Ypsilanti, fed the ends of a couple of fingers to a sausage machine the other day, and there be those in the city who insensibly may commit the crime of cannibalism.—Monroe Democrat.

The Lake Shore will put on a special theater train to be run between Adrian and Toledo, the first trip taking place tomorrow night on account of the presentation of "Palmer Cox's Brownies" at the new theater there.

A mathematician has made a computation by which he shows that the item of chewing gum costs this country $20,000,000 a year. The poor statistican was consigned to an asylum when only fairly started on an estimate for tobacco

They were so old fashioned at Dexter that they hung up stockings Christmas. At Ypsi. they hung up bloomers at the normal, and at Chelsea they hung up their suspendors. The editors, as usual, had so much "hung up" that they didn't have a pair of socks left.—Ann Arbor Argus.

A local bank today, acting on the suggestion of the Detroit clearing house, refused to cash express orders at par, recognizing them as personal checks, and demanding the customary fee of exchange. Other banks will probably follow the example. The express order business has assumed enormous proportions, and the banks are now going to demand what they consider a just portion of the revenue.—Adrian Times.

That Brice intends to make the C. J. & M. his strongest line is evident by another deal which Receiver and General Manager Drake closed Thursday, by which the C. J. & M. will have the use of the Cincinnati, Lebanon and Northern terminals. This is in addition to the use of the B. & O. Southwestern terminals, which were secured some time ago, and gives the C. J. & M. better facilities for handling busines out of Cincinnati than any other northern line. The B. & O. Southwestern and C. L. & N. lets the C. J. & M. into lumber districts, while the B. & O. Southwestern puts it in touch with every important industry in the Mill Creek Valley.—Telegram.

A frame residence erected by M. E. Lamkin, in Raisin, last fall, burned to the ground early last evening. The family was sitting around the fire popping corn about 7:30, when smoke was seen issuing from the dining room. Going outside, Mr. Lamkin saw flames breaking through the roof near the chimney. Neighbors came to his assistance, and after active operations apparently succeeded in putting out the fire. It broke out again, however, this time with a fury that could not be checked. Part of the contents were saved. The house was insured for $1,000, and valued at $1,400. The insurance on the contents was $500. Mr. Lamkin lost a house last May. He exhibits phonographs at fairs and other gatherings. It is understood his instrument was destroyed.—Adrian Times.

A concert company giving themselves out as representing the aesthetic taste of the Normal Conservatory of Music gave a concert at Saline recently. The basso profundo did not know a key from a Yale lock, the tener couldn't sing "Oft in the stilly Night" and make it sound different from "My Lover's a Soldier Bold" and the "I Dreamed I Dwelt in Marble Halls" of the soprano, threw even a Saline audience into the throes of distractions. The Observer "roasted" the company and the "roast" came to the eye of Prof. Pease. He became a pea green color from wrath at once, wrote the Observer that nobody had been authorized to appear at Saline or anywhere else as the original, all wool and a yard wide, name blown in bottle Conservatory of music quartette, and immediately set to work to bring things to a more harmonious finale at Saline. He found that the quartette were all ex-students but one and that one sung the Doxology and was at once dismissed from school.—Ann Arbor Argus.

A parasite has been discovered in Washtenaw county which feeds on potatoes, eating the whole inside of the tuber, leaving only the shell. If we had a government railroad to haul the potatoes which are freezing and rotting in many states—a complete waste—we could find poor human parasites in our great cities who would eat them, skins and all.

Circuit court opened this morning and the case of George C. Stearns vs. the L. S. & M. S. R. R. Co., came up for trial. Mr. Stearns lives at Jackson, and was a baggage man on the Lake Shore railroad, having the run between Adrian and Jackson. He was discharged some time ago, and brings suit for $10,000 damages, alleging that because of injuries received in the line of duty, the railroad company agreed to give him employment as baggageman on the Jackson branch, but failed to do so. The plaintiff is represented by Watts, Bean and Smith, and the interests of the railroad are looked after by Hon. C. E. Weaver, attorney for the company, which defends on the ground that no such agreement as claimed by Stearns was ever made.—Adrian Telegram.

Mr. Stearns ran on this branch for many years and is well known to many Tecumseh people.

Here is a bit of advice to people outside of Michigan, taken from the Monroe Democrat, which may be of use to some living within the state under some circumstances:

The removal of President Gorton of the Agricultural College has started up a lot of old fellows who sat dozing by their backwoods and sagebrush firesides, put oil in their joints and elasticity in their muscles and set them on a full run from the frontiers toward Lansing. The number of reminiscences that have been jarred out of the crypts of antiquity by Gorton's summary dismissal is astonishing. They come forth like Lazarus, in their burial clothes, bearing a graveyard smell which they hope will pass in the nostrils of the agricultural board, for the aroma of stable manure or, "Homestead phosphate;" and on this "letter of credit" they hope to lay truth in the lie; for truth points to them as moss grown mummies of the "bull plow" period. Kansas, Nebraska and even New Mexico has each a candidate. They come from their wintering quarters with the ground owl and the coyote and think they know how to run the Michigan Agricultural College. Out with the herd. Can such cattle come to this state and receive honor and preference over our native university breed? Out on them! Let them be started southwest in charge of a cow-boy or railroaded back by a stock train! Avaunt, brindles!

Cheap Metropolitan Papers.

There is no excuse nowadays for a citizen failing to subscribe for a great metropolitan newspaper in addition to taking his own county paper. The "Twice-a-Week" Republic of St. Louis, which is credited with the largest circulation of any weekly paper, is only $1 a year, and for this sum it sends two papers a week, or 104 papers a year—less than one cent each. The weekly contains the best and brightest news condensed from the daily paper, together with a well assorted collection of reading matter and useful information. A popular feature of its columns next year will be the speeches of prominent men in the presidential campaign. These will be given almost in full. A reader of the Twice-a-Week Republic will always be abreast of the times, for no paper has greater news gathering facilities. The Daily and Sunday Republic can now be had by mail for a little more than one cent and a half a day, or $6 a year, when paid in advance. Though this paper has greatly reduced its price, it has increased its value twofold by adding many valuable features.

Table Talk.

Kate Douglas Wiggin has written an excellent article for the January issue of Table Talk, on Shall our Daughters Study Kindergarten, and it is followed by the usual departments so helpful to housekeepers and home-makers alike. Besides the many good recipes to be found in its pages, an article on Market News will be most useful to all who are not sure of the best piece of meat to buy for certain dishes, and menus are also given for every day in the month. Twelfth Day and its entertainments; Nursery Hygiene, Wedding Fads and Fancies, Lace and Its History, Father Time's Reception,—one suitable to New Year's Day, the latest fashions of the day, etc., are dealt with. If you do not know this little magazine, avail yourselves of the liberal offer made to our readers, which is that a sample copy will be sent free to anyone addressing Table Talk Publishing Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Always Beneficial.

"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla every spring for the past eight or nine years as a tonic and blood purifier and it has proved highly satisfactory. I have demonstrated its value not only in my own case, but in its effect on my wife and children. They also use it with very beneficial results. I regard it as the best blood purifier that I have ever used in my family, and I always make a point of taking a few bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the spring." Edwin C. OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 3, '96.

Has John Sherman enlisted under President Cleveland's greenback retirement banner? That question has been asked a great many times since Senator Sherman introduced a resolution which, after denouncing the democratic congress for reducing the receipts of the government below the amount needed for its expenses, says that greenbacks presented for redemption in gold shall not be reissued except for gold. Senator Sherman made a speech in favor of that resolution today. He, of course, denies that the intention is to provide for the retirement of the greenbacks, which he says he is opposed to, and claims that it would not result in their retirement, because the knowledge that they would be retired if presented for redemption will prevent their being presented. That argument is by no means convincing to those who refuse to accept Mr. Sherman as a financial Solomon. The prediction is made that if Mr. Sherman's resolution is ever reported back to the Senate from the Finance committee, to which it will be sent, it will be so amended as to provide for the issue of silver certificates to the value of the greenbacks redeemed. In that shape it might be adopted by the Senate; as it is now it could not be.

There is much feeling in Congress concerning the manner in which President Cleveland, while supposed to be awaiting relief from Congress in answer to his special message which kept Congress in session during the holidays, has gone right ahead and made a deal with a syndicate of bankers for an issue of bonds. Many Congressmen—some of them men who have heretofore stuck to Mr. Cleveland through thick and thin—think the President has shown unjustifiable disrespect for the legislative branch of the government, in assuming that it would not do as much to protect the credit of the government as he would, and some have not hesitated to express the opinion that he did not want Congress to act, because he preferred to sell more bonds, and that his special message was sent in so he could put the blame for the bond issue on Congress. One result of this feeling is a resolution offered by Senator Elkins, of W. Va., declaring it to be the sense of the Senate that no U. S. bonds should be sold at private sale or by private contract but that they should be advertised and sold to the highest bidder. There are men in Congress who would defend Mr. Cleveland and the administration, if they were sufficiently in the President's confidence to know how to do it, but it is a notorious fact that leading democrats in both House and Senate often get their first intimation of the administration's intentions from republicans. The result is that Senator Hill, who is virtually a free lance in the Senate, although a democrat at home, has said more in his defense of the administration at the present session of Congress than any other man in either House or Senate, and it is well known that he isn't even an official visitor to the White House.

The House took a holiday this week although it held nominal sessions Tuesday and Friday. The Senate has been in session every day except Wednesday and Thursday, but with the exception the transfer of the control of its committees from the democrats to the republicans it has accomplished little although steps have been taken in several directions that may lead to important things.

The Senate Finance committee which took up the tariff bill, passed the House, as soon as its reorganization was completed, is expected to report that measure back to the Senate immediately. Then a fight will begin which may be long or short according to circumstances. The general belief is that the tariff bill will pass in some shape. Then the bond bill, also in the hands of the Financial committee, will have a turn.

Senator Lodge, of Mass., is not usually classed as a conservative upon any question, but by general consent the closing words of his speech on the Monroe doctrine have been accepted as a conservative statement of the position which the United States now occupies and which it will continue to occupy. He said: "I believe that this question will be peaceably settled by the good sense of the representatives of England and U. S., but I am very clear that such a settlement can only be reached by action on the part of Congress and of the President, which shall be as firm as it is temperate, and which shall maintain the Monroe doctrine absolutely and at all hazards wherever it justly applies. That doctrine is as important to us as the balance of power is to Europe, and those who maintain the latter must not attempt to break down the principle which guards the integrity of the Americans and protects them from the interference and control of foreign powers." There is very little talk of war in Congress this week; everybody is now talking peace.

THE HERALD FOR 1896.

The HERALD will enter the coming year prepared to meet all requirements upon it—to tide over the close times, if such shall be its destiny, or to make hay while the sun shines, if the opportunity shall be offered. In any event, therefore, its weekly visits will be continued during 1896, as they have been for over forty-five years. The character of the paper will be substantially the same as heretofore. First and foremost, it will fill the bill as a first-class local newspaper, giving such additional matter as seems to be most satisfactory to a majority of its patrons. It will not be the organ of any party, sect or clique, but will be independent in all things, and it will never shrink from expressing its honest convictions on all subjects, whenever occasion seems to demand it. Our rates have been placed upon a hard pan basis for '96, and we offer a very few extra combinations for those who regard them with favor; and we take pride in the fact that though they are few in number they are greater bargains than ever before offered in this paper. By special arrangements and liberal advertising we have procured two articles we will give our subscribers the full benefit of. They are articles which should be in every home. The latest and best map of Michigan ever printed, and the latest and most complete History of our own country ever written in one volume and by the greatest living historian, of America.

We print in part the most favorable club list ever presented in these columns and any periodicals not mentioned here will be procured at the lowest price. Here are the two combination offers in detail.

NUMBER ONE.

Everyone knows something about the great map publishing firm of Rand, McNally & Co. Their atlases and wall maps have gained a world-wide reputation. Their new state map of Michigan is the best one ever issued. It is 41 by 58 inches in size, full mounted with rollers, showing all organized townships, beautifully colored, and sells for $2.00. The former price was $3.00. This map can be furnished at the remarkably low price of $1.40, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included.

NUMBER TWO.

The People's History of the United States has just been issued by the noted author and historian, John Clark Ridpath, L.L.D. It is the very best history of the United States now extant, comprised within the limits of a single volume. The cloth bound edition is sold only by subscription at $3.75 per copy. We can furnish this great work at only $2.10 per copy, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included. This is an unprecedented offer.

THE DETROIT TRIBUNE.

The Detroit Tribune has long been recognized as one of the greatest newspapers of the Republican party, not only in this state but throughout the west. Although the Tribune has long enjoyed this distinction, it is safe to say that within the last two years its management has greatly raised the standard of the publication as a political, literary, and general newspaper. The Tribune should be read in every household of Michigan. We have made a special arrangement with the management whereby we can furnish the weekly Tribune and HERALD one year for the normal figure of $1.80.

TOO MUCH WORK

For a Healthy Existence—That's Why the Kidneys so often Fail

Nature has provided a certain amount of work for every organ of the human body overtax them and disease eventually follows. There is not one portion of our organism that is so overworked as the kidneys; on them is placed the important function of filtering the blood of the impurities which naturally form in the regular action of life and digestion. The kidneys are consequently termed the sewerage of the system; clog up this sewer, and the blood becomes tainted with poisonous uric acid, which brings on disease in many forms. The back is the first to show this stoppage. From there comes the warning note; it should be heeded, and the kidneys receive prompt attention. Doan's Kidney Pills will right the action of the kidneys quickly, relieve the back of pains and aches, and cure all troubles of kidneys and bladder. Read the following:

Mr. Wm. Nelson is a well-known business man of Kalamazoo, he resides at 822 Portage Street, and his business is that of a grain buyer. He says:

"For five years I have suffered from an inability to urinate, which resulted from what was said to be a stoppage of the bladder. During these years I have taken mineral and electric baths and used other means in expectancy of getting better, but they all proved unavailing. Some months ago I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I had heard highly recommended, and I can now say that the flattering reports were not greater than they deserved. I got better right along, and I am free from any trouble now. I feel better than I have done for three years past. If Doan's Kidney Pills were well known all over they would do an immense amount of good."

Sold by all dealers—price, 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no other.

Medical Writers.

The best medical writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will, by its own action, reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh during the past few years proves that only one remedy has met these conditions, and that is Century Catarrh Cure. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has, ever done, and both physicians and surgeons concede this fact. The most distressing symptoms yield to it. For sale by C. A. No mystery about it. When the Shakers offered some time ago to give away a bottle of their Digestive Cordial to any one who might call at their New York office, there was a great rush and a great many people thought they were crazy. Subsequent events prove it to have been a very clever advertising transaction, for although they gave away thousands of bottles, it was in the end profitable; nearly every one that took a free bottle came back for more and paid for it with pleasure, saying they had derived better results from its use than from any other medicine they had ever used. There is nothing so uniformly successful in the treatment of stomach troubles as the Shaker Digestive Cordial, and what is better than all it relieves at once.

Hood's Is Wonderful.

No less than wonderful are the cures accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla, even after other preparations and physicians' prescriptions have failed. The reason, however, is simple. When the blood is enriched and purified, disease disappears and good health returns, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the one true blood purifier.

Two Years for $4.50

Scribner's Magazine costs $3 00 a year, but new subscribers can have all the numbers for 1895 and a year's subscription for 1896 for $4.50;

Scribner's Magazine is going to be better next year than ever. It is going to have new features. Its publishers are not satisfied with past successes. It proposes to more thoroughly deserve the confidence of the reading public.

The History Serial—Last Quarter Century in the United States—will be continued. Just now it is approaching a period of absorbing interest to the present generation—the first administration of President Cleveland.

Scribner's Magazine ought to get careful consideration as a Christmas gift. The $4.50 offer ought to get double consideration.

Ezra Sink is reported seriously ill and several others are just recovering from the effects of too violent laughing over the peculiar antics of Jack Brady and the steer. In fact Jack was the only man who did his full duty and escaped uninjured. His path of duty was rough and rugged, with only the misguided steer to mark the way, but Jack hung on like a true hero of the plains and was rewarded with the venison. Talk about the lives of a cat, but that bovine had five and some to spare.

The Thanksgiving party given by the young men of Britton was indeed a very pleasant affair, but since that time Leap Year has made it possible for the young ladies to try their hand and it is no discredit to their sterner companions to say that the fair ones rather outdid them. The occasion was a return New Year's party given by our young ladies to their attentive admirers of the last three years. The party was given in the K. O. T. M. hall where the guests were beguiled with games and other social features of which it may be said the fair entertainers, with their pretty toilets and charming gallantry, formed the most attractive part. But fair gallantry was fully equalled by fair policy when the ladies gave the boys a pointer on getting upsuppers for the next four years. The banquet was held in the dining dall of the Exelby House which was beautifully decorated for the occasion and the menu, served in several courses, was an acknowledged compliment not only to the good taste of the ladies but also to the caterers, Mr. and Mrs. Bannister. Perhaps the prettiest feature of the occasion consisted of the favors which were artistic, tasty and beautiful and will long be cherished by the fortunate participants in Britton's most successful and swell party. Miss Chris Shaler, of Detroit, Miss Jennie Underwood, of Adrian and Miss Hardy, of Ypsilanti, were guests from abroad.

Always "On Top."

Readers of newspapers during the past year or more could hardly fail to notice the published statements of leading druggists in various parts of the country concerning their sales of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It was a matter of general comment among the dealers when Hood's Sarsaparilla was first placed upon the market and rapidly pushed itself to the front among medicines. It is even more noteworthy that it has steadily maintained its position "on top," and that its sales continue to be the largest in the world.

But the same mails that bring in the statements of druggists that Hood's Sarsaparilla is outselling all other blood medicines, are also laden with testimonials from people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla and have found in it a cure for their diseases and permanent relief from suffering. The great sales of Hood's Sarsaparilla are due to its great cures.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cures disease by making pure, rich, healthy blood. It cures a great variety of diseases because a great variety of diseases are caused by impure and impoverished blood. It cures completely and permanently because it removes the cause of the trouble so that there no longer remains any reason for the suffering. It cures scrofula, rheumatism, catarrh, dyspepsia, biliousness, kidney complaint, and other ailments because these diseases have their origin in the blood.

It is a beneficient work that Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing. It helps poor tired mothers by purifying and enriching their blood and giving them appetite and strength. It builds up broken down constitutions, relelves the pangs of rheumatism and neuralgia, dispels the horrors of dyspepsia and nervous prostration, overcomes the symptoms of catarrh, eradicates scrofula, salt rheum and all blood diseases, and makes the weak and debilitated feel strong and vigorous. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the one true blood purifier. It is the friend of the sufferer and the foe of disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla sells because Hood's Sarsaparilla cures. 1w

Malay Camphor.

(Dryobalanops Camphora.)

This species of camphor is produced from a tree growing in Sumatra, Borneo, and the Malay Peninsula, and is known as Malay Camphor. It is secreted naturally in crystalline masses and lodged in cavities in the wood. It is whitish, translucent, somewhat unctuous to the touch, very volatile, and its odor strong and fragrant. One of the strongest properties of the Malay Camphor, as well as that of all other camphors, is their strong sedative power, and they are all of great power in allaying irritation and relieving pain. The ordinary liquid camphor purchased at the drug store, if applied to a tender surface, will cause a smart, but this is due, not to the camphor, but to the alcohol in which it is held in solution. The wonderful success that has followed the introduction of Pretzinger's Catarrh Balm has been due to the fact that in it are carried not only the well-known camphor of commerce, but this Malay Camphor and the camphor obtained from the Australian Blue Gum Tree, as well as the Japanese Camphor, better known as Menthol, obtained from Japan, and other camphors, and all these in combination have a wonderful healing effect, and their power to subdue the irritated membranes of the air passages of the nose and throat is akin to the marvelous. Any reader of this article who has any difficulty whatever with the air passages of the head, should obtain Pretzinger's Catarrh Balm and see if the statements in this article are not facts. The many thousands who have used this invaluable remedy will give it their unqualified endorsement.

To the Sufferers of Rheumatism.

After using Groff's Rheumatic Cure for some time in my practice I take great pleasure in saying that it is the most wonderful remedy for rheumatism; in fact, it is the only one I have found for the cure of this disease in all its various forms. DR. E. E. TULL, Chicago.

From LaGrippe.

How Dr. Miles' Nervine Restored One of Kentucky's Business Men to Health.

NO DISEASE has ever presented so many peculiarities as LaGrippe. No disease leaves its victims so debilitated, useless, sleepless, nerveless, as LaGrippe.

Mr. D. W. Hilton, state agent of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Kentucky, says: "In 1889 and '90 I had two severe attacks of LaGrippe, the last one attacking my nervous system with such severity that my life was despaired of. I had not slept for more than two months except by the use of narcotics that stupefied me, but gave me no rest. I was only conscious of intense mental weakness, agonizing bodily pain and the fact that I was hourly growing weaker.

When in this condition, I commenced using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. In two days I began to improve and in one month's time I was cured, much to the surprise of all who knew of my condition. I have been in excellent health since and have recommended your remedies to many of my friends."

SAMUEL FRANCIS SMITH.

The Author of Our National Hymn, "America," Honored by Beers Post.

It is said that for ages children in Greece were reqnired each day to recite from memory the names of the three hundred heroes who fell in defending the Pass of Thermopylae. In like manner the names of our countrymen who were conspicuous in the conflicts waged for national independence and human liberty have been immortalized. Yet, as the cedars of Lebanon are higher than the grass of the valley, even so are the virtues and victories of peace higher than the virtues and victories of war.

In the moulding and strengthening of American patriotism our national hymn has exercised a surpassing influence. Its author, Rev. Samuel Francis Smith, died recently in Boston, Mass., but his name will live and long be treasured in the hearts of all liberty-loving people.

In commemoration of his noble life and great public service, Beers Post, 140 Dept. of Michigan, G. A. R., unanimously voted that its charter be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days.

Another Tecumseh Invention.

As the law stands now, the entrances to elevator shafts must be protected by automatic gates. As the table factory uses an elevator it became necessary to supply it with such a contrivance. This was necessary, not only to comply with the letter of the law, but danger of stepping down the shaft occasionally can be avoided in no other way. As the occasion required, H. W. Conkling, of the Table Co., set to work to provide a gate which would open automatically when the elevator is on the level with the floor and close in the same way and remain closed at all other times. As a result he has perfected a gate which is light, cheap, simple and practicable, and which meets every requirement of the law and the use for which it is intended. It consists of two parts, or small gates, running latrerally on rollers, closed and held together by pulleys, and opened by the approach of the elevator car from above or below.

Mr. Conkling is justly proud of his invention and will probably investigate the feasibility of patenting the same. It would seem as if the device would make a paying investment for manufacturing.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Village of Tecumseh, Mich., Council Chamber, January 6th, 1896.

Regular session. Entire council present but Trustees Heeren and Smith.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Chairman of committee on electric lighting reported that they had engaged an electric engineer and tested the arc lamps of the village, on the evening of Dec. 9th, 1895, that the report of the engineer was, in substance, as follows:

TO THE HONORABLE COUNCIL OF THE VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH, MICH:

The standard arc lamps are made in three sizes: 800 candle power, taking 6 amperes at 45 volts, 1200 candle power, taking 8 amperes at 45 volts, and 2000 candle power, taking 10 amperes at 45 volts.

The lamps should show 8 amperes at 45 volts to give proper light. It is just as bad for voltage to go to seventy as to drop to thirty, because when it reaches that point carbon flames, giving a poor light, and when carbon feeds, drops away down and gives little or no light.

A very liberal limit for variation in lamp is 5 volts, many lamps not more than 2.

Result of test:

Current at beginning of test 6.2 to 6.5 amperes, at end of test, 7 amperes.

Pressure of lamps at Green House 47 to 51 volts, Bresie's 30 to 35 volts, John Temple's 48 to 52 volts, Geo. Church's 45 to 52 volts, Wyrill's 35 to 52 volts, Bramble's 30 to 70, J. H. Smith's 35 to 50 volts, table factory 40 to 60 volts, Globe mill 30 to 60 volts.

Conclusion: It is evident that you are not receiving 1200 candle power per lamp. The current is below standard value, but this is of little importance being only slightly short and I doubt not that it varies from 6 to 8 amperes. The great trouble is with the lamps, pressure being from 30 to 70 volts. The fact that the voltage can mount to 70 shows that generator is not overloaded. The whole trouble lies in the condition of the lamps. They are very dirty and out of adjustment.

The result is this: Lamps start and burn fairly well, carbon burns away, arc lengthens and at last lamps feed, carbon drops away down and then there is very little light until carbon burns away, only to go over same ground again. Effect is that you get nominal candle power about one-fifth the time the lamps burn.

To remove trouble every lamp should be taken in, cleaned and readjusted to take normal voltage. I would then guarantee that you get good results from lamps as dynamo is large enough for load.

Yours truly,
CARROL D. JONES.

Committee also reported that they had informed manager of company of result of test; that he had promised to have lamps cleaned and readjusted; that all lamps had been taken and cleaned in two days and that committee could see no improvement in lights; that their opinion was that lamps were not yet properly cleaned and adjusted.

Moved that report of engineer and committee be accepted and filed and that the recommendations be carried out. Supported. Carried.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

Sexton's report for December presented, showing two interments, one lot sold, and $20.00 collected. Ordered placed on file.

The announcement that Robert G. Ingersoll is to deliver his lecture on "Lincoln," at the Croswell Opera House, Adrian, Saturday evening, Jan. 11th, recalls to mind that he is today the best representative in America of the many-sided genius. Lawyer, savant, statesman, controversialist, lecturer, man of affairs—all are combined in a charming personality as vigorous as it is tender and sympathetic. Although he is known to more people by his independant theological views—views which, it must be admitted, he supports with able arguments—than through any other direction of his talents, Col. Ingersoll has won renown wholly independent of his position on religious topics. Prices, 50, 75, and $1.00. Seats can be reserved by addressing H. E. Cook, Adrian.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Craig was the scene of gladness and good cheer on the evening of Jan. 9th. The occasion being the marriage of their daughter, Ellen, and Frank V. Hoagland. The ceremony of solemnizing the marriage contract was performed by J. I. Gulick. After the words were spoken which unites the interest and the worldly prospects of these two, now to become one, many were the congratulations and kind words to these highly esteemed and truly worthy young people of east Macon. A bounteous supper was served and a pleasant evening was spent. Valuable and numerous gifts were bestowed by the friends assembled, and the young couple start forth anew in life's journey. May happiness and peace and prosperity attend them through a long life, is the sincere wish of their many friends.

Talk about astronomical phenomenon. The most absorbing total eclipse we ever witnessed occurred Tuesday evening about supper time, when the fuse wire at the power house burned out. The Devil was just washing his inky face and in the confusion wiped that interesting member on a burlap oil rag of about the consistency of the office towel. More serious, however, was the loss of an inimitable clipping from the Adrian Press, which we had just stolen and which will now be lost to our readers forever.

The new hanging harness which was to be procured for the village team has just been completed by J. S. Gillman and is a dandy. It hangs above the pole of the hose wagon. At the tap of the bell Frank and Charley rush to the pole, the driver falls on his seat, jerks the lines and hollers "go lang" and away they go. The collars are entirely of steel, fastening with a spring below the neck which is the only place the harness is fastened about the horse. It is a fine rig of good workmanship and is a credit to our fire department.

Yesterday was "Jackson Day", the 81st anniversary of New Orleans, when Gen. Jackson with a few squirrel hunters humbled the British flag. Of course we have hardly time to take the trouble, but as some seem to be forgetting the anniversary it may be necessary to repeat it.

Congressman Spaulding appointed his son to the cadetship at West Point with A. J. Weatherwax, jr., of Jackson, as alternate. Recently the young man was injured in a way which unfitted him for his physical examination, and in a letter to his alternate gave up his appointment to him.

Jackson Patriot: A report of a small riot at the prison has leaked out. The affair occured Saturday afternoon in the laundry at the shirt factory, that new industry in which the convicts seem to find no profit or satisfaction. During the scrap, flatirons were used as weapons, the air being full of them, though so far as can be learned no one was badly hurt.

Tecumseh has a court of Independent Order of Foresters, called Pottawatamie court. The notable feature of the order consists in the fact, that not one in five of the members can spell the name correctly without referring to a vest pocket printed memorandum, and even then several members have been seen walking backwards to reach the lodge room. At the last election, James Lowry was chosen chief ranger and first scalp lifter, with J. C. Hazlett, second in command. If any one is interested in knowing who the other officers are, let them roam around among the wigwams of the Tecumseh woods, and keep his eye peeled for tomahawks, etc.—Adrian Press.

Dr. George W. VanVleck, who has been best known among the people of Tecumseh for the past thirty years on account of his peculiar skill in the treatment of disease with herbs and natures remedies, also sustains, among those most intimately acquainted with him, a well earned reputation as a literary scholar. The gentleman has recently completed an epic of rare merit entitled, "A Visit to an old Burial Ground." The incidents and scenes which furnish the theme are ruggedly bold and heroic but are so deftly softened by deep pathos and touching incident that one is first stirred to action and again completely soothed at the humor of the poet as it were. Particularly is this true when hearing the recital of the epic by the author himself, who has been prevailed upon to give private readings to the delight and edification of some of our more fortunate local literateurs. We predict for the doctor a speedy recognition among the high critics of poetic literature.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

FURNITURE SEASON OPENED.

Trade Prospects Are Considered Excellent at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Jan. 7.—The spring furniture season opened Monday, but comparatively few of the sample lines of new goods were ready for inspection, and will not be before the middle of the week. About 20 buyers, mostly from eastern cities, are already here, and every train is bringing more of them. The trade prospects are considered excellent, as retail stocks are low, but it is probable that buyers will be conservative in placing their orders until the season develops.

Priest's Fortune Disposed Of.

Niles, Jan. 5.—Three years ago Rev. John Catton, priest in St. Mary's church in this city, died. He left a fortune, consisting of real estate in this city and Belgium, his native country. His will was admitted to probate and, according to his last testament, all of his property in Belgium, valued at 25,000 francs, was left to relatives. His property in America was left to the Catholic church. Friday the estate was settled and the property transferred to Bishop Foley, of Detroit. It is valued at about $25,000.

During the civil war the deceased was first lieutenant in the First Wisconsin infantry. He was prominent in Loyal Legion and masonic circles.

Fined for Coming Late to Church.

Grand Rapids, Jan. 6.—Rev. H. H. Johnston, of Trinity church, is a member and chaplain of Daisy lodge of elks. They paid the fine, and the church treasury was enriched about $70.

Kline will be returned to the Ohio prison. He will be taken off parole and confined for life.

Lansing, Jan. 8.—The elevation of Circuit Judge Joseph B. Moore, of Jasper, to a position on the supreme bench of this state, which took place at the opening of court Tuesday morning, was unaccompanied by any ceremony. At the same time Justice C. D. Long assumed the position of chief justice in place of Justice McGrath.

Hancock, Mich., Jan. 6.—The Franklin Mining company has struck the Pewabic copper lode in the Franklin Junior property at a depth of 300 feet. As the old Franklin was nearly on its last legs, this discovery means a renewed lease of its life and the continued employment of 450 men.

There was disbursed on warrants of the auditor general during the year $1,079,890.76, leaving a balance December 31, 1895, of $62,578.87. Of this balance $51,733.15 is in state depositories and $10,845.72 in the treasury vaults. The above figures correspond with the amount charged to the treasurer on the books of the auditor general.

ALL THE LAWS ARE VALID.

Though Signed After the Legislature Adjourned They Still Hold.

Lansing, Jan. 4.—The supreme court has filed an opinion in which the validity of acts passed previous to the last five days of the legislature, and not signed by the governor until after the legislature had adjourned, is fully sustained. It has for years been the custom of Michigan executives to sign acts in this manner, and the constitutionality of many acts of the last legislature, as well as many others that have for years been accepted as law, was involved in the ruling made in the case decided.

Two Bad Fires.

Manistee, Jan. 5.—Fire Friday night destroyed the feed warehouse of John McAnley, grocer. In a terrific wind and snowstorm, with zero weather, firemen worked bravely to protect surrounding property. The warehouse and contents are a total loss of about $5,000, and are insured for $3,500. Fire visited the village of Copemish early Saturday morning, destroying the bowl and tray factory partially. The loss is $3,500, partially insured. The plant is owned by Chapman & Sargeant, of Perrysburg, O.

Pest Destroys Potatoes.

Decatur, Jan. 6.—A new parasite has made its appearance in southern Michigan, which it is feared may create havoc with the immense potato crop of last season, most of which was buried in the fall on account of low prices. The pest girdles the potatoes under the skin until only the shell of the tuber is left, thousands of the insects being visible under the microscope in each groove. Specimens of the parasite will be sent to the agricultural bureau at Washington for admission.

Will Begin Proceedings.

Lansing, Jan. 8.—Attorney-General Maloney, of Illinois, has telegraphed the Michigan board of health that he had commenced legal proceedings against the Illinois health university of Chicago, which has been flooding this state with graduated physicians who are alleged to be grossly incompetent to practice medicine, but who find the Michigan law too flimsy to operate against them.

Kalamazoo, Jan. 8.—Charges of incompetency were made before the board of supervisors Tuesday against Superintendent of Poor Bush by Rev. Caroline J. Bartlett, of the People's church. THOMPSON'S DEFENSE.

He Alleges Dr. Sweetland Caused an Explosion to Secure Insurance Money.

Niles, Jan. 8. — The trial of Allen Thompson, charged with throwing a bomb into the office of Dr Sweetland at Mottville on the night of November 13, 1895, begins in the circuit court at Centerville Thursday. At the time of the outrage Dr. Sweetland and a patient, Andrew Gray, were in the office, and the latter was permanently injured by the explosion. Notwithstanding these charges Thompson claims to have proof that Sweetland caused the explosion of the dynamite bomb himself in order to kill Gray, that money might be secured on an insurance policy. The coming trial will be a sensational affair, and both sides have engaged the best legal talent. Thompson's defense will be an alibi, and it is the prevailing opinion that he will be acquitted.

RELICS OF A BATTLE.

Niles, Jan. 7.—A large elm tree, that for years has stood right in the center of the city, was felled Monday, and upon cutting it up several old-fashioned rifle balls were found imbedded in its center. The rings in the tree outside the ball numbered over 50, showing that the bullets were fired into the tree over half a century ago. Near the spot where the tree stood a terrible battle occurred years ago between the French and the Indians, and it is thought these may be relics of the event. The bullets are old-time rifle balls, hand made and used in muzzle-loading guns.

DIE WITHOUT RELIEF.

Niles, Jan. 3. — Near Decatur a peculiar religious sect flourishes, which is known as "The Children of God." The sect is founded on the faith-cure idea, and whenever any members are ill no physicians are allowed to administer to them. As a result, in the family of James Harris, who belongs to the sect, three members have died. Their deaths have been caused by not having the proper medical attendance. The last one to die was Mrs. Harris, who, on her death-bed, joined with her husband in refusing the services of a physician.

BULLET COUGHED UP.

Was Lodged in William Wickwire's Throat Over a Year.

Scotts, Jan. 4.—When William Wickwire was shot by Michael Gallihan a year ago one bullet lodged in his throat. His physicians could never exactly locate it and it remained a constant source of trouble. Mr. Wickwire frequently choked while eating. Recently he coughed the bullet up and is glad to be rid of the irritant he had carried for 13 months.

Gov. Rich Calls a Convention to Meet in Lansing March 3.

Lansing, Jan. 7.—In a proclamation issued Monday night Gov. Rich states that the improvement of the highways has not kept pace with the general advancement of the state, and he calls a mass convention to be held in the capitol building Tuesday, March 3, for the purpose of discussing the subject of good roads.

Niles, Jan. 4.—While services were in progress at the Methodist Episcopal church the lights suddenly went out, leaving the congregation in total darkness. Fortunately the worshipers did not become frightened, or a panic might have been the result. As it was they groped their way to the doors. Numerous stores and offices were also deprived of light. The trouble was caused by the gas works suddenly giving out.

Doctors Demand Their Price.

Benton Harbor, Jan 7.—Postmaster Rowe stated before the city council Tuesday that the physicians of this city refuse to attend diphtheria cases or other infectious diseases among the poor for the regular fee of 75 cents a call. He said he did not want to see anyone die for want of medical attendance. The physicians state they must have one dollar or more a call or they will not respond.

Against the Telephone Company.

Detroit, Jan. 4.—The Wayne circuit court rendered unanimously an important decision in a suit against the Bell Telephone company. The court held the company had no right to compel subscribers to sign its contract; also that the courts may upon application of subscribers determine as to what reasonable rates for telephones are. The case will be appealed.

Lays Aside the Ermine.

Lansing, Jan. 2.—Chief Justice McGrath, of the supreme court, laid aside the ermine of his office Wednesday and left for Detroit, where he will reengage in the practice of law. His departure from the bench leaves the court in the hands of republican judges for the first time in many years.

May Lose Both Feet.

VICTORY FOR PINGREE.

His Vetoes of Recent Franchises Sustained by Detroit Aldermen.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 8.—Mayor Pingree Tuesday night sent to the council his vetoes of the ordinances passed a week ago granting new franchises, running 30 years, to the Detroit Citizens Street Railway company and to the Fort Wayne & Belle Isle street railway. Instead of barely enough aldermen voting for the veto to sustain it, as was expected, the mayor was overwhelmingly supported, the vote being 25 to six in favor of sustaining both vetoes. The talk of boodle in connection with the granting of the franchise to the Citizens' company undoubtedly caused the unexpected flop to the mayor on the part of many of the aldermen. The settlement of the street railway question will now go over to the new council, which is absolutely controlled by Mayor Pingree. It is expected he will offer the companies new franchises on the basis of eight tickets for 25 cents with universal transfers.

WANT TO BE REGENT.

Several Candidates for Vacancy on the University Board.

Lansing, Jan. 6.—The persons mentioned in connection with the vacancy in the office of regent of the university, caused by the resignation of Charles W. Hackley, of Muskegon, the day his term of office commenced, are E. O. Grosvenor, of Jonesville; W. H. Withington, of Jackson; Thomas J. Ramsdell and Judge Aaron V. McAlvay, of Manistee, and George A. Farr, of Grand Haven. It is expected other candidates will be announced during the week. Inasmuch as the term to be served by the appointee will be eight years, it is believed a comparatively young man will be selected. Gov. Rich intimates that the appointment will not be made for a fortnight.

Easy As Can Be

—washing with Pearline. Just try it and see. None of the rub, rub, rub that made the old washboard hateful.

None of the old washboard, either. Nothing but common sense washing of clothes, paint, dishes, anything in the house—with something that takes out the dirt, instead of making you rub it out. It's a big difference.

There's a saving in the labor — but, besides that, there's a saving in the wear. Washing with acids and chemicals is easy, too—but it isn't safe. Washing with Pearline is. 348 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

SOMETIMES the most careful women are the most careless. Many a woman bundles herself up, puts on heavy clothing and wraps and furs to keep out the cold—to keep out sickness—when she is neglecting the very worst sickness that can come to a woman. She is allowing a slight disorder to grow, to become worse, to slowly and surely sap her vitality. The little pain and the other slight indications of trouble seem to her unimportant. She pays no attention to them. By and by they grow a little worse, but she is used to them then and takes them as a matter of course. By and by, they have grown into dragging pains that occasionally keep her in the house—that occasionally put her to bed. Then she knows what is the matter, but she won't go to a doctor because she knows he will insist on "examinations" and "local treatment." She goes on, with increasing suffering, until life itself becomes a drag. Nervousness, "sinking spells," digestive disturbances, and fifty other complications may arise from the same cause. Frequently such symptoms are treated as digestive diseases when the root of the whole matter is the derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. Over thirty years ago, the need for a reliable remedy for so-called "female complaints," was recognized by Dr. R. V. Pierce, then, as now, chief consulting physician to the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, at Buffalo, N. Y. He prepared Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the most wonderfully effective remedy that has ever been used for such maladies. Its sale now exceeds the combined sales of all other medicines for women. Its effect is perceptible almost immediately. It relieves pain, allays inflammation, checks debilitating drains, and quickly subdues other distressing symptoms. It makes the organs and their surrounding tissues strong and healthy, thereby correcting displacements and invigorating the whole body.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Jan. 12.
Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M.
Topic, The Alphabet of Prayer.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Math. vi, 5-13; Luke xi, 1-4.

Sincerity is the first requisite in all our relations with God. Imitation virtue is valueless. Vice and sin are real; so all virtue must be genuine. Simulated piety is hypocrisy. A make believe religion will land one in a make believe heaven which will prove a veritable hell. Posing as a Christian never brings the favor and presence of God to a soul any more than masquerading as a prince will make one heir to an earthly crown. Upright intention, downright, wholesouled earnestness secure the inheritance.

The quantity of a person's devotions do not determine alone his religious value. Quality must also be taken into account. Repetitions of prayer are not displeasing to men or God if they be the outpouring of a burdened heart deeply in earnest, absorbed with a single desire and importunate till the petition be granted. Then the language becomes eloquent by reason of its sameness. But when the repetition is without depth of desire, it is worse than wearisome; it may become abhorrent. Gazing rarely finds treasure of any kind. Looking may pick up some accidentally. Searching finds treasure, even when hidden. "Seek and ye shall find." "Ask and ye shall receive." Put the soul into it and the great "Over Soul" will hear the cry and find you.

True Politeness.

This crowning grace of character cannot be learned or acquired by the study of books on etiquette. They are useful as manuals of social intercourse and may help one in the observance of rules of society, but they cannot make the true lady or true gentleman. Genuine politeness strikes its roots far below the surface, deep in the heart, and blossoms out in all the little acts of life. He whose pulse beats in time with the great pulse of humanity, who feels that every human heart is human, bears within him the very elemental soil from which true courtesy spontaneously springs. This large affinity characterizes all truly great souls and constitutes an essential part for their greatness. Some of the manifestations of its presence are perfect simplicity of manner, entire absence of all acting for effect and total unconsciousness of self.

Welcome.

Every stranger has a right to expect cordial greeting from Christians whenever he enters the church of God. A cordial handshake and kind word are the surest means of attaching strangers to the church. Let the League have a committee to welcome strangers and introduce to them such members as they can conveniently. Let this committee be at work before and after preaching services in the vestibule at the prayer and class meetings and Sunday school. Better still, let every member be on the alert to show courtesy to all strangers and let them not be unmindful to greet the brethren and sisters also. Practice the forms of Christian courtesy and cultivate the spirit which gives all value to the forms.

The Lord's Prayer.

Many volumes have been written in exposition of this passage of Scripture. Many more will probably be written. Yet it is so simple that the little child can understand its meaning. But it is so comprehensive that all wisdom and philosophy and experience cannot transcend its teaching or exhaust its truth. In every exigency of life it reveals some new phase of comfort or assistance. It is adapted to all men everywhere, in all their needs. But it is of value only as it is used and becomes of greatest value after longest use and to those who use it most.

Our Inalienable Right.

Out of the writings and sayings and deeds of those who loudly proclaim the "rights of liberty" and "rights of man" match me, if you can, one sentence so noble, so sublime, one that will so stand at the bar of God hereafter, as this simple, glorious sentence of Paul, in which he asserts the rights of Christian conscience above the rights of Christian liberty: "Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend."—Robertson.

Wheat and Tares.

Good wheat undoubtedly grows in the world field of God's kingdom among men. Tares are also abundant. Some have no eye except for the tares. Earnest servants are never lacking who, with zealous spirit of devotion, come and ask leave to root them out. How few Christians have acquired the spirit of the Master shown in the beautiful parable where He mercifully forbids the workers to pluck up the tares lest the wheat be also uprooted!

Truth needs no guarding. It is always consistent and needs no assistance or apology. It is always handy and ready on the instant. It needs no adjustment for the occasion or special robing. A lie is troublesome and continually racks one's invention to properly clothe and guard it, and at the most inopportune time drops its mask and betrays us.

There is a pleasure in contemplating good. There is greater pleasure in receiving good. The highest pleasure is in doing good. That comprehends all the rest.

It is one of the beautiful compensations of this life that no one can sincerely try to help another without thereby helping himself.

Rowland Hill, seeing a boy on a rocking horse, said, "Like some Christians, motion enough, but no progress."

More things are wrought by prayer

A Few Financial Facts

Great Britain having built a dam across our Silver Stream, Gold alone is powerless to turn the wheels of Commerce. Result: Stagnation and Commercial Death, to which John Bull points with pride, rejoicing in his wonderful successes.

Two streams, Gold and Silver flowed from our mountains. Uniting, they furnished power to turn the wheels of Commerce. Result: Prosperity and Commercial Life, to which Uncle Sam points with pride.

PRICES OF EXPORT.

How the English Conspiracy Works in Actual Transactions.

Secretary of Agriculture Morton, in a recent statement, showed that the value of our exports in the last fiscal year was 85 million dollars less than in the preceding year, and 40 millions less than in the year 1892-93. This falling off was not in quantity. We really sent abroad more of our labor product, but we got less for it. As the secretary himself explained, we exported 834 million more pounds of cotton, but obtained for it six million less dollars.

If the average export price of cotton for the fiscal year 1894-5 had been the same as for the preceding year, the value of United States cotton exported would have reached $277,000,000 instead of $205,000,000. During the same period, had the price remained standard, our bacon would have brought $42,000,000 instead of $38,000,000, and our lard $43,000,000 instead of $37,000,000.

That is to say, on three articles of American export we lost 82 million dollars because the price had fallen. The harder the farmers work the less money they earn. The more American wealth the nation sends to other lands, the smaller the amount of debt it pays. Mr. Morton's remedy for this evil, growing more destructive year after year, is to apply "American inventive genius to farm management." But the sole explanation of the fall of prices offered by the secretary and his friends is that inventive genius has already made farms more productive. How much farther is it to go? Is a machine to be invented that will surpass the self-binding reaper as that surpassed the sickle? Is the fertility of the soil to be made two-fold greater? If so, how? It is easy to propose remedies; but no man who is capable of forming an opinion upon the subject can seriously believe that a remedy lies in that direction. There is but one remedy within reach; it is to stop the upward movement of gold by remonetizing silver.

What a lesson the foregoing contains! The goldites persistently claim that the free silver movement is altogether in the interest of a few silver miners. At the same time they argue strenuously that under free coinage silver would fall, lower even than it is now.

How the silver miner is to make anything by a still further decline in the value of his product is a point upon which they preserve a discreet silence.

But let that go. Here we have a report by Secretary Morton, in which he shows a clear loss of $82,000,000 on three staple products of American agriculture. This is more than the entire output of our silver mines would be worth if silver were at par.

Secretary Morton recognizes this shrinkage in values as an evil, because he suggests a remedy, as given above. Is not the secretary a little inconsistent? He says that the American republic should have money of the "greatest attainable unfluctuating purchasing power."

He is a goldite in the most extreme sense. There is not a shadow of doubt that he is in perfect accord with Cleveland's idea of retiring a large portion of our paper currency, which contraction necessarily means a still greater shrinkage in prices.

It does dawn upon him, though, in a hazy sort of a way, that when 834,000,000 pounds more of American cotton brings 6,000,000 fewer dollars, there is something not exactly right about it. Therefore he proposes a remedy. He wants to improve farm management. But how? Would he increase the crop, and thus increase the "overproduction" that the gold people say is the cause of all the trouble? Or would he have the farmers diversify their crops, and spread out the loss over a greater number of products? Or would he have them reduce their crops, thus throwing large numbers of farm hands out of employment? Or would he carry the improvement of farm machinery to a still higher point, and displace manual labor in that way?

But if falling prices are a good thing, and it has been the burden of the gold champions' song, that low prices are a blessing, why should the secretary concern himself about a trifling loss of $82,000,000 in a whole year on three staples?

That is all there is in this entire matter of falling prices. It means a smaller amount of money for the same quantity of products. When the tremendous fall in prices is urged as an argument in favor of restoring silver, the whole gold standard army shouts that low prices are a good thing because the "poor man can buy so much with a dollar." But whenever the matter comes under consideration in any other way, they recognize it as an evil, and begin to cast about for a remedy. There is not a grain of common honesty in their position.

The moment silver was demonetized and the business of Europe and America began to adjust itself to the gold basis, a decline of prices set in, followed by a general depression of industry in gold standard countries, that is recognized by every respectable authority in the world.

The gold advocate, incased in the armor of prejudice, or standing behind a barricade of selfish interest, shuts his eyes blindly to the simplest economic truths, insists that the gold standard is a perfect system, that it must necessarily be both wise and honest, because—well, because it is gold.

And so they look on with smiling countenance while the country struggles in the slough of industrial despond, telling the discouraged producer that there is no trouble with gold—that is unchangeable; the trouble is with him. That he is not intelligent enough. That he must improve his methods—he must produce more, or he must produce less—he must do something, but he must not touch their idol of gold.

LIES NEVER WIN,

The Stock in Trade of the Benedict Arnolds Never Gives Out.

The esteemed Memphis Commercial Appeal says that Judge Aldredge, in his address before the national bankers, admitted that silver had stood the test, as a money metal, for hundreds of years. Oh, yes; and mere barter also stood the test for a thousand generations, as the one means of exchange. Copper and tin served for a thousand years the money purposes of the more advanced nations. So the world got on without railroads, telegraphs, telephones, ocean liners, and the rest of the nineteenth century improvements. —Chattanooga Times.

The trouble with this sort of talk is that it has no meaning, no relevancy, no applicability to the fact. As Judge Aldredge confessed, silver had stood the test for hundreds of years up to 1873. Those were not years of primitive barter, and there were railroads and telegraphs and steamboats and nearly all the great "nineteenth century improvements" before 1873. There has been no advance in improved processes of production and distribution since 1873 at all comparable to those that preceded that year. In what respect had silver failed to stand the test when it was demonetized? Had it affected injuriously the prosperity of the people? Had it delayed the progress of improvement and civilization? Have we had greater and more general prosperity since 1873 than we had before? If silver had not interfered with the world's progress and prosperity at the time it was demonetized, it had been vindicated by the test of centuries. If the gold standard has not made the people more prosperous, then it has not stood the test. Here is the truth of it in a nutshell: The condition that prevailed up to the very year of silver demonetization was a condition of great prosperity; the condition that has since prevailed has been one of almost universal depression. How does the test of centuries compare with the test of twenty-two years?—Memphis Appeal.

A Patriotic Banker.

A business college principal asked J. F. Draughton, president of the Lafayette County bank, Lexington, Mo., if he could use one of his students. Mr. Draughton replied:

"The tory policy of bankers of New York in demonetizing constitutional money and running the finances of the country to suit the English has struck the business of this part of the country such a blow that we do not need any help of the kind you speak of, as per your card of this date. We hope, however, that the patriotism of Americans will soon cure the main evil and that the new life thereby given to business will make it profitable to employ such person as you mention."

The Goldbug.

A Cornell professor says newspapers as well as colleges should be endowed. The goldbugs have already "endowed" a good many that would teach their kind of political economy.

A Dissolved Partnership.

One of the ablest and most brilliant lawyers at the York county (Me.) bar was John Holmes of Alfred, who was widely known for his wit and sarcasm. An opportunity was seldom lost by him of exhibiting his opponent in a ridiculous position. An instance of this kind occurred while a member of the senate of the United States, in the discussion on nullification, Mr. Tyler of Virginia, afterward president, alluded to a satirical remark of John Randolph, in which that gentleman had some time before designated certain active politicians as partners under the firm name of "James Madison, Felix Grundy, John Holmes and the devil," and asked Mr. Holmes, with the view of making a severe cut, what had become of that celebrated firm. Mr. Holmes immediately sprang to his feet and said, "Mr. President, I will tell the gentleman what has become of that firm; the first member is dead, and the second has gone into retirement, and the last has gone to the nullifiers and is now electioneering among the gentleman's constituents, and thus the partnership is legally dissolved."—Green Bag.

Rule Regarding Restaurant Checks.

Said a man at Hashton's restaurant the other day to the ladylike, benignant and greatly aproned young woman who had waited on him efficiently, though somewhat tempestuously: "I see you have laid down my check on the table with the figures up. Generally you favor me by putting it face down, so that the great public is not admitted to the secret of my expenditure for my luncheon. Do you mind telling me why you vary your usual practice today?" "Oh, not at all," said the waitress. "It's this way; when the checks are under 50 cents, I turn 'em face down, but when they're over 50 cents I turn the figures up." "Oh, ho!" said the man. "You assume that when a man has spent half a dollar or more for his luncheon he likes to have as many people know it as possible?" The young lady smiled blandly and went off with some dishes. She unfolded no more of her philosophy, but no doubt she thinks she has "sized up" the weaknesses of the average patron of the great average restaurant with some tact, and very likely she has.—Boston Transcript.

How Schweninger Trained Bismarck.

The third volume of Von Paschinger's work on Prince Bismarck contains several hitherto unpublished anecdotes. One of these relates how Dr. Schweninger became the chancellor's private physician and subjugated the great man to his will. Dr. Schweninger, who was indebted to Herr Doetze, a deputy, for his introduction to Bismarck's household, recognized the strong temperament with which he had to deal and resolved to assume the whiphand at the very outset. Three days after his advent the chancellor fell ill. The doctor forbade him to partake of a certain dish of which he was particularly foud. Bismarck rebelled and had it placed before him notwithstanding. Hearing of what had been done, Dr. Schweninger entered the room, took the dish forcibly from the patient's hands and flung it out of the open window. The man of iron perceived that he had met his match and was ever afterward the most docile of patients under Dr. Schweninger's hands.—Westminster Gazette.

A Holiday In Bed.

Two hospital nurses adopted a novel method of spending a fortnight's holiday. They hired a cottage in the country and an old woman to attend on them. From the moment they entered the door until the time for departure came they were never seen, and the villagers naturally concluded that there was some mystery connected with them. Some even thought of consulting the police on the subject. On their way back to the railway station they called on the vicar to give him a trifle for his charities and explained the secret. They were nurses and had spent their whole time in bed. Accustomed to sleep in such snatches as they could get, their notion of a holiday was a period of long and undisturbed repose.—London Standard.

Agony Easy to Bear.

Husband—Now, my darling, be sure to write to me the moment you arrive at your sister's, telling me all about your journey and exactly how you felt after the wearying ride. I shall be in an agony of suspense until I hear that you have arrived safely and in good health.

Wife—Oh, I won't wait to write. I'll send you a nice, long telegram.

Husband—Um! That is very thoughtful, my angel, but—er—these telegraph companies are very unreliable. Put your telegram in an envelope and mail it to me, and then I'll be sure to get it. Here's a 2 cent stamp.—New York Weekly.

Snobbishness In Dogs.

A dog fancier once took exception to Professor Huxley's assertion that "one of the most curious peculiarities of the dog mind was its inherent snobbishness, shown by the regard paid to external respectability. The dog who barks furiously at a beggar will let a well dressed man pass him without opposition." He said that, in fact, only dogs of well dressed persons act so. Dogs accustomed to men in rags bark, not at beggars, but at persons clothed in sleek broadcloth.

O'FERRALL OF VIRGINIA WITH THE BENEDICT ARNOLDS.

Comes Out for the Money that Gives the Farmer 40 Cents for His Wheat and Increases His Interest to Sixteen Per Cent.

The governor of Virginia has become a convert to "sound money." He is reported as saying:

"I am for a sound dollar, and what I mean by a sound dollar is one that will pass for 100 cents and be as good as any other dollar, anywhere within the limits of the civilized world. Gold is that dollar now. Silver may also be if kept on a parity with gold. But this can only be done by international agreement. What I mean by a sound dollar is one that the farmer, the mechanic and the laboring man can use with a purchasing power of 100 cents and buy as much with it as any other dollar. What I mean by a sound dollar is one that its holder may lay away to buy a home, save for a rainy day or provide for himself in old age with absolute certainty that it will be as good as any other dollar when he wants to use it. Gold is that dollar. Silver cannot be unless by international agreement it is made equivalent to a gold dollar.

"I am for a sound dollar for the poor man as well as for the rich man. I shall never consent to a monetary system which will place it in the power of the rich man to hoard his gold and pay his poor creditor in a depreciated dollar."

So the governor really wants a "sound dollar"—one that is worth 100 cents anywhere in the civilized world. Well, that is good enough as far as it goes. It is eminently proper that a dollar should be worth 100 cents. That is "a dollar" should be worth a "dollar." We are quite agreed with the governor on that point. But it scarcely reaches the essence of the question. The chief use of a dollar is not to exchange it for "100 cents," or some other kind of a dollar—it is to purchase commodities and pay debts.

How much purchasing power does the governor think a "sound dollar" should have? How much wheat or cotton or corn or tobacco should it buy in order to make it "sound"? He says it should buy as much as "any other dollar." Well, suppose a particular kind of dollars became so scarce that one of them will buy say, five bushels of wheat—does the governor think that a dollar which will buy less than five bushels is an "unsound" dollar? Does he think that if one dollar, call it the gold dollar if you please, doubles in purchasing power, while another dollar continues to purchase the same quantity as before, the one which doubles is "sound," while the one which remains the same, is "unsound"?

He wants one that a man can lay away for the future, and be as "good as any other dollar" when he wants to use it. But why as good as any other dollar? If it be as good as it was when laid away is not that enough? If not, pray tell us why not. If there is any reason why a dollar laid idly away for future use should double in purchasing power in the course of a few years, we would really like to know what the reason is. The governor would probably answer: If some other dollar has doubled in purchasing power, the one laid away should do the same because one dollar should be as good as any other dollar. This, however, is not only reasoning in a circle, but it involves the moral obliquity of assuming that "two wrongs make a right."

The germ of this whole question lies in the fact that within the last twenty-two years, "dollars" have nearly doubled in purchasing power, thus enriching the ones who own or control the dollars, and injuring those who produce the commodities, and those who are in debt.

The governor dexteriously skips away from this great fundamental proposition, and disposes of the whole matter by declaring that "one dollar must be as good as any other dollar."

The governor dexterously skips ridedly unique.

He will never consent to a monetary system that will enable a rich man to hoard his gold, and pay his poor creditor in depreciated dollars.

Now the mystery is solved. We have learned why the great bankers and money lenders are opposed to the restoration of silver. They are afraid it would give them an advantage. It would place it in their power to hoard their gold and pay the "poor creditor" with cheap money.

Their pious souls revolt at such an idea, and at the same time they doubt their ability to resist the temptations—so they entrench themselves behind their golden ramparts and bid defiance to the tempter.

True, some of them seemed to have no qualms of conscience when they pocketed their $10,000,000 profit on the bond deal, but that was different. They were plucking the treasury goose at that time, and of course it didn't hurt the people any.

But when it comes to the "poor creditor" that is another thing. The banker wouldn't hurt him for the world.

We are afraid that the governor of the old dominion has been sitting at the feet of Cleveland. It has been said that the "gold cure" has a tendency to weaken the intellects of those who take it, and the recent course of this discussion seems to confirm the statement.

Should Do Something.

Senator Vest wants the republicans to control the senate. "The republicans must do something or stop their howling about democratic incompetency," he says.—Ex.

Americans Must Blush.

Secretary Carlisle, Saturday, issued a circular appealing to the banks and private individuals to furnish gold to replenish the gold reserve fund. The government will pay the express charges both ways and return government notes. The subtreasury will immediately weigh such coin and deduct 4 cents for each troy grain of shortage. This is only the second time in American history that any such appeal had to be made and such measures taken.—American Bimetallist, Huntington, Ind.

Every Man Must Think.

For thirty years the average voter has taken no thought of government principles. Party spirit has engaged all his attention, while principles have been ignored. What are you doing now to make sure you are able to vote for liberty, home and your family's prosperity? The people must do their own thinking and voting, or good-bye to liberty in America.—Shoals (Ind.) Referendum.

A Story In a Few Words.

John—How did you come out last year on your rented farm?

John—What rent did you pay?

Tom—I was paying $5 per acre.

John—Will you rent a farm this year?

John—Where are you going to buy it?

Tom—Why, have you not seen the offer of The C. S. Graves Land Co. R 311, 56 Fifth avenue, Chicago, who have an advertisement in our paper?

Harper's Weekly

IN 1896.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is a journal for the whole country. It deals with the events of the world that are important to Americans.

In carrying out this policy, in 1895, Julian Ralph visited China and Japan, and journeyed through the West; Richard Harding Davis took a trip through the Caribbean Sea; the evolutions of the new navy were described and illustrated by Rufus F. Zogbaum; Frederic Remington presented studies of Army and Frontier life; Poultney Bigelow attended the opening of the Kiel Canal.

In 1896 like attention will be given to every notable happening. The chief events in art, literature, and music and the drama will be artistically presented. W. D. Howells, in the new department, Life and Letters, will discuss in his interesting way books and the social questions of the time. E. S. Martin's sprightly gossip of the Busy World will be continued. The progress of the Transportation Commission around the World will be followed and Caspar W. Whitney will conduct the department of Amateur Sport.

In 1896 will occur a Presidential election. In its editorials and through its political cartoons the WEEKLY will continue to be an independent advocate of good government and sound money.

In fiction the WEEKLY will be especially strong. It will publish the only novel of the year by W. D. Howells, and a stirring serial of a Scotch feud, by S. R. Crockett. The short stories selected are of unusual excellence and interest. In every respect HARPER'S WEEKLY will maintain its leading place in the illustrated journalism of the world.

The volumes of the WEEKLY begin with the first number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the number current at the time of receipt of order.

Remittances should be made by Postoffice Money Order or draft, to avoid chance of loss.

Harper's Magazine

Brissie, a new novel by William Black, written with all the author's well known charm of manner, will begin in the December Number, 1895, and continue until May. A new novel by George du Maurier, entitled The Martian, will also begin during the year. It is not too much to say that no novel has ever been awaited with such great expectation as the successor to Trilby. The Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc will continue and will relate the story of the failure and martyrdom of the Maid of Orleans. Other important fiction of the year will be a novelette by Mark Twain, under the title Tom Sawyer, Detective; a humorous three-part tale called Two Mormons from Muddiety, by Langdon Ziwyn Mitchell; and short stories by Octave Thanet, Richard Harding Davis, Mary E. Wilkins, Julian Ralph, Brander Matthews, Owen Wister, and other well known writers.

Prof. Woodrow Wilson will contribute six papers on George Washington and his times, with illustrations by Howard Pyle. Poultney Bigelow's history of The German Struggle for Liberty, illustrated by H. Caton Woodville, will be continued through the winter. Two papers on St. Clair's defeat and Mad Anthony Wayne's victory, by Theodore Roosevelt, with graphic illustrations will be printed during the year.

A noteworthy feature of the MAGAZINE during 1896 will be a series of articles by Caspar W. Whitney, describing his trip of 2600 miles on snow-shoes and with dog-sledge trains into the unexplored Barren Grounds of British North America in pursuit of wood-bison and musk-oxen. Mr. Whitney's series will have the added interest of being illustrated from photographs taken by himself.

The Volumes of the MAGAZINE begin with the Numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the number current at the time of receipt of order.

Remittances should be made by Postoffice Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

UNEQUALLED IN MEDICAL ANNALS

It was in Prescott, Mich., the Patient was an Old Soldier and has Hundreds of Friends. The Case Reads Like a Miracle.

From the Lakeside Monitor, Au Sable, Mich.

The publisher of this paper having some business to transact at Prescott, Ogemaw Co., Michigan, Monday last, repaired to that hamlet. While there he chanced to learn of a remarkable recovery from an illness of thirty-four years standing, the fortunate person being Thomas F. Galvin. The writer hunted that gentleman up, introduced himself, and requested Mr. Galvin to give a brief history of his terrible disease and some history of himself. Mr. Galvin's trouble culminated three or four years since in three diseases—Rheumatism, affecting the general system; locomotor ataxia, affecting the legs, rendering him unable to direct his course in walking, and paralysis, rendering him unable to use lips, throat or palate.

In giving a history of his trouble, Mr. Galvin said:

"In 1861 I enlisted in the army and was made captain of Co. H., 40th Illinois Infantry. I was stationed at Paducah, Ky.; in September of that year and while there caught cold and contracted rheumatism. I was in the hospital there three months; when I recovered sufficiently to report for duty although far from well. Previous to this time I had never been sick a day in my life and weighed 195 pounds. I continued in the service during the war, although suffering all the time from rheumatism. At the close of the war, I was discharged and a few months afterwards granted a pension of $9 per month for my disabilities. I was never free from pain for thirty-three long years until late last fall or early in the winter. I continued to grow worse all the time during the entire period until last November. I was then in a pitiable condition. I had been stricken with paralysis and locomotor ataxia in addition to my rheumatism. For three years I was helpless. I could not talk because of paralysis, I could not walk because of the locomotor ataxia, and my hands, arms and legs were all out of shape, withered and drawn, from rheumatism. You see my knees now. Just as limber as yours. Last summer I could not move my knees, nor could I get them together within six inches. You see my fingers, straight and nearly recovered from their stiffness. At that time, if I attempted to walk I was liable to go backwards or sideways or fall down as I was to go forwards, because of the lack of power of locomotion. I prayed for years to die and be relieved of my sufferings.

"Had it not been that our Government saw fit to increase my pension from $9 to $17 per month and pay me $3,140 back pension, I should have suffered for the necessities of life.

"Before this time I had treated with the best medical men of Detroit, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Chicago and several other northern cities, but as I said, grew gradually worse until I would not have given $1 for my chances of life last November, and, in fact, would rather have been dead than alive. I only weighed 132 pounds. You see me to-day. I weigh 175 and am free from pain entirely, am slowly but surely gaining strength. You see I get up stairs all right, and I come up these stairs a dozen times a day now. You would not discover that I was ever unable to speak. I shall go to work with my tools as a carpenter soon, so as to help me increase in strength. I was so long unable to take a step that I do not feel hardly safe on 'my pins' yet, although I have not fallen down in several months. I am learning the use of my legs, hands, arms and tongue again. I guess you will think I have recovered the use of the latter if I keep on, but I want to practice up again and make up for lost time and tell every one of my now happy lot.

"I want to say now that for ten years previous to last November, I had been able to perform but little labor, and was totally disabled for nearly three years. I was in an awful shape. Mr. Anthony Stone's family here, with whom I boarded, will tell you they did not expect to find me alive in the morning when they came to wake me, for over two years. But here I am yet, and can walk six or seven miles any pleasant day without discomfort. My appetite is good and I enjoy sleep. If I was taken as bad as ever again to-morrow, I have enjoyed life so well for seven months, that it has a thousand times paid me for the trouble and expense I have been to get relief.

"You ask me how I got relief? Well I had not forgotten that part of it by a good deal. But I am so happy when thinking or talking about my recovery, that I can not go in everything at once. No one but myself can appreciate my condition before last November, and now I want to say to any one who may be affected with either rheumatism, locomotor ataxia or paralysis, that if they will write me, I will make affidavit as to the facts that I have stated and to what I owe my recovery.

"As I stated, last November I was at my worst, could neither eat, sleep, walk, talk, or use my hands or feet in any way. I read in some newspaper of some one who had been similarly affected as I was. This person had sought cure everywhere for years and given up to die, when he commenced taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and was cured. I did not have any faith in them, but was prevailed upon to buy a half dozen boxes for $2.50. I commenced taking them the first of November, and in thirty days by following directions closely, I could see a marked improvement in my condition.

"Well, I kept right on following instructions to the letter. I bought another half dozen boxes and then a third, of which I have left nearly two boxes. It has cost me $7.50 and I am going to make it an even $10 before I stop. Not that I fear that I am not cured for I never felt better every way in my life. But I don't propose to take any chances of quitting too soon.

"Am I sure that Pink Pills cured me? Why should I not be? Did I not suffer the agonies of hell for years without relief? Then I took Pink Pills and came out in the shape I am, as you see me to-day and then ask me if I am sure? Is a man sure he is going to die some time? I am just as sure Pink Pills cured me as you are sure that you are going to a long rest some time. Sure Pink Pills cured me? Well, I am happy to remark yes! A thousand times yes?

"I know positively that I was cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I believe firmly that it is the most wonderful remedy in existence to-day, and every fact I have presented to you is known to my neighbors as well as to myself and they will certify to the truth of my remarkable cure."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after-effect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration, all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature.

These pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade-mark and wrapper at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and are never sold in bulk. They may be had of all druggists.

ANDERSONVILLE PRISON.

Circumstances being such, Nov. 7, 1895, that I was in Americus, 12 miles south of Andersonville, Georgia, where the famous federal stockade was located, and as to resist a visit there was impossible I decided to visit the place where there was so much suffering by prisoners taken by the confederate army during the war. I had my choice how to go there: drive there, or take the train and get off at 2 p. m. and next morning retake the train at 5:30. I took the former though wished I had taken the latter, as it would have given me more time, but the former gave me a better view of the country which the men ran over in there efforts to escape the living hell. I first drove up to the now main gate of the National Cemetery and after registering my name on the visitor's book, started out with an old darkey, who was born within six miles of Andersonville, and was about the stockade while a prison. We went down the old road to the stockade coming first to the northwest corner, then going down the west line till we arrived at the first old well that the men dug, first, with the idea of getting water, then to protect them from the weather. Farther down we came to Providence Spring, which still sends out beautiful sweet water, and over it stands the old stump, from whose roots the water came, the top of which is still as smooth as glass, worn so by the men as they used to sit on it, waiting for their chance to get water, or perhaps too weak to dip it themselves, and waiting to be helped. I took some gravel stones from the spring. The history of the spring is: that the confederate camp was up the creek from the stockade, and all the filth from their camp ran into the creek, and the prisoners had to use the most filthy water and am told they took extra pains to throw stuff into the creek. It is further told that a few soldiers were down to the creek for water, pure water they craved for, and as usual not being able to get it from the creek or from their wells, knelt down by this stump and prayed God to send them water like he did the children of Isreal, and to their surprise and that of the stockade, a spring broke out suddenly, sufficiently large to supply the prison and her thousands of victims just outside the famous dead line. After taking another drink and a last look, we pass on a few feet further and cross the creek and on up to the cite of the main gate, where poor fellows gathered day after day, praying that the news bad come for an exchange and releasing them from this hell.

Passing on we soon came to the southwest corner and after looking at the old fortifications, we went on to the southeast corner, near which is the cite of the old gate to what was called the hospital, and where the dead were brought up. We pass along on the east side, following the line of stockade, coming back to the creek, and from a still standing stockade stick out a piece off. This is where, during the flood, some got away while others stole the timbers for firewood all of which you have read or heard of. Crossing the creek again, I went inside and near the old dead line I cut a cane. Along the creek it has grown up to underbrush, but further up they are raising cotton. Still further on, we came to the northeast corner, near which is the famous well and where the famous tunnel was started, and came so near being successful. I could hardly imagine how these men could have the courage to have driven in this tunnel, and I could imagine how desperate they must have been, to have taken such chances. I did not measure the distance, but it must have been at least 300 feet to the outside. As you remember, they were not successful, yet they came near being so. Some one probably gave the attempt away to gain a personal favor for themselves.

Along the north end I cut some more original stockade sticks. Then coming to the cite of the cemetery road gate, I passed along to the southwest corner, the place of starting and walking upon the old breastworks, I looked down and viewed the field and saw how nicely it was selected for the purpose. It was about one-half mile long and one-fourth mile wide. Each end was elevated so standing on either corner or on any sentry box, any part of the field could be in perfect view. At each corner were works thrown up in case of attack from the outside; at the same time the cannon could be trained across the ground. I should mention that the center of the ground which the creek runs through and by drawing enclosed, you will know the situation fully; and if you don't understand fully, Al Lawrence will soon get his bearing, and will readily understand my drawings, and explain to you and your friends.

I now pass back up the old road some half mile to the place where they buried them, and as I walked up the slight elevation, I imagined I was following an old cannon truck with a couple dozen men piled on it like cordwood, being taken to their last resting place, and it was with a feeling of sadness I did so. And I could imagine that I could hear the yelps of the blood hounds as they were in pursuit of some poor fellows trying to make their escape, and in the distance I heard the report of a gun fired by some darkey, at a squirrel, but I could feel it was a shot that put an end to a federal prisoner unfortunate enough to have fallen into demon's hands. After reaching the brick wall surrounding the National Cemetery we climbed over and came to the graves, now having nice little white headstones of marble, which are numbered commencing with No. 1, giving the name, regiment and company. The graves run north and south, commencing south and going north. Al will explain, if you do not understand my explanations. I looked at graves until I came to the graves of the six buried apart from the rest, who were hung by the prisoners themselves for looting fellow prisoners.

After looking around a while, I got into our carriage and drove back to the town that only a few people now live in and the old buildings look dilapitated, I tell you. I walked down the old trail leading to the stockade and after going into a couple of old buildings, for want of further time I started back to Americus. As I looked at the country, which is now much worn, with only a few negroes making a poor living, it does seem as if God sent his curse on this country about the stockade, for it is a desolate looking country as to prosperity, but to look upon is as delightful a country as one could imagine, and as prisoners were going on the train they must have laughed and cracked jokes, little thinking of the fate that awaited them. 13,352 now lay buried there, beside hundreds who died on the way home or soon after arriving home. As an old confederate officer at Savannah said to me once, "The curse of God rested on the south for the treatment of fellow beings at Andersonville prison stockade."

The south talk of the war freely, say they were whipped and love the stars and stripes, and are willing to meet old G. A. R. men and talk over the different battles. But I have found by experience that to mention the name of Andersonville prison stockade will bring a scowl, then hot words. They will say the first thing, that men were not treated any worse in Andersonville than the federals treated the southern men in northern prisons. I offer $5.00 for an official report. Then when they ask for mine I point to the cemetery and say, "There it is—13,352 starved to death." Then they say, "The men had the same as the south had who were guards there," and I show them that less than 300 confederate soldiers died there, and point to the burial of them in Americus for official facts. The fact is, they have no argument. Then they get mad. The fact is, the south is very much ashamed of this part of the war, and would wipe it out of existence if it were possible for them to do so but as it is, it is a living monument of their heartlessness as men.

A few days after my visit to the stockade I was talking to a G. A. R. man opposite me at the table, at Fort Valley 40 miles north of Andersonville, and I said it was an awful thing etc., when a man said that I had no business to talk of such things. But I informed him that I thought I was in a free country and could talk of what I liked, especially, when I was not addressing my remarks to him; he said, he spent 2 years in a northern prison on Lake Erie. That he would have starved if he had not worked and earned money to buy food with. I told him the fact that he was still alive spoke well as to his treatment, and that if the men at Andersonville had had the same opportunity the death roll would have been some 13,000 less, and probably, 3,000 less, had even axes been given them and an opportunity to have cut trees and build them a little shelter, at least. He went into an awful rage. I mention this as only a sample of several similar cases, but when they tell me the North were just as bad to prisoners as at this stockade, I offer to pay for an official report, as everything now is a matter of record, I point them to official reports and ask them to do the same, that makes a hard argument to buck against. However, I have met plenty of men, who were well posted on Andersonville matters, and talk sensibly about it. That while the south were hard up, yet there was no excuse for the treatment shey gave human beings at this place. I want to visit this place again at some time if possible, till then say farewell to Andersonville prison stockade and the memories of miseries there enacted between 1863 to 1865 by the confederate army officers and government. The burgular proof steel chest in the Bank of Fayette (O.) was a very nice air tight chest, but it wasn't burgular proof. It easily succumbed to dynamite and about $9,000 worth of plunder was secured, covered by $4,000 insurance. It was evidently the work of experts, who have thus far eluded capture.

The amusement goers at Manchester all got out in the cold the other night to see and hear the Boston Concert company. The management of the hall wanted his pay in advance, the bean eater wouldn't agree to that, and the Manchestervillians had to return home without hearing an agreppio agreppioed.

Toledo Blade, 10: Work on the C., J. & M. Jackson extension has been delayed some by the cold weather; still the line will be open by the 1st of March. Two miles of track have been laid out of Addison. The road is being graded all the way from Addison to Jackson, and when the track laying machines start again they will make short work of it.

A poor fund is to be raised and left with the Michigan Central's policeman at the depot and anybody who is really trying to find a long lost brother or a cast off father will be furnished with sufficient cash to help him on his way rejoicing.

It is understood a station will be established on the Cincinnati & Jackson railroad four miles from the depot in Jackson, about half a mile east of the John R. Moffet schoolhouse and on or near the northwest corner of Allen D. Lyon's farm, in the town of Summit. Alonzo Bennett's farm is half a mile east of the proposed station and Mr. Bennett will donate $200 towards building a station house.

And the Detroit Evening News, like the devil, appears to love an infernal liar, at least it always seems to hire one to write on university matters.

Manchester is somewhat disappointed over the decision of the Lake Shore officials not to favor that town with a new depot. The town needs a new depot bad enough. The trouble is, however, that the corporation is situated so near the bottomless pit that the workmen have been dumping 100 car loads of good dirt per day into a sink hole on the Lake Shore near the town for the last four weeks with no result. No money left for depots in that locality.

Gen. Fred B. Wood, of Richmond, Va., sah, is wearing out his right arm shaking hands with his hundreds of friends here. The general is brought back to the cold, but fondly-remembered north by business in Toledo, from which city he arrived last night to become the guest of Major Howell. Fred is still raising corn, celery and other products which are good for the nerves, and the only effect earning an honest living seems to have on him is a slight falling off in flesh and a feeling of pity for his former unregenerate associates of the bar. Mrs. Wood's health has been completely restored under the salubrious influences of the south, and Fred says he may never come back to this part of the country—but he says it as though he didn't just believe himself. Gen. Wood will go to Tecumseh tomorrow, and leave for home on Monday.—Adrian Times.

Manchester comes to the front, Mary Ann, with the best story of the year, says the Ann Arbor Argus. The lady maccabees were organized into a hive of busy bees one night recently. The side saddle goat was brought from its stamping ground in the village hall loft, and some twenty ladies tried to stick on during its amusing gyrations. It is said they were dressed on the plan of the new woman, and that the initiation was a great success—not a success necessarily as a consequence, for it would have been a success anyway. Soon after the night of the initiation, Mrs. X's hired girl told Mrs. Z's hired girl all about the wohderful things that occurred a few nights previous, when the "Mackerbees had their nishiashun." A few days and the whole village was posted in the secrets of the order, and the dry goods clerks were giving trade the grip of the lodge and the small boys were standing on their heads with their fingers in their vest pockets to show passers-by that they were posted in the secret signs of the order. The investigation that followed disclosed the fact that one of the newly made members of the hive thought the initiation was such a novel performance that she had gone through the whole show for her hired girl. The hired girl hadn't been backward in disseminating the good news, and before nightfall the whole ceremony was known the length and breadth of the village. "Dede" Aitken and "Your Uncle Samuel" Boynton are said to be busily engaged in perfecting a new initiatory program for the hives of the future.

The following is taken from the crop report issued by the Secretary of State Jan. 10: "December was a cold, wet month. The mean temperature for the state was 1.1 degrees below, in the southern counties 1.0 degree below, and in the central counties, 1.9 degrees below the normal. In the northern counties it was 1.0, and in the upper peninsula 0.1 degrees above the normal. The average precipitation for the month in the state was 4.89 inches, an excess of 2.68 inches compared with the normal. The precipitation in the southern counties was 5.76 inches, an excess of 3.60, and in the central counties it was 4:38 inches, an excess of 2:16. There was a slight deficiency in the northern counties and an excess of 0.81 inches in the upper peninsula. Milch cows were worth $36.45 per head. Cattle other than milch cows, under one year old were worth, per head, $7.03; between one and two years old, $12.44; between two and three years, $19.16, and three years old and over, $35.70. The average price of sheep under one year old was $1.52, and one year old and over $1.91; and hogs under one year old were worth $3.92, and one year old and over, $7.48. The prices here given are for the state. For each class of horses, sheep and hogs they are higher, and for milch cows and each class of cattle other than milch cows, lower, than the prices ruling in the southern four tiers of counties. Compared with January 1, 1895, there has been a decline in the prices of all farm products named in this report excepting wheat, hay, sheep and cattle. Wheat averages 9 cents a bushel, and hay $5.17 a ton more now than one year ago. Sheep under one year old have advanced 20 cents, and those one year old and over, 27 cents per head, and the several classes of cattle have advanced from 9 to 26 cents per head. The loss on corn is 14 cents, and on oats 11 cents per bushel. The decline in fat cattle is 11 cents, fat hogs, 77 cents, and dressed pork, 72 cents per cwt."

S. W. Demuth and Fred Clark were busy Monday making a lot of bobbers, and Tuesday they caught a lot of minnows, preparatory to a grand fish through the ice. We have not learned what success they had but feel sure they made a fine haul as Sol and Fred are both artists in that line, and the fish just can't help taking the hook for them, they are so fascinating.

At Lancasaer's clothing store there recently was a transformation scene enacted that was marvelous, a regular "presto change and begone." Saturday night, at the close of business, the beautiful holiday trim, which was so much admired by all, still adorned the windows. Monday morning the windows were stripped of their beauty, not a vestige remaining. When and how this was done is a mystery, as all know Charlie's scruples regarding the Sabbath.

The Congregational church was completely filled with a cultured audience to hear the popular orator, J. G. Woolley, on Christian Citizenship. To say they were delighted is speaking within bounds. In addition to his eloquence, his lecture was replete with choice thoughts vividly expressed; his arguments clear, logical and unanswerable, and he won the hearts of all. It was one of the finest entertainments ever given here. Evangelist Stevenson and assistant, Bell, rendered a duett and solo in an artistic manner.

Gat. D. Ellis had rather an exciting experience Monday morning. He was driving his fine span of twin Aragon colts. He drove in front of Sturm's shop on Jackson street, and as he got out of the carriage to tie them, they started. He caught the off one by the bit, but soon saw he could not control them and was liable to be seriously hurt, so let them go, and they did so at a furious gait. In front of D. Woodward's residence is a large stone hitching post, which they endeavored to upset, but it stood firm, and the carriage, which struck it squarely, was a complete wreck. The colts ran into the Blakeman yard and were secured without any damage to either one.

Harper's Weekly

HARPER'S WEEKLY is a journal for the whole country. It deals with the events of the world that are important to Americans.

In carrying out this policy, in 1895, Julian Ralph visited China and Japan, and journeyed through the West; Richard Harding Davis took a trip through the Caribbean Sea; the proposed Nicaragua Canal; Frederic Remington presented studies of Army and Frontier life; Poultney Bigelow attended the opening of the Kiel Canal.

In 1896 like attention will be given to every notable happening. The chief events in art, literature, and music and the drama will be artistically presented. W. D. Howells, in the new department, Life and Letters, will discuss in his interesting way books and the social questions of the time. E. S. Martin's sprightly Essays of the Busy World will be continued. The progress of the Transportation Companies around the World will be followed and Caspar W. Whitney will consider the department of Amateur Sport.

In 896 will occur a Presidential election. In its editorials and through its political cartoons the WEEKLY will continue to be an independent advocate of good government and sound money.

In fiction the WEEKLY will be especially strong. It will publish the only novel of the year by W. D. Howells, and a stirring serial of a Scotch feud, by S. R. Crockett. The short stories selected are of unusual excellence and interest. In every respect HARPER'S WEEKLY will maintain its leading place in the illustrated journalism of the world.

The volumes of the WEEKLY begin with the first number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the number current at the time of receipt of order.

Remittances should be made by Postoffice Money Order or draft, to avoid chance of loss.

Harper's Magazine

Briefs, a new novel by William Black, written with all the author's well known charm of manner, will begin in the December Number, 1895, and continue until May. A new novel by George du Maurier, entitled The Martian, will also begin during the year. It is not too much to say that no novel has ever been awaited with such great expectation as the successor to Trilby. The Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc will continue and will relate the story of the failure and martyrdom of the Maid of Orleans. Other important fiction of the year will be a novelette by Mark Twain, under the title, Tom Sawyer, Detective; a humorous three-part tale called Two Normans from Muddleby, by Langdon Elwyn Mitchell; and short stories by Octave Thanet, Richard Harding Davis, Mary E. Wilkins, Julian Ralph, Brander Matthews, Owen Wister, and other well known writers.

Prof. Woodrow Wilson will contribute six papers on George Washington and his times, with illustrations by Howard Pyle. Poultney Bigelow's history of The German Struggle for Liberty, illustrated by H. Caton Woodville, will be continued through the winter. Two papers on St. Clair's defeat and Mad Anthony Wayne's victory, by Theodore Roosevelt, with graphic illustrations will be printed during the year.

A noteworthy feature of the MAGAZINE during 1896 will be a series of articles by Caspar W. Whitney, describing his trip of 1600 miles on snow-shoes and with dog-sledge trains into the unexplored Barren Grounds of British North America in pursuit of wood-bison and musk-oxen. Mr Whitney's series will have the added interest of being illustrated from photographs taken by himself.

The Volumes of the MAGAZINE begin with the Numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the number current at the time of receipt of order.

How much business can a man do whose system is in a state of disorder? Headache is only a symptom. It is not a disease. The pain in the head is the sign of rebellion. There have been mistakes in diet. There has been overwork and sleepless nights. The machinery of the whole system is demoralized. A business man feels that he cannot afford to be ill enough to quit work. He drags along day after day, makes bad deals, says the wrong thing, and health and business collapse together. There's no need of either disaster. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are gentle, effective renovator of both stomach and bowels. They assist nature without threatening to tear the body piece-meal. There are no griping pains, no nausea. One is a barely perceptible laxative. Two give more noticable results, and they may be continued until the system is throughly renovated, strengthened, and put into harmony with nature. One need not fear a habit" of taking the "Pleasant Pellets." As soon as health is restored they may be discarded without a return of illness because of their absence. Therefore, you don't become a slave to their use.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Jan. 19, Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, Persistence In Prayer.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Luke xi, 5-13; xviii, 1-17.

"Whatever is worth having is worth making for" is an old adage possessing considerable truth. There are many ways of asking. Behind all true petitioning lies a spirit of earnest desire and expectation, a true hope of acquiring. There must also be an appreciation of value of the thing sought. One must have the spirit of insistence. Realizing his need, he must be determined to succeed. "I will not let thee go until thou bless me" usually brings the blessing. Time is also an element of importance in all prayer. It takes time for preparation of heart in asking; it takes more time for preparation of life to receive. Time is needed for adjustments in the world around us in order to the answering of prayer. So we must persist as well as insist. He who knocks at the door and runs away may bring the housemaster to the door, but gets neither goods from his hand nor invitation to enter nor acquaintance. He loses his toll because of his inconstancy.

Throughout the year many children suggest to parents and friends gifts which they would like to receive at Christmas. If any one thing is particularly longed for, it is likely to be often in mind and frequently mentioned. In making presents most people try to find out what will most please the one to whom the gift is to be made. So it naturally happens that we often get what we most desire. How true this is in regard to God and his gifts to us! If any one wonders why he has never received any deep spiritual gift from God, it would be well for such a one to search his own heart and discover how much he has ever really desired heart purity or pardon or any like experience. Modern Pharisees are not much different from the ancient variety. A touch of the Pharisee spirit may often be detected in almost every heart and life if the owner will but search the underdepths of his nature by the light of the word and explore his own nature with the candle of the Lord.

Our Schools.

Much of temptation comes to our young men and young women when away from home and at school. College life may greatly aid or seriously hinder one in the development of right character. Nearly every chapter has some of its members in college or at one of our fitting schools. Let this week be specially devoted to prayer for them. They are to have higher intellectual advantages than can be given to the majority. They ought to make such use of these superior opportunities as to be fitted for grander service in the church of God and in the state. The most important thing is for them to become good men and women. Superior mental education, unless accompanied by corresponding spiritual culture, may prove a curse to themselves and society. They need to feel that the League and the church look to see them climb upward in soul life and come from their college course wiser and better and purer and more godly. Pray for the young people at school.

The Old Foundry.

A rude picture, a name and a memory; that is all! Yet so long as earnest piety endures among men the influence of that name and the associations it recalls shall be precious. The first preaching place opened by the Methodists, it was situated in Moorfields, near London. It had been used as a place for casting cannon and had long been in a dilapidated condition. John Wesley leased it from the government and preached his first sermon in it Nov. 11, 1739. It was repaired and formally opened the following year. Here the first Methodist society was organized, with 70 members. When fitted up, the building contained a dwelling house, bookroom, school, dispensary, chapel for morning worship at 5 o'clock and main chapel furnished with movable benches. Here Wesley lived for 40 years when in London and until he removed in 1779 to City Road chapel.

Anthem of Coming Day.

Above the dissonance of time
And discord of its angry words
I hear the everlasting chime,
The music of unjarring chords.
I bid it welcome, and my haste
To join it cannot brook delay.
O song of morning, come at last!
And ye who sing it, come away!

O song of light and dawn and bliss,
Sound over earth and fill the skies,
Nor ever, ever, ever cease
Thy soul entrancing melodies,
Glad song of this disburdened earth
Which holy voices then shall sing,
Praise for creation's second birth
And glory to creation's King!

—Bonar.

Self Government.

It is of great importance that our young people learn to govern themselves. To do this it is not enough to be outwardly correct in behavior in company, not enough to observe the conventional rules of society. One must know thoroughly what is true and right. This comes only from careful study of God's word. Then one must persistently bring thought and action and feeling into conformity with that standard of excellence. It is not enough to correct a wayward passion after mischief has been wrought. The undisciplined forces of mind and spirit and body must be trained into right ways, and the highest and most worthy aims must be followed till the crude and unformed powers take on strength and form and harden into permanence. Then rightdoing becomes easy because it is natural and the free expression of inner life.

Truth Needs No Crutches.

Truth is strong and sure footed. It needs no crutches. A lie is ever weak and needs another on either side to stay it up. But every added one is only added weakness and a burden for others to sustain till all fall into the pit together.

THE BIG CONSPIRACY.

BANKERS WANT TO CONTROL THE NATIONAL CURRENCY.

England Would Then Be in the Saddle with Benedict Arnolds [illegible] Bidding Behind Banking Counters—Treason Stalks Abroad.

Day by day the fact becomes clearer that in their pretended warfare upon silver and in favor of what they are pleased to call "sound money," the real purpose of the great banking interests of the country is to obtain complete control of the national currency. Not only do they wish to destroy silver, thus making gold scarce and dear, but they would go farther and issue all the paper currency of the country. That is, they want to do away with all government issues of paper, and substitute national bank notes.

The argument used is that as long as we have United States paper money in circulation, it is subject to redemption, and hence a large gold reserve is necessary. But if government paper is all withdrawn, then a gold reserve will no longer be needed.

Let us look at this matter for a moment. It is well known that in general there is very little United States currency presented for redemption except when gold is needed for export. The bimetallists say that the Government should not surrender gold for this purpose, but should redeem with silver, whenever necessary to protect the gold reserve.

That if Larzard Freres or the Ichelheimers or anyone else desires gold for export, they should get it from the banks, which have large sums in their vaults.

Instantly comes the answer that this would never do, because the banks would charge a commission, gold would go to a premium at once; and then comes a vague intimation of all sorts of dreadful things to befall our unhappy country the moment gold reaches a premium.

There are several things which carry our gold abroad. The principal factor is the annual interest charge on our foreign debt, amounting, it is estimated, to $200,000,000. Then there are the adverse trade balances, the expenditures of American tourists, and the dowries of American heiresses married to titled foreigners. All of these must continue to operate, whether our currency consists of one kind of paper or another.

Now suppose the greenbacks and all other forms of United States currency are retired; and the gold reserve is permitted to melt away. It becomes necessary to send $5,000,000 to Europe Where will it be obtained? From the banks, of course. If the banks would charge a commission now, they would do the same after the United States notes are withdrawn. The retirement of government paper would not make them any more liberal. So the only argument ever made in favor of substituting bank notes for government paper utterly fails.

There is, however, nothing in the point made to frequently about gold going to a premium, and the arguments of the gold men themselves prove it. They persistently claim that true bimetallism never existed in France, and in support of the claim it is alleged that from 1805 to 1850 gold was nearly always at a premium in that country. That is the banks charged a commission for making the exchange of gold for silver. For the sake of the discussion, concede this to be true.

Who ever heard of France being ruined by that premium? No one. So far from it she was the most prosperous country in all Europe. The commission was a matter which never affected the coins in circulation at all. It was merely a transaction between the banks and those who wanted gold for export. If the banks sought to charge more than the exporter could afford to pay, he simply did not pay it. Instead of gold, he sent something else—exchange, silver or commodities. And so it would be here.

The cry of a premium on gold is merely a "scare crow." The gold advocates would make people who never see a gold piece from one year's end to another, believe that the moment gold rises a cent or two above some other kind of money, the whole country will go to the dogs. Gold is already at a premium of 100 per cent measured in the products of the farm. The gold champion can see nothing wrong about that; but he is horrified at the thought of a gold dollar being worth a cent or two cents more than some other kind of a dollar. But the point to which the reader's mind is here sought to be especially directed is that the substitution of bank notes for United States notes would do no good. It would certainly add nothing to the output of our gold mines. It would not stop gold from going abroad when needed there; it would bring no gold into the country, it would add nothing to the aggregate supply anywhere, and the scarcity of gold would threaten our finances just as it does today.

The truth is, gold is scarce everywhere, except in a few great banks. Silver has been demonetized, the demand for gold greatly increased, and the whole of the world that has adopted the gold standard is struggling madly for the limited supply. Prices have fallen about one-half and the end is not yet.

This is the real trouble, but the goldite would make people believe that an evil of this kind can be overcome by the simple expedient of changing one kind of paper for another, and giving the banks complete control of our finances.—National Bimetallist.

COMING GOLD GLUT.

The Real Reason Why Bankers Oppose American Bimetallism.

National Bimetallist: Last week we called attention to the increased production of the yellow metal, and pointed out the inconsistencies of those gold champions with whom an increased production of gold and an increased production of silver both prove the same thing, namely; the supreme excellence of the gold standard.

The suggestion was also casually thrown out that ere long the demonetization of gold might be proposed.

An intimation of that kind comes even sooner than we dreamed of.

Mr. W. R. Lawson, in the London Bankers' Magazine speaks of the matter in this way:

"Inflation of paper money and an over-abundance of silver money are matters of common knowledge, but a possible plethora of gold, presents itself as a novel idea. It is, however, an idea which may have to be reckoned with shortly. • • • The right of free coinage of gold may have to be suspended in England as the free coinage of silver was suspended in India and under the Latin Union. Behind that, again, would stand the last resort of all, limitation of its legal tender power. If the gold shut out from the mint lost value in consequence, that would be a matter for the producers to adjust, as other producers have to do. For the evil of excessive currency there is but one remedy, whatever the currency may be; it is restriction; and for metallic money the only known methods of restriction are, first, limited coinage; second, limited legal tender."

The American goldite draws all of his inspiration, primarily, from London, and he ought to study with care the language quoted above. It completely exposes the unsoundness of the fundamental arguments in favor of the gold standard. What becomes of the "intrinsic value" theory, if Mr. Lawson knows what he is talking about? Where is Mr. Atkinson's "fixed and invariable standard?" What of the "hammer" and "fire" tests of which we hear so much?

Mr. Lawson says that the coinage may have to be suspended and its legal tender limited. If the value is "fixed" and "unchanging" how can such an act possibly do any good? It seems, too, that he appreciates the fact (which ought to be self evident) that the gold bullion excluded from the mint would shrink in value; but says that concerns the producer only. What a joke it would be if in a few short years we should have a "gold question" to haunt the souls, and harrow the consciences of the champions of "honest money!" But don't get alarmed, brothers! We won't let London and New York demoralize gold in this country if we can help it. Although you call us "fakirs" and "silver monometallists" we assure you that we want both metals, and Providence permitting, we are going to have them one of these days, not merely in concurrent circulation, one as "token" and the other as "standard," but both as standard.

FREE SILVER OR DEFEAT.

Senator Harris Says Unlimited Coinage Will Alone Save His Party.

Press Dispatch—Senator Harris, the chairman of the Executive Committee of Six, appointed at the Washington conference of last August to organize the free silver Democrats of the country for the campaign of 1896, has sent a letter to his colleagues, the chief feature of which is:

"In the light of recent election results there is, in my opinion, no hope of Democratic success in 1896 unless we can succeed in so organizing the bimetallic Democrats as to secure in the National Convention a plain, distinct and unmistakeable declaration in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold, without regard to the financial policies of any country, and, therefore, it appears to me that we should redouble our efforts to secure such organizations."

Organize.

All men seem to realize that they are called upon to carry unnecessary financial burdens, which in many cases are becoming greater than they can endure, and are seeking relief. They also realize that by acting separately nothing can be accomplished to ameliorate their condition. But in "Union there is Strength."

The National Bimetallic Union, which was formed to conduct a campaign of education and organization in the interest of bimetallism on strictly non-partisan lines, has now reached the point where it can take up the work of organization as was originally planned. It calls upon the friends of bimetallism everywhere to co-operate in the organizations of local unions, with the largest possible membership in every voting precinct in the United States. The head office is at 134 Monroe street, Chicago.

John G. Carlisle in '95.

Carlisle has repeated the somewhat stale assertion that the government should not be engaged in the banking business. Nor is it so engaged. Banking business, in its simplicity, is a money-lending business. The issue of money and its representatives is the business of the sovereign—of the government, and when a government surrenders that particular function to private individuals not only does it place in jeopardy the interests of the people, but it betrays a sacred trust.—The Manufacturer, Rep).

Same Old Trick.

Carlisle—the hand is his, the voice Cleveland's—says destruction of greenbacks is the only thing needed to prosperity. Same thing said two years ago as to repeal of silver act.—Ex.

THE 200-CENT DOLLAR.

The Gold Dollar Is Dishonest and Beyond Hope of Giving Satisfaction.

It is not a cheap dollar in the offensive sense in which it is used by plutocracy, but a cheaper dollar as compared with all honorable ideas of fairness and right. Which is nearer the line of justice, a cheap dollar worth 54 cents or a dear dollar worth 200 cents, and which carries with it the greater power to oppress? Money is bought with the products of labor, consequently the dearer this money is, the more labor is required to purchase it. It is the few who own the money, and the many who must work to earn it; therefore cheaper money benefits the majority, and is in strict accord with the teachings of the constitution. What the people need is a dollar that carries with it a just proportion of labor and no more.—Watchman.

As between a 54 cent dollar and a 200 cent dollar (which the gold dollar practically is) the people should not hesitate in choosing. A 200 cent dollar means lower prices, hard times and suffering. A 54 cent dollar means higher prices, good times and comfort.

But in reality there is no 54 cent dollar, except when measured in gold. What is so termed is a 100 cent dollar in the broadest and most equitable terms. The Mexican dollar, of which we read volumes of contemptuous chaff, will buy as much of the products of labor as the vaunted gold dollar would in 1873.

Not only this, but the Mexican dollar is maintaining that purchasing power, which is simply value in exchange, while the gold dollar is mounting higher and higher all the time.

A dollar to be honest should buy the same this year, next year and every year, just as a yardstick should measure the same today, tomorrow and always. We use the dollar for exactly the same purpose that we do the yardstick, namely, to measure a given "quantity" of the article to be sold. The advocate of the gold standard either knows nothing or cares nothing for equities. If he only has a dollar that is equal to a gold dollar, his ideal is attained, no matter what effect it has upon the fortunes of surging and struggling humanity.

If the people are willing to let it go that way, they must abide the results, and can only blame themselves.

LINCOLN AND CLEVELAND.

Purchasing Power of Their Respective Salaries as Presidents.

Upon the whole we are inclined to agree with Mr. Carlisle that prices are inflated—that is, some prices. For example, Abraham Lincoln received a salary of $25,000 a year, in greenbacks—"inferior," "depreciated," "unsound," "dishonest" money, worth upon an average 50 cents on a dollar in gold or silver.

Mr. Cleveland is paid at the rate of $50,000 a year, in "sound" money, "honest" money, the "best money in the world," "every dollar as good as any other dollar," and each one worth 100 cents in gold, or 200 cents in silver at the bullion price.

Measured in silver bullion, or the necessities of life, Mr. Cleveland's salary is nearly four times that of the immortal Lincoln. Perhaps, though, Mr. Cleveland is nearly four times as good a man as Lincoln, and possibly his services are worth nearly four times as much.

These, however, are only possibilities, and therefore we are prepared to accept the statement that some prices are inflated.—National Bimetallist.

Ridicule No Argument.

No political party ever existed that in its beginnings was more unmercifully ridiculed than the republican party; and perhaps no party was ever more wickedly misrepresented by its opponents. But ridicule did not affect it. It went steadily forward to marvellous victory. And one would suppose that, remembering its own experience, its press would know better than to think that it can crush any political movement by ridicule. Yet that is the chief weapon which is wielded against the advocates of free coinage and the populists. It is both futile and foolish. Both the silver sentiment and the populist movement have grown and are growing. They are elements in our politics that no sensible politician will ignore, for one of the plainest principles of generalship is to recognize the strength of the opposing army. We are constantly told that the "silver craze" is dead. It is not a craze and it is not dead. We are repeatedly informed that the "populist folly" is over. The populist creed is no more a folly than any other political creed and not nearly so much as some; and it is not over. No movement that is backed by men of conviction, as the populist movement is backed, is ever over until it achieves a victory. The Farmer's Voice is not a partisan paper. It discusses political matters from an independent standpoint and it simply gives expression to political facts. It is not responsible for the facts.—The Farmer's Voice.

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

Read This Column and Become a Subscriber at Once.

The Herald for 1896 will endeavor to give its readers as complete a summary of local news, both for Tecumseh and surrounding towns, as it has done in the past. It must be remembered that the Herald has always been willing and anxious to give its space for the publication of every kind of local country news, and we believe our rural subscribers, who form a large portion of our readers, appreciate this fact.

In addition to this, it will be the aim of the paper this year to publish a more comprehensive column of county news than ever before, which will be of especial interest to our patrons. We think that no paper in Lenawee county takes more time and pains in maintaining an efficient corps of correspondents from neighboring towns than the Herald. We do not wish to boast of the amount of matter published in this paper for $1 a year, but would simply invite those who are not now taking the Herald to compare the size and character of the paper with other weekly local publications, not only in Lenawee county but in the state of Michigan, which sell for the same price, or even more.

We do not pretend to give away premiums for nothing at this price, but we do claim to offer some of the cheapest and most valuable combinations ever before given. By special arrangements and liberal advertising we have procured two articles we will give our subscribers the full benefit of. They are articles which should be in every home. The latest and best map of Michigan ever printed, and the latest and most complete History of our own country ever written in one volume and by the greatest living historian, of America.

We print in part the most favorable club list ever presented in these columns and any periodicals not mentioned here will be procured at the lowest price. Here are combination offers in detail.

NUMBER ONE.

Everyone knows something about the great map publishing firm of Rand, McNally & Co. Their atlases and wall maps have gained a world-wide reputation. Their new state map of Michigan is the best one ever issued. It is 41 by 54 inches in size, full mounted with rollers, showing all organized townships, beautifully colored, and sells for $2.00. The former price was $3.00. This map can be furnished at the remarkably low price of $1.40, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included.

NUMBER TWO.

Have you seen Rand McNally & Co.'s large reversible map, with the world on one side and the United States on the reverse? This is the largest map of the United States ever printed on one piece of paper. The map of the world is on Mercator's projection and gives a brief history of every country with population of chief cities, areas, voyages of discoveries etc. This map is especially suited for school use and is just the thing for ready reference in these times of international disputes. This $5.00 map and the Herald for $2.00.

NUMBER THREE.

The People's History of the United States has just been issued by the noted author and historian, John Clark Ridpath, L.L.D. It is the very best history of the United States now extant, comprised within the limits of a single volume. The cloth bound edition is sold only by subscription at $3.75 per copy. We can furnish this great work at only $2.10 per copy, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included. This is an unprecedented offer.

THE DETROIT TRIBUNE.

The Detroit Tribune has long been recognized as one of the greatest newspapers of the Republican party, not only in this state but throughout the west. Although the Tribune has long enjoyed this distinction, it is safe to say that within the last two years its management has greatly raised the standard of the publication as a political, literary, and general newspaper. The Tribune should be read in every household of Michigan. We have made a special arrangement with the management whereby we can furnish the weekly Tribune and HERALD one year for the normal figure of $1.20.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.

The Cosmopolitan is almost too well known to need particular mention. It is simply a marvel that a magazine of such merit can be furnished for the money. A new lithographing press has recently been added to their machinery which will make the paper more attractive than ever. For 1896, 1344 pages and 1000 illustrations for 85 cents if taken with the Herald.

Lenawee Farmers' Institute.

The first annual meeting of the Lenawee County Farmers' Institute will be held at the court house in Adrian, on January 22, 23 and 24, 1896.

In compliance with the provisions of the State Institute law, enacted by the last legislature, the Lenawee County Agricultural Society resolved itself into an Institute Society, with the following officers: Geo. B. Horton, pres.; H. H. Ferguson, sec'y; Wm. H. Wiggins, treas. J. F. N. Bowen, of Tecumseh, is among the list of vice-presidents. H. W. Mumford, of the Agricultural College, is director.

A complete program has been arranged for both forenoon and afternoon of each day, and some of the best speakers of the Agricultural College as well as most successful farmers of this county have been secured to expound the most successful theories and practices of Agriculture. The sessions will be attended with singing and enlivened by discussions of various subjects in an informal way. Alex Richard is down for a paper: Can farmers improve their general condition through organization?

The Grip.

An experience with this disease during all its past epidemics, warrants the bold claim that Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure each and every case if taken in time, and patient takes the ordinary care to avoid exposure. Another thing has been proven, that those who have used Dr. King's New Discovery, escape the many troublesome after results of this disease. By all means get a bottle and try it. It is guaranteed, and money will be refunded if no good results follow its use. Sold by Orr & Temple. 4

Rev. Jas. Wright, who has been undergoing treatment for tumor, near Cayuga Lake, N. Y., is reported as doing nicely.

Jas. Harrison and wife who live in Raisin, south of Ridgeway, were presented with a nine pound boy, Sunday.

Miss Martha Clarkson, of Macon, who is now at Wm. Osgood's under the treatment of Dr. Hardy, is steadily improving.

The Spiritual lecture given Tuesday night for the edification of our citizens in the new philosophy was rather slimly attended.

The joint installation of the K. O. T. M. and L. O. T. M. will occur on Friday Jan. 31. Full program and particulars will appear later.

The phonograph concert, of J. B. Coller, which was given in Exelby hall last Saturday night was very good, but rather poorly attended.

O. B. Lenardson drove to Tecumseh, Wednesday and took the Lake Shore to Sylvania, Ohio, to attend the funeral of his uncle, Lewis Potter.

In winter prepare for summer. Several of our prudent and far seeing citizens are getting ready for next July by filling their ice house with nice cool ice.

The drawing of W. J. Helm's harness came off last week Thursday and it was secured by Horatio Underwood, who held the lucky number, 26. It cost him 9 cents.

O. B. Lenardson has no less than three of those comforters on the back of his neck, and is very choice of them. But of the two he is more choice of his new merschaum pipe which he pets with great care.

Will Stuart, while skinning a sheep which had died, accidentally pricked his leg with the knife which he was using. After some days, swelling set in and Dr. Hardy was called. The case is now quite serious and he may loose his leg.

Last week Thursday Frank Hoagland and Miss Helen Craig were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Craig, in Milan. The groom is well and favorably known in Britton and the couple have the best wishes of our citizens from now on.

Britton is again in the lead, and when other places are raising the calamity howl, she is engaged in new enterprises. Andrew Gogoline this week erected the frame work of a new building to be used as a restaurant. It is situated just south of the Wabash track beyond the depot.

It is rumored that one of our business men milked the cow of the Sunday school superintendent recently in the still watches of the night. Others said he milked her in a pail, but investigation proved that however it was done, it was not the business man at all but some bad boys, who did it.

We wish to acknowledge an error in last week's issue and make apology for same by a correction. It was stated that Miss Luella Haynes was given a surprise party in honor of her 28th birthday. This was giving Miss Haynes more credit than is her due, for the records show her age to be only twenty. Right on us.

The surprise parties are not coming quite so thick and fast lately, but still we are called upon to record a very pleasant one which occurred last Thursday night as a farewell to Harvey Weller. He has since moved his household goods to Tecumseh, and the smoke of his wigwam no longer mingles with that from the chimneys of the Midway.

Frank Gavigan, the Wabash brakeman, who had his leg crushed by a freight train, near Britton, December 5, was today removed from St. Joseph's hospital in this city, to the railroad hospital at Peru, Indiana. Dr. Parish, the company's physician of the hospital, came on for the purpose of attending his removal. The young man has borne his severe injuries remarkably well, having suffered no fever since the third day after the operation.—Adrian Times.

A GRAND TRIUMPH.

Baffled Many Times but Success Comes at Last.

(From the Grand Rapids Press.)

The following incident would be hard to believe if it had not occurred right here in Grand Rapids, and investigation by our representative has placed it beyond the reach of doubt. These are the facts in detail: Mr. J. H. White of No. 25 Hanley Place, has been an instructor in penmanship in different business colleges for the past fourteen years. He says: "Last October I was suddenly taken ill. I consulted a physician, who said the pain was from 'gravel' stones; gradually grew worse; the pain was in my back and side. My back swelled up in a great ridge, and I finally grew so bad that I was taken to bed, as helpless as a child. I passed blood, and when the pain was at its worst I was like one crazy. The doctor injected morphine to give me relief, but further than that he said he was powerless, and nothing would do me any good but a surgical operation. I believe my flesh was literally cooked in the attempts to relieve my agony, everything was used, mustard plasters, turpentine, hot cloths and all such things. I was in this condition, given up by the doctor, and almost out of my mind with suffering. I commenced taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and really I felt easier in 20 minutes. After about two hours I had a passage of urine, and passed blood and some 'gravel' stones which greatly relieved me. I rapidly improved. I took in all six boxes, and I feel to-day entirely well. Mine has been a wonderful case. I feel that I cannot say anything strong enough for Doan's Kidney Pills. My great wish is that they may become well known. They will prove a boon to mankind.

Medical Writers.

The best medical writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will, by its own action, reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh during the past few years proves that only one remedy has met these conditions, and that is Century Catarrh Cure. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and surgeons concede this fact. The most distressing symptoms yield to it. For sale by C. A. The full intensity of living is reached only by the perfectly healthy. Sickness discounts the capacity for enjoyment. If his body is all out of order and run-down, he will not be able to enjoy anything, no matter how full of enjoyment it may be for other people. If he is just a little bit out of order, if he "is not sick, but doesn't feel just right" he will only be able to enjoy things in a half-hearted sort of way. The nearer he is to being perfectly well, the nearer will his capacity for enjoyment be perfect. If this condition doesn't exist, something ought to be done. That means nine cases in ten the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It works directly on the digestive organs, and on the blood and through these on every tissue of the body. It makes the appetite good, digestion and nutrition perfect and supplies rich, red blood to all the tissues, building up solid, healthful flesh.

A deluge of rain broke the long drought in New Mexico.

"Going into a decline." How often do we hear this expression. What does it mean? It means that people are losing flesh, growing thin, wasting. The way to correct this condition is to improve the digestion. The condition arises from an inability to eat and digest food. In fact food does more harm than good because it ferments and putrifies in the stomach, developing poisonous substances which when absorbed cause various disorders. What is required is that the stomach be made to perform its duties The Shaker Digestive Cordial is a food already digested and a digester of foods as well. It will make the stomach healthy. OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 10, '96.

There is no exaltation among the silver men in Congress over the reporting of a bill for the free coinage of silver to the Senate as a substitute for the House bond bill. This may be because it was well known from the first that such action would be taken, or it may be because of the general knowledge that the substitute cannot possibly become a law; at any rate it is true. It will pass the Senate by a decisive majority, notwithstanding the shrewd move of Senator Chandler, who has posed as a special friend of silver, in introducing a bill providing for a popular loan by the sale of interest bearing postal notes at all money order postoffices, which he has given notice of his intention to offer as a substitute for the free coinage bill. But there are silver men who regard it as a mere waste of time to put the bill through the Senate. They say that Speaker Reed would not give the bill a chance to fes through the House, even if two-thirds of that body wanted to vote for it, and, of course, all the world knows that President Cleveland would take especial pleasure in vetoing a free coinage bill, should it by any possibility ever succeed in reaching him.

The members of the Venezuelan Boundary Commission are engaged in the preliminary work of their investigation. The head-quarters of the commission will be in Washington, and it may be that its work can all be done without leaving the city, but circumstances will decide that. Regardless of the personal convenience of its members the Commission will endeavor to render a decision which will forever settle what has been a troublesome question for more than half a century. So far the attitude of everydody concerned seems to be to aid the commission in its search after the correct boundary line between British Guiana and Venezuela.

The sessions of the house this week have been very short, most of the work done being in committee rooms.

A member of the House committee on Territories said this week: "No one can tell what will be done by Congress, but it is my opinion that enabling acts will be passed at this session authorizing Statehood for New Mexico, Arizona, and Oklahoma, and that Indian Territory will be placed under a regular Territorial form of government. My opinion is based upon those expressed by other members of the House."

In a speech strongly attacking the Supreme Court decision against the income tax, which he declared was a "matter of surprise to every intelligent lawyer in the country, and especially to those of us in Congress, who were engaged in formulating the legislation," Senator Vest used some strong language against the domination of the gold kings, and in favor of the free coinage of silver. He ridiculed the idea that there is enough gold outside of what is held by the banks to take up the $100,000,000 bond issue which has been advertised by Secretary Carlisle, and concluded by saying: "The conflict is irrepressible. If we are to have the gold standard and the domination of the national banks, go to the people and have them rivet the chains. But I believe the people will respond against wiping out one-half the money of the world, and in striking down the financial despotism that is upon us."

According to Senator Mills, of Texas, the republicans adopted the democratic idea of a tariff for revenue only, when they put the tariff bill through the House that is now in the Senate, but neither Mr. Mills, nor any other democratic Senator, has announced his intention to vote for the bill. If it represents democratic ideas, the democrats are not supporting those ideas with any degree of unanimity, although it is expected that several democratic Senators will vote for the bill, now that the republicans have decided not to amend it, but Mr. Mills isn't one of them.

Several representatives of free Cuba are here trying to get the belligerency of the revolutionists recognized by this government. They have documentary evidence in plenty showing the strength of the Cubans, and the little news that has come from Cuba this week has been greatly in their favor, but they are not making the progress they expected. They get all the individual assurances of sympathy they want, but officially the administration and Congress are dumb on the subject. It is now certain that unless the Cubans force things sooner by driving the Spaniards out of Havana, the administration isn't going to recognize them, unless directed by a joint Congressional resolution to do so. There is no doubt that such a resolution would be adopted with a whirl if a chance was given, but Speaker Reed has positively declined to recognize anybody to offer any such resolution, unless it comes as a report from the committee on Foreign Affairs. There are some very ugly rumors floating around Washington, to the effect that a powerful lobby well supplied with Spanish gold is working on members of the administration and of Congress to prevent recognition of the Cubans as long as possible, in order to give the Spaniards more time in which to try to put down the revolt. It wouldn't be the first time Spanish money had been spent in Washington to influence official opinions.

Another Deer Killed.

Train No. 6, of the Mobile and Ohio road, which left Mobile Monday evening at 4:45, December 9, killed a fine large doe at Three-mile creek, just north of Mobile. This is the third incident of the kind that has happened on railroads running out of Mobile, and this section of the country must certainly be a paradise for hunters.—Mobile Register, Dec. 11th, 1895.

The folly of prejudice is frequently shown by people who prefer to suffer for years rather than try an advertised remedy. The millions who have no such notions' take Ayer's Sarsaparilla for blood-diseases, and are cured. So much for common sense. 1w

Ida Whipple-Millard vs. Jennie Hayes. Assumpsit. The suit grew out of the sale of millinery stock. The sale was for $1,000; half was paid, and a note was to be given for the balance. Defendant claims that she went back to Chicago immediately after the sale, leaving plaintiff in charge, and that when she returned there was a misunderstanding about what goods were in the stock, and she refused to pay or give a note for the other $500. A suit resulted. The verdict awarded the plaintiff judgment for damages.

The suit of T. R. Kyle vs. H. W. Stevens, began at Clinton in November to determine the ownership of property belonging to the late Wm. Anderson, was decided Saturday. The plaintiff got judgment for $61.80, with costs.

The program is as follows:

About forty people from Tecumseh and surrounding towns went to Adrian last Saturday evening to hear Robert G. Ingersoll in his lecture on Lincoln. Though the famous lecturer has lost some of the fire of oratory, which has characterized him in the past, he is still able to hold an audience at pleasure, and his analysis of the qualities which make a great character like Lincoln's, was truly masterful. It was not a religious topic, and those who expected to hear that subject attacked, we are glad to say, were disappointed.

A party of enterprising young gentlemen and their ladies started for Adrian last Monday evening in a sleigh. They got there, too, but not on runners. When they arrived at Dove's celery farm they made a negotiation by which wagon wheels were substituted for the sleigh and then rolled on their way rejoicing. Though the boys ware a little lame on their judgment of good roads, they made good their lack by walking a good share of the way home, and the party wandered into Tecumseh by daylight Tuesday morning, sadder but wiser mortals. The way of the transgressor is hard.

Harrison-Smith Litigation Reopened at Kalamazoo.

Kalamazoo, Jan. 15. The second chapter in the Harrison-Smith land case was opened here Tuesday by the filing of a bill in behalf of William Harrison, of Grand Rapids, against Maria M. Smith, Frank B. Smith, Henry B. Smith, of Three Rivers, Dallas Boudeman and John W. Adams, of this city. The bill sets up the former suit, which resulted in a judgment of $74,000 in Harrison's favor, and it is then alleged that Frank B. Smith used $28,000 of the Harrison notes, fraudulently procured, in repurchasing from a mortgagee, after foreclosure, a farm to which Harrison lays claim. The bill prays for an injunction, and also for a receiver to take rents and incomes from the land pending the litigation.

JOKE ENDS IN DEATH.

Motorman Johnson's Cold Hands Result in His Getting Shot.

Grand Rapids, Jan. 13.—Albert Johnson's practical joke on G. S. H. Holmes, a fellow boarder, Sunday morning, brought on a fight and ended in a tragedy. Johnson was a motorman on the street railway, and when he returned to his boarding house after a morning trip he thrust his cold hands down Holmes' back. Holmes remonstrated angrily, and soon the two were fighting. Holmes finally broke away, ran to his room, secured a revolver and returned, fired five shots at Johnson. Three of the shots took effect and Johnson fell dead. Without putting on his coat, shoes or hat, Holmes ran to the police station, two blocks away, and gave himself up, arriving before the police had heard of the tragedy.

Holmes graduated from the state university two years ago, and is also a graduate of the agricultural college. He is a civil engineer by profession, and came here a short time ago to accept a position in a large machine shop. He is very much distressed by the tragedy, but has already retained a lawyer and had his picture taken to show the bruises he received in the fight with the apparent purpose of setting up a claim of self defense.

The amount of wheat sown is estimated at 108 per cent. of the average year, and the present condition is estimated at 96 per cent. compared with average years. The following officers were elected:

President, W. A. Coombs, Coldwater; vice president, C. B. Chatfield, Bay City; secretary and treasurer, J. J. Hausline, Lansing; executive committee, H. F. Colby Dowagiac; J. S. Titus, Battle Creek, and G. M. Almendinger, Ann Arbor.

IMPORTANT DECISION.

It Affects Life Insurance Companies of All Classes.

Lansing, Jan. 11.—Attorney General Maynard has given Commissioner of Insurance Giddings an opinion that is of great importance to life insurance companies both in and out of the state. The attorney general holds that under act 187 of the laws of 1887 as amended last session cooperative or assessment life insurance companies organized in another state who contract in their policies to pay insured, an endowment or dividend during lifetime, cannot legally do business in this state, or can they be authorized to issue in Michigan limited payment life policies or agree to give cash surrenders, paid up insurances or accident policies. He also holds that associations cannot be legally organized to do an accident business in which they agreed to pay to insure beneficiary, in case of death, by accident, less than $1,000.

A PROUD RECORD.

Lansing, Jan. 13.—The annual report of Simeon R. Billings, commissioner of railroads, says that during the year 1895 there were constructed in Michigan 97 miles of new road and that there were approved 15 maps of new lines, representing a total of 207 miles. During the year two roads were taken from the hands of the receivers, after being sold on mortgages, and the companies reorganized. A receiver was appointed for but one road. There are 7,585 miles of track operated in Michigan. Eighty companies, an increase of two, filed reports for the year. Of this number, 69 do a general railroad business, seven are used for the transportation of forest and mining products exclusively, while two provide transfer and two terminal facilities. Commissioner Billings says that the private mining and logging roads invariably escape railway taxation, owing to the fact that they are subject to taxation the same as other property, and the recommendation is made that all private roads be placed under the general railroad law, and be required to pay a specific tax and be amenable to the police regulations enacted for the protection of railroad employes. The reports filed with the commissioner show that not a single passenger was killed during the year by a railroad accident, but two met death through their own negligence. The report condemns the law requiring companies to sell 1,000-mile tickets for two-thirds the fare ordinarily charged, denouncing this provision as one which requires discrimination instead of forbidding it. The recommendation is made that the laws be amended so as to require each road or class of roads to charge but one price for the same service, and make such price as low as its earning capacity will allow.

Peep into your Kitchen and see what they're washing and cleaning with. You think it's Pearline. You've told your servants to use it. But look at the package and see that it's the genuine article. A house-to-house canvass discloses the fact that many women think they are using Pearline, when an examination of the package proves the stuff to be some of the "as good as," which peddlers, unscrupulous grocers and prize-givers are trying to work off upon a long-suffering public. If you're using these imitations you're not enthusiastic about Washing Compounds; you couldn't be.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 349 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

UNTOLD MISERY FROM RHEUMATISM

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For five years, I suffered untold misery from muscular rheumatism. I tried every known remedy, consulted the best physicians, visited Hot Springs, Ark., three times, spending $1000 there, besides doctors' bills; but could obtain only temporary relief. My flesh was wasted away so that I weighed only ninety-three pounds; my left arm and leg were drawn out of shape, the muscles being twisted up in knots. I was unable to dress myself, except with assistance, and could only hobble about by using a cane. I had no appetite, and was assured, by the doctors, that I could not live. The pains, at times, were so awful, that I could procure relief only by means of hypodermic injections of morphine. I had my limbs bandaged in clay, in sulphur, in poultices; but these gave only temporary relief. After trying everything, and suffering the most awful tortures, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Inside of two months, I was able to walk without a cane. In three months, my limbs began to strengthen, and in the course of a year, I was cured. My weight has increased to 165 pounds, and I am now able to do my full day's work as a railroad blacksmith."

Scenes on Entering Honolulu—The City Itself.

Everybody on board the Australia was awake early, eager to catch the first glimpse of land. Our voyage, though a short one, owing to unfavorable weather, seemed long. We were assured it was the worst voyage the Australia has made for years.

Day dawned slowly, and the dark outline of the silent priest became more and more distinct. A murmur of voices arose from the passengers below, who were tumbling out of their berths, and hurriedly dressing. I had been sitting watching Father Pamphile but a short time when two bells struck. Just then Mr. Waterhouse, who had long been authority on matters concerning the islands, came up and said we were approaching and would soon be in sight of Oahu. He said Molokai was off on our larboard. During the night we had been within three miles of it, but owing to the darkness the captain had put about and stood out to sea, instead of going in at once.

In a little while it was light enough for us to see Molokai lying like a cloud mist on our left. It was difficult at first to distinguish between the dimly outlined mountain ranges and the clouds. In a few moments Oahu could be seen ahead of us. First we discerned the long needle-like point of land called Kualoa Point, and then Mukapu Point, between which and Koko Head lies a valley in which is the Waimanola Plantation. An approaching steamer is first seen from this plantation, and its arrival telephoned to Honolulu.

So we glided on over the summer sea, a hundred pairs of anxious eyes drinking in the beautiful scene. Some one softly hummed:

"Land ahead, its fruits are waving
O'er the hills of fadeless green....."

When we came nearer still, we could see the green fields of a sugar plantation in the valley. This valley from our distance did not seem over a hundred square rods in area, tho' it really covers several thousand acres. Like specks of snow the houses could be seen nestling in orange groves or among waving palms and other trees of the tropics, the tall cocoanuts fairly towering into the sky.

A school of dolphins soon attracted our attention. They were shooting all about the ship, and could be seen skimming through the clear water, occasionally leaping entirely out of it, and then plunging head first back again. A cloud of small flying fish next appeared trying to escape from the vessel, or perhaps from the sharks, which abound in these waters.

Rabbit Island next came into view near the shore, looking from the ship like a long barren rock. This island is historically interesting as being the place where the arms were landed in January, 1895, when the rebels attempted to overthrow the young republic. Koko Head, an extinct volcano, was passed and, beyond, Diamond Head lay in plain view. We were told that when we had passed that we would be able to see the Bay of Honolulu.

Diamond Head is also an extinct volcano. It has a crater or hollow basin, and projects out to sea in a way that makes it a valuable point to fortify. Properly entrenched, Diamond Head would be impregnable. This mountain also has historic interest. In January, 1895, the rebels, having been driven from the valley below, took a position in this stronghold, which they held until forced out by the soldiers of the republic. From there they fled to the mountains.

The long, low shore, extending from Diamond Head to the city, lay on our right. Tall cocoanuts and waving palms, date trees and banana plantations, with the far receding hills of fadeless green, formed an enchanting scene. The pilot boat, a mere speck at first, was coming toward us, and growing larger each moment. In addition to the pilot, it brought Dr. Wood, of the Board of Health. Since the cholera in September last, the Board of Health, has been more than usually careful about incoming ships. Great caution is taken with vessels from China and Japan especially. One ship from Japan was detained forty-eight hours in quarentine before she was permitted to land a single passenger or any part of her cargo.

With the pilot boat came several gentlemen to meet their wives and children on the Australia, and there were numerous happy greetings.

"How are you, Charlie?"

"Have you all been well?"

"What sort of a voyage have you had?"

"Choppy and rough!"

A hundred like greetings rang out over the ship's side, while those who had friends and relatives in the pilot boat were dancing with joy. There were others who were disappointed. All the husbands and fathers could not meet wives and children, and I heard one little curly-headed boy of six who had strained his eyes to make out a well-beloved form remark with a sigh:

"Everybody's papa come but mine. He don't love me."

The Australia is an old acquaintance in Honolulu, and her advent was greeted with glad cheers and shouts of joy. Some of the little boats of the Kanaka boys ran along side of us, their owners giving cheer after cheer. The simple fellows often leaped from their canoes to the ladder suspended over the vessel's side, and came on board.

At last we came alongside the dock, and it seemed as if the whole town had turned out to meet us; the dock was literally lined with people; a sea of faces, most of them of the dark-skinned Kanaka, were upturned toward us. Continuous shouts and yells came from below, and when the gang plank was thrown out, the people came rushing on board to greet relatives and friends.

Those who expected to go ashore at once, were doomed to disappointment. The tide of humanity rushed on board, and we were driven back to our staterooms. Then came a long worry over baggage. Three or four expressmen were on board, taking up checks and the numbers of berths, and instructing everybody to wait patiently until the uproar had subsided, and then make our way to the dock where the custom house officials would go through our luggage.

I sank into a steamer chair with as much resignation as a man can have, to wait until everybody got done shaking hands and saying:

"How are you?"

"Well, how have you been?"

"First rate, have you got over your cholera scare?"

"Yes, how did you leave 'Erisco? and how did the elections go?"

When the excitement which followed our arrival had somewhat subsided, I determined to try to make my way on shore. With an arctic overcoat on my arm I descended from the gang plank, wiping the perspiration from my face, and approached the overworked custom-house officials. There were a hundred or more people present, each anxious to have his or her trunk, handbag, or valise inspected first. The officers were busy opening every sort of satchel and traveling convenience, and plunging their hands into soiled linen, and superannuated neck-ties, and other sacred articles of apparel. In one valise were found some pistol cartridges which were seized by the customhouse officer, who made their owner dive into his hip-pocket and pull out the revolver, which with the cartridges was held until he could prove he was not a filibuster, but a man of good character. Another gentleman had a Winchester rifle in his trunk, which was taken charge of in the same manner. The arms were receipted for, and upon proof that the person having them was a peaceful citizen, a permit was given to carry them.

After a long, wearisome wait, the inspection of my own baggage came. This trying ordeal over, I passed through the street, where I met a Kanake coachman who asked:

"Wantee la carriage?"

"Yes, take me to the Arlington," I answered, and jumping into his one-horse surrey, I was driven to the hotel, through an avenue of palm, date and fig trees. I seemed to have suddenly entered an immense flower garden. Alighting I asked the driver his fare. He answered:

"Two bits."

Shillings, quarters, and cents are never used in Hawaii. Twenty-five cents is two bits, fifty cents four bits, and seventy-five cents, six bits.

No one had yet appeared to welcome me. I saw some people on the lanna, or porch, and some monkeys in a cage, but none seemed to have any special interest in my arrival. I stepped upon the lanna and then a lady appeared and called a Chinaman, telling him to take me to No. 16. The almond-eyed Celestial picked up my valise and gave my overcoat a stare. That overcoat was as much a curiosity in the city as a native Samoan in full dress would be in New York or Chicago.

We had only gone as far as the passageway between the two houses when a Japanese girl, with hair puffed and feet bare, came running toward us chattering like a monkey. She took my valise, and John Chinaman disappeared. The lady Jap then went out into a vast court laid out in regular walks bordered by tall palms, cocoanut trees, banana plants, and every variety of bright foliage and flowering shrub of the tropics. The air was burdened with the sweetest of perfumes, and the gentle cooing of ring doves floated about me. It seemed more of a park than a hotel. On either side were rows of neat little cottages, all belonging to the hotel, and all embowered in the verdure of the tropics.

My female escort, carrying my valise, walked down the lawn path, I following. We soon passed through a gate into the street. Turning abruptly to the left, she entered another building and ascended a flight of stairs, with me, carrying my overcoat and perspiring at every pore, bringing up the rear. In a wide corridor above, we were met by another Japanese called Ito, who took my valise to room No. 16.

My apartment was large and sunny. A great window opened on the porch on the west, and I sank into a seat, for a few moments gazing out upon a rear court. The scene was bathed in the sunlight of June, although I was told that this was as cold weather as one might ever expect in Honolulu. The houses in Honolulu, by the way, are constructed without furnaces or other heating apparatus. There is but one fire-place for heating on the island, which is at the volcano-house on Hawaii.

Though Honolulu is a tropical town in every respect, it is impossible for one to be ashore five minutes without realizing that, after all, the energy and propelling power in this wonderful land are not tropical, but Anglo-Saxon. Wherever there is directing energy or organizing power, or enterprise, or action, there one will find the American. Americanism predominates in the intelligent and ruling spirits of the Islands. This is shown in a hundred ways. The very republic was declared on the fourth of July in order that the day might be doubly endeared to the hearts of the people. Almost as much interest is manifested here in the affairs of the United States as in the States themselves. The results of the elections and the policy of the administration are watched with the keenest interest.

The American is chief in business and politics. He is in the church, the school, the counting-room, on the railroad, and steamer; at the dry-dock and the foundry; at the lumber yard, at the mill, and the tow-boat. He is on the wharf when you land, on the street as you pass, at the hotel when you register. Nothing goes on successfully without him. He fills teeth, cuts hair, mends shoes, builds houses, shoes horses, mends coffee-pots, sells furniture, medicines and hardwares, and fits clothes. In fact, you rub up against him everywhere, at least where there is evidence of combined intelligence and progress.

In hospitality the people of Honolulu have no superiors. The traveler is received with the warmth of the South, and no pains are spared to make him comfortable.

Leap Year.

The present year of grace, 1896, enjoys the distinction of being the last leap year of the 19th century. The year 1900, which ends the century, is not a leap year, and consequently February will not have the 29th day until 1904.

Many people are mystified by the fact that 1900 is not a leap year. This is because the rule for leap year is not fully understood. Most people assume that it happened every fourth year—reasoning that the revolution of the earth around the sun is accomplished in 365 1-4 days, and that the fraction makes just a day every fourth year.

But the time of the earth's yearly revolution is not exactly 365 days, 6 hours. It is 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 49.62 seconds. The Gregorian rule is, that every common year which can be exactly divided by four, and every centurial year which can be exactly divided by 400, are to be leap years. In 400 years there is a difference of only 23.38 seconds, which only amounts to a day in 3,866 years.

Hence, 1900 is not a leap year, because it is not divisible exactly by 400, while 2000 will be the next centurial leap year.

General Harrison on the Presidency.

Ex-President Benjamin Harrison will discuss "The Presidential Office" very comprehensively in his "This Country of Ours" series in the forthcoming February Ladies' Home Journal. He will detail the provisions and methods of electing a Chief Magistrate, and will have much to say bearing upon the eligibility of a president for re-election; will give his views as to the length of the Presidential term, and express rather decided opinions relative to the annoyance to which Presidents are subjected from office-seekers. The article is practical, based upon experience and observation, and is very timely. Gen. Harrison believes that the fears (expressed by the framers of our Constitution) that the power of the office is such as to enable an ambitious incumbent to secure an indefinite succession of terms have never been realized.

C. J. Brunskill, the young "phenom," has signed with the Toledo's and will twirl the sphere for the coming season.

Adrian Times: David M. Aldrich, the Cambridge man charged by his wife for assault and battery, was acquitted by a jury in Justice Humphrey's court, at 8 o'clock Monday evening.

Adrian Press. The Clinton Plow Co. has secured the services of Peter Van-Huffel, of South Bend, for Superintendent of the works up there. In less than three weeks, Ed. Smith, Will. Kimball and By. Randall will yell "Hello Pete"—just the same as though he had lived there a whole year.

What is known as the Perrin comet is now visible to the unassisted eye. It is located in the eastern constellation Libra and is heading toward the sun at a rattling pace. If you want to gaze upon this fast visitor, rise early, and about 5.15 a. m., look at the horizon a little south of east, and you'll see it, if you have luck.

Monroe Democrat: An Adrian milk dealer sold his business and agreed not to re-engage in it for three years; but he started a new route and solicited his old customers. The other dealer enjoined him and his milk business is re-strained. If a re-strainer were served on other dealers there would be fewer hairs in the coffee.

Grant Fellows, of Hudson, will address the Lincoln club at Grand Rapids Feb. 12, and the Alger club, Detroit, on the 23d of that month. Grant is a favorite orator, successful lawyer and very popular in this country. He is also one of the rising factors of the G. O. P. in this district and political honors can be predicted for him.

Mercury is an evening star throughout the month, and toward its close is in good position for observation. It comes to greatest eastern elongation on Jan. 23d, and sets about an hour after sunset. Venus is a morning star, but it is beginning to approach the sun, and does not rise as early as in December. It is seldom we are offered as good an opportunity to see the planet Mercury, which has its home so near the sun. The mercury must stand pretty high there, too.

Adrian Times: John Wildley, aged 66, an inmate of the county house, committed from Clinton, died early Saturday morning, from an abscess. The fact that Sunday followed the day of death, was the only thing that saved the remains from being sent so Ann Arbor, railroad connections making their transportation impossible on that day. The law requires that a body shall not be shipped until twenty-four hours, after death, and not after the expiration of twenty-six hours. Wildley had relatives in Macon, but they refused to bury the remains.

Adrian Press: Alf James, of Tecumseh, and Miss Metta McBride, of the same place, were married last evening. Our old friend has the warmest congratulations of the Press upon the step taken by him, and upon his choice of a life partner. Tecumseh ladies are advised that there are several available candidates for the degree of husbandry over there, and that this, the last leap year of the century, is a splendid opportunity for the ladies to cure them of their bashfulness. Go profit by the example, in this case, young ladies of Tecumseh.

List of patents granted Michigan inventors: M. Berdan, Plymouth, fence wire tightener; G. W. Bond, Adrian, achorage for fence posts; T. An exchange says: A story is told to the effect that a married lady of a certain city had a birthday anniversary a few days since, when her husband presented her with a handsome banquet lamp. He was very much flattered when she told him she intended to give it his name, until he asked her the reason for such a peculiar proceeding. "Well," said she, "you know, dear, it has a good deal of brass about it, is handsome to look at, requires a good deal of attention, it is not remarkably brilliant, it is sometimes unsteady on its legs, liable to explode when half full, flares occasionally, always out at bedtime and is bound to smoke."

Baldness is often preceded or accompanied by grayness of the hair. To prevent both baldness and grayness, use Hall's Hair Renewer, an honest remedy. 1w

Miss Belle Gordanier, of Manchester, was the guest of Mrs. Albert Kishpaugh last Friday.

I. S. Osborne, of Eldy, New Mexico, was the guest of W. S. Whittlesey on Wednesday.

Mrs. Wm. Keyser, of Tecumseh, was the guest of her son Charles and family over Sunday.

Lester Coller and wife and Lavern Sage, of Macon, were calling on Clinton friends Sunday.

A. H. St. John and H. W. Saxton were in Tecumseh Tuesday. The latter had business with Treasurer Gen. Marsden.

A public dancing party is to be given at the town hall this evening, with Bert Jones as floor manager.

Will R. Muir was quite sick the last of the week, but was able to take his place at the block Wednesday morning.

Miss Adah Cullen, of Tecumseh, who has been the guest of Mrs. Chris Wallinger, several days this week, returned home yesterday.

Mrs. Carrie Woodward, who came to install the tent officers last Friday night, returned to her home in Hudson Saturday afternoon.

The men of this community are exceedingly polite to the ladies just at present. All are anxious for an invitation to the leap year party.

They say that George VanGieson has commenced crimping his hair for the party, the 29th and Darr Bainbridge is practicing the highland fling.

Rev. J. Heritage again filled the Baptist pulpit Sunday. It has seemed good to have him among us as of yore. He left Monday morning for Chicago.

The Episcopal social will be held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. VanDeMark's next Thursday afternoon. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Garland Gillespie rather enjoys playing the good samaritan, providing he is not disturbed of his sleep until after 2 a. m. He draws the line at that hour.

Will D. St. John arrived from Chicago Wednesday morning, for a visit with friends in the place of his nativity, his son, who is traveling on the road, was here yesterday.

The Baptist society have not as yet extended a call to any minister but the committee are in correspondence with several and it is expected that ere long one will be secured.

On account of the mission in St. Peter's church, Tecumseh, the services at St. John's Episcopal church will be at the hour of 2:30 p. m. instead of 10:30 a. m. Sunday week at the usual hour.

The Pardee vs. Groomes law suit which was to come before Squire Smith last Monday was adjourned one week. It will be tried at the town hall next Monday at 10 a. m. It ought to be very fine sport.

Many invitations are out for a leap year party to be given at the town hall Wednesday evening Jan. 29th. Supper will be served at the Elrose. Anyone acquainted with the Clinton ladies know it will be a grand success.

John T. Clark last week shipped seven fine Jersey heifers to Oskosh and one to Grand Rapids, Wisconsin, and yesterday he shipped two to Grand Rapids, Michigan. They were all of the celebrated St. Lambert strain. People know where to find choice Jerseys.

The Elrose is now very nice and cosy and the traveling public will find good accommodations. The house, all through, is well heated, and lighted with electricity, the dining room attractive and well served. No doubt Mrs. Rose will have her share of patronage.

The many friends of Miss Emma Saxton will be pained to learn that she is very ill in Chicago. Although the latest advises are more encouraging, she is still not out of danger. She is having every attention from skilled attendants and a renowned lady physician.

W. Hubbel Smith, who suffered another shock of paralysis recently, is very low, and but slight hopes are entertained for his recovery as he is way up in the seventies and this stroke affects one entire side. He cannot help himself and is unable to speak, although he seems to understand what is said to him.

Friday last was a great day for the Maccabee orders here. Their installation services were very interesting and nicely rendered, and were witnessed by not only a large number of fraters from here and abroad, but many who are not members of the orders. As heretofore, the ladies carried off the honors. Their movements were both graceful and perfect, and their march was the delight of all. There were over twenty-five knights from Manchester, beside some from Tipton, Macon and Tecumseh. The banquet was fine and enjoyed by the entire company.

The meeting of the council last Thursday evening was very pleasant. The grand lecturer, Mr. Bisbee, of Benton Harbor, was present, the work exemplified on three candidates and followed by a banquet. A number from Britton and Tecumseh were present.

The editor of the Clinton paper recently had a personal notice presented for publication. It was quite funny but he had not forgotton a late experience he had, so thought he would consult one of the parties before publishing it, he did so and the information he received was of so positive a character the notice did not appear in the columns of the Local.

The special services conducted by Evangelists Stevenson and Bell have continued during the week with increasing interest. Sunday was a great day. The audience in the evening was the largest for such an occasion, that has been seen in Clinton for a long time. The union Sunday school was a marvel, both to the eyes and ears, while the union Young People's meeting was an especially impressive session. All the services, including the morning and afternoon prayer meetings, have been well attended and helpful. A goodly number have already decided and taken a stand for Christ. Mr. Stevenson preaches the gospel; Mr Bell sings it. Both have won their way into multitudes of hearts and will go away with scores of friends in Clinton. Next Sunday will be a great day, and perhaps the closing of the series of meetings. There will be a prayer meeting at 9:45 preaching at 10:30, Sabbath school at 12:00 young peoples meeting at 5:45, and preaching at 7:00. Each Sunday school will meet in its own church. All the rest of the services will be held in the Congregational church, excepting the young people's meeting, which will be held in the Methodist church. At this meeting Mr. Stevenson will talk on the subject of "Popular Amusements"—dancing card playing, and theatre going. Some are honestly perplexed on this subject; others are willingly victimized and led captive at Satan's will. All come and hear this address.

The K. O. T. M. and L. O. T. M. installed their officers on Tuesday evening of last week and ended up with an oyster banquet. Everyone enjoyed themselves to their heart's content.

Our noted lawyer, Frank Kinney, was in Adrian Monday of last week on a defense case, but as the jury did not agree, he had to go again Monday to mingle his voice along with other noted lawyers of the metropolis.

S. J. Fish and M. Long have exchanged places of business. Mr. Fish now occupies the building as a barber shop where Mr. Long's harness shop was, and Mr. Long "vice versa" the same as Aunt Temantha Allen said at Saratoga.

It looks as though Willard Stearns, of the Adrian Press, was sitting astride of the fence these days, as he is publishing a good old democratic paper and preaching Populist "doctoring." Now why don't he get down off the fence, on one side or the other, so as to save the wear and tear of that part of his pants which comes in contact with the top rail?

GOT THE BACKACHE?

If You Have, Here's the Way to Rid Yourself of the Weariness and Pain Attending It.

Some people suffer with headaches, many people are worn out and weary all the time, many more people have lame back and backache. Few people understand the real cause of their aches, and fewer yet know how easily they can find a cure. Just a word of explanation before we prove that what we say is true. The back is the key-note of the kidneys. It aches; that's a sign that the kidneys are not working properly; it is lame; another sign, the kidneys are out of order. The kidneys, you know, are the filters of the blood, but filters sometimes get clogged up. This means in their case that the blood courses through the entire system impregnated with poisonous uric acid, bringing on many a disorder which, if neglected, means disease perhaps incurable. And now about the cure:—Don't take our word for it, read what others say:

Mr. David C. Oaks is proprietor of the well known hardware and paint shop at 220 East Main Street, Kalamazoo. Mr. Oaks has suffered a great deal from kidney ailments; he described his condition and cure as follows: "I had a bad, lame back, which I suppose was caused by my kidneys; was confined to my bed during bad attacks. I might say, from time to time, I have been in that condition for years. The urinary organism was affected, urine being scanty, highly colored, and difficult in passage. I was in a bad shape when I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, about which I had heard. I have used now two boxes of them, and the pills have removed all the pain and trouble. There was a marked improvement right from the first, and it has continued right along. Doan's Kidney Pills are the right thing in the right place."

A new novel by George du Maurier, entitled The Martian, will also begin during the year. It is not too much to say that no novel has ever been awaited with such great expectation as the one by the author of Trilby. The Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc will continue and will relate the story of the failure and martyrdom of the Maid of Orleans. Other important fiction of the year will be a novelette by Mark Twain, under the title of Tom Sawyer, Detective; a humorous farce-novel by Owen Wister, called Two Gentlemen from Philadelphia; stories from Rudyard Kipling, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Thomas Nelson Page, Richard Harding Davis, Mary E. Wilkins, Julian Ralph, Brander Matthews, Owen Wister, and other well known writers.

Prof. Woodrow Wilson will continue his papers on George Washington and his times, with illustrations by Howard Pyle. Poultney Bigelow's history of the German struggle for Liberty, illustrated by R. Caton Woodville, will be continued through the winter. Two popular articles—Clair's defeat and Mad Anthony Wayne's victory—by Theodore Roosevelt, with great illustrations will be printed during the year.

A noteworthy feature of the MAGAZINE during 1896 will be a series of articles by Mr. Whitney, describing his trip of 1,000 miles on snow-shoes and with dog sleds, across the unexplored Barren Grounds of British North America in pursuit of wood-bison and musk-ox. Mr. Whitney's series will have the added interest of being illustrated from photographs taken by himself.

M. hall to which members of the two orders and their families are invited. By order of executive committee.

It's a little early in the season to open up show buisness but it is understood that some of our enterprising sports are getting ready and already have a fine fighting tiger in close confinement near the railroad. The animal is very tame to those who have once seen it, but very wary of strangers, and the way it is confined to get your money is a caution. The proprietors gave a sort of preliminary side show or curtain raiser last Sunday on the Wabash track, which is reported to be a first class fistic bout, but rather fizzled out into a family row. The Palmer aggregation had better improve the character of their bout or it will mean failure for them either remain in town or go on the road.

People who have family rows, generally set aside Sunday for that purpose. Britton was unfortunate enough to be treated to a couple of these felicitous demonstrations last Sabbath. Frank Allen, who lived with his wife on Norm Pixley's farm, indulged in a set too with his beloved spouse, in which he used a hammer as his chief argument in maintaining his rights as lord and master. The good housewife replied with a warrant, which summoned him before Justice Oliver Tuesday. He gallantly plead guilty to the charge of assault and battery and sold his fatted calf and chickens to pay the fine of $5.00 and costs. The fine was paid but not to Mrs. Allen, as she was counting on. The question arose in her, and the case was a mere misunderstanding compared with the mandamus she delivered in court. It was mostly a man-us and we doubt if the court will ever venture to assume jurisdiction in such a case again.

The medal was awarded to Miss Eliza Powel, of Raisin. The judges were Rev. J. P. Varner and Dr. Geo. Howell, of Tecumseh, and Prof. Callens, of Britton. Rev. Varner, chairman of the committee, in his usual pleasing manner, presented the successful candidate with the prize. The vocal selections were received with enthusiasm and responded to after a hearty enchore. Master Clare Camburn, of Macon, the 5-year-old cornet soloist, captivated the audience with his selections, receiving a rousing enchore. Prof. DeMuth and Miss Helen Foster, of DeMuth's Orchestra, Toledo, in their selections won new laurels in their art. The net receipts, after paying expenses, were $2.50, which, according to agreement, will be turned over to the treasury of the L. C. S.

(Eucalyptus Globulus.)

"The Australian Blue Gum Tree, as its name indicates," says Dr. Whetstone, "is a native of Australia, yet it has been domesticated in this country and grows in California. I have stood in a forest of these great trees and enjoyed the pungent, spicy order exhaled from them. In its vicinity malaria is absolutely impossible, the pungent odor killing the germs at once. From a scientific point of view this tree is of great interest, though comparatively little is known of the many valuable medicinal properties which it contains. The camphor obtained from this tree, in connection with other camphor compounds, are the principal ingredients in Pretzinger's Catarrh Balm. These camphors reduce the inflammation in the nasal passages, and it is from this action that this unrivalled Balm relieves and cures so quickly." Pretzinger's Catarrh Balm will cure all kinds of nasal catarrh, no matter how severe of of how long standing. A sample can be obtained for a 2-cent stamp by addressing Pretzinger Bros., Chemists, Dayton, Ohio. 1w

The tupelo gum is the name of a wood growing in the South, which is said to be admirably adapted to the manufacture of spools. This wood is of a fine, light grain, and does not split.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St. San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result every thing else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Orr & Temple's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00. 5

Medical Writers.

The best medical writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will, by its own action, reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh during the past few years proves that only one remedy has met these conditions, and that is Century Catarrh Cure. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and surgeons concede this fact. The most distressing symptoms yield to it. For sale by C. A. OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17, '96.

Congressional affairs have not been exciting this week. In the Senate the free coinage substitute for the House bond bill has the right of way as the 'unfinished business," and is daily debated for something like two hours. This program will be continued until the bill is voted upon. Just when that will be has not been decided, but it is believed that the silver Senators, who are doing the most of the talking, will continue the debate until the Utah Senators, both of whom are counted upon to vote for the bill, take their seats. It isn't really necessary to get those two votes to pass the bill; it is merely making assurance doubly sure to wait for them. The silver question is in one respect like the tariff. It is difficult to say anything new about it. The speech that attracted the most attention in the Senate was that of Senator Mills, of Texas, which although upon finance was not either for or against the free coinage bill. Mr. Mills arraigned the administration for its entire financial policy and was especially severe upon national banks; and at its close was complimented by Senator Peffer, who said he regarded it as a justification of the principles of the populist party. How Senator Mills will vote on the free coinage bill seems to be a matter of doubt. It will be remembered that he made a long statement last year over his own signature against the free coinage of silver.

The house has devoted the greater part of the week to the regular Pension and appropriation bill, which carries several important amendments. As usual when this bill is up there has been much oratory in which members, regardless of party, who have a large "old soldier" constituency expressed their undying love, etc., for the brave voters who fought thirty-odd years ago and who also voted to send the orators to Congress, and who will have a chance to do some more voting next November. All of which, men and brethern, is human nature.

If the applause which greeted a reference made by Representative Cummings, of N. Y., to the government making the Pacific railroads disgorge, indicates the sentiment of the House, some positive legislation on that subject may be looked for at this session. Mr. Cummings was making a speech in favor of better treatment for applicants for pensions when he said that if the government needed money it had better make the Pacific railroads disgorge than cut off deserving pensionsrs.

Secretary Hoke Smith has notified the members of the Dawes Indian commission to come to Washington and defend their report on the condition of Indian Territory which is being vigorously attacked by the representatives of the Indians, who are strongly opposed to the bill for establishment of a Territorial government. The fight both for and against that bill is getting decidedly warm.

Chairman Hepburn, of the House committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, has appointed a sub-committee of seven to look after Nicaragua canal legislation. It is expected that President Cleveland will shortly send to Congress a report made by the commission that investigated the route of the canal and the work done thereon, and that the report will be accompanied by a special message defining the President's attitude towards the project.

It is nothing new to say that public opinion is fickle. But a very striking example of its fickleness in Washington is shown by some of the men who were only a short time ago cocksure that nothing could avert war between United States and England. Now these same men are commending England for extending the same protection to Americans residing in the Transvaal republic, where the U. S. has no diplomatic representatives, as to British citizens, and talking about England and the U. S. being natural allies.

The most important political event of the week was the meeting of the National Democratic Committee to select the time and place for the democratic National convention. There was quite a rivalry between the cities which wanted to entertain the convention and its visitors, but today the defeated delegations are fraternizing with the winners and they are all happy—at least, they say they are.

The House tariff bill is still deadlocked in the Senate Finance committee. When it will be reported to the Senate no one seems to know. Those who said it would be reported this week are now saying that it will be reported next week.

The House committee on Territories is now considering the Arizona statehood bill. It is generally predicted that this bill and similar bills for New Mexico and Oklahoma will be favorably reported, but nobody seems to have been able to ascertain Speaker Reed's attitude toward either or all of them. Upon his attitude will depend their fate. The House will most certainly pass them if given opportunity.

OBITUARY.

Catherine Linn Hamilton was born at Lodi, N. Y., May 18, 1818, and died at the residence of her son-in-law, Henry A. Stewart, in Dundee, Monroe Co., Michigan, Jan. 16, 1896, being at the time of her death 77 years and eight months old. She was married to Levi Haynes, in Ridgeway, June 18, 1837, being one of the early settlers of this township and lived to see it cleared up from a wilderness to a now beautiful farming country. Her first husband will be well remembered by the older members of his church, he having died in triumph of living faith Dec. 27, 1860. To this union were born eight children, four daughters and four sons; two of the children dying in their infancy, Hannah L. and Fredrick W. There are fourteen grand children and eight great-grand children. She leaves four brothers and one sister, George Linn, of Wexford county; Chester, John, Simon H., and Polly, her only sister, all of Ridgeway. Her children that are left are Mrs. Annette Crossman and Mrs. Matilda Ide, of Tecumseh; Mrs. Mary A. Stewart, of Dundee; Rev. C. W. Haynes, of Ypsilanti; Dr. John B. Haynes, of Dundee, and Chaster A. Haynes, of Adrian. She was married to Archless Hamilton, of Raisin, July 5th, 1862, and they lived together 33 years an six months. Her step-children were all present at her funeral, Palmer Hamilton and Dewitte Hamilton, of Elkhart, Ind.; William Hamilton, of N. Y., and Joseph Hamilton, of Britton. She was truly a mother to us all. The reunions, which have been so pleasant for us in the past, are no more. A short time before she passed away she said to her son, Charles, "The sky is clear!" and afterward, "I am ready to go." Her wish was that all of her children might be present when she died, and her last desire was granted, as all were at her bedside when she left this world of sin and trials for a robe and a mansion above. Farewell, mother, farewell; we will meet you on that beautiful shore, where we will meet to part no more. Farwell.

The funeral services were held in the Methodist church at Ridgeway, of which she was a member, conducted by the pastor, to whom we extend our thanks, also to the choir who assisted in the service. HER CHILDREN.

Mrs. Michael Brodrick, mother of Mrs. P. H. Manning, of Detroit, Mrs. J. M. Burleson, of Macon, and Mrs. O. M. Palmer, of Tecumseh, who had suffered long and patiently since the first of last September, died Saturday Jan. 11th 1896, at 9 o'clock, with her three daughters by her side to care for her in her last moments and they wish to thank kind friends and neighbors who assisted in caring for her at the time of her death.

Miss Wimple has been absent two days on account of sickness, and Miss Anna Gamble has been filling the vacancy.

The first part of the year closes with the following examinations: Physiology, Algebra II, U. S. History, Physical Geography, Grammar, General History, English I, and Chemistry.

Quite a startling catastrophe took place in the A room Monday. Will Hicks who is noted as one of the most wide-awake boys of the room, was found unconscious. It is generally thought that it was caused by sleep.

Rev. J. P. Varner, in response to an invitation from Mr. Kellogg, favored the students of the high school, Wednesday with a half hour address on the subject of good habits and character as relates to one's business success. He handled the subject well and we earnestly hope he has impressed it upon the minds of some who will soon "paddle their own canoe."

Church Dedication at Macon.

The new Reformed Church of Macon was dedicated to God on Wednesday, Jan. 15. The sermon was preached by Rev. C. M. Brown, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Tecumseh, from text of scripture in the Gospel according to St. John, 12th chapter and 32d verse. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men with me." It was admired by all who heard it, and was a beautiful exposition of that text of scripture, and forcibly illustrated and delivered. The order of exercises consisted of reading scripture and prayer by Rev. H. Ramsdell, of Clinton, who also has charge of the M. E. church of Macon; dedicational prayer by the pastor of the church, Rev. J. I. Gulick; sermon by Rev. C. M. Brown, followed by a stirring address by Rev. David Howell, of Lansing, whose boyhood and early years were spent at Macon and who attended the Reformed church all those years, interspersed by anthems and hymns. An offering was made, amounting to about $300, and the new house of worship has now become the "House of God," and our prayer is that it may be the "Gate of Heaven" to many souls. The building itself is a beautiful structure, well equipped, and almost paid for, and speaks well for the liberality and good will of the people of Macon and surrounding country. All who have in any way contributed to the building do receive the thanks of God's people there and will receive the blessing of heaven. The church was completely filled, and an evening service was held and was again largely attended, the main auditorium being comfortably filled, and was addressed by Rev. John A. Despelder, a former pastor, and by Rev. David Howell, of Lansing. The services concluded with the doxology of praise. G.

Ohio Central's New Service.

The Ohio Central will change time Sunday next, placing in effect a time table which will greatly improve the service. There has long been wanted an evening train out of Columbus for Toledo. For years past the latest train out has been about 3 p. m. Under the new schedule a train will be put on leaving Columbus at 7:30 p. m., and arriving in Toledo at 11:30 p. m. An additional train will also be put on for Columbus southbound, leaving Toledo about midnight, arriving in Columbus early next morning. This will afford to the people of Findlay, Bowling Green, etc., an opportunity of attending the theater in Toledo and getting back the same evening. The Ohio Central will have by far the best train service of any between Toledo, Columbus and Charleston, W. Va.

Three Hundred Thousand.

It is hard to realize the meaning of these figures, which represent the present circulation of McClure's Magazine. Three years ago five magazines—The Century, Harper's, Scribner's, The Cosmopolitan, and Munsey's—apparently occupied the whole magazine field. But their total circulation was not over five hundred thousand copies.

Harper's Magazine and The Century for many years supplied the need of the American people for great illustrated monthlies. One imagines that every intelligent family in the United States takes one or the other, or both of these magazines. Harper's is over half a century old, and the Century has just completed twenty-five years of splendid life.

McClure's has a circulation equal to both these giants of the magazine world.

We mention these facts, not for the mere sake of comparison, but simply to enable our friends to understand what a circulation of three hundred thousand means.

And while we are speaking about ourselves we might mention that for three months—October, November, and December—we had, month by month, more paid advertising than any other magazine, while our December number had more pages of paid advertising than any other magazine at any time in the history of the world.

We begin this week, under a few glaring headlines, a series of original articles on the famous Hawaiian Islands. These articles are written by the capable and well known author and traveller, John R. A bill has recently been introduced in the house by our own congressman, Mr. Spaulding, providing for their annexation. Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 20th 1893.—"We have had Ingersoll, Ingalls and a host of illustrious orators in our course but never in the history of the Students' Lecture Association has an orator so captivated his audience as did John Temple Graves in 'The Reign of the Demagogue.' Much was expected of this eloquent Southerner, but he surpassed every expectation."—John W. Powers, President of Students Lecture Association.

An Almanac ought naturally to be "up to date," and The Tribune Almanac for 1896 is just that. It has certainly not reprinted any of the pages of the Almanac of a year ago to get out "on time." Furthermore, the publication is as fresh in tone, youthful in spirit and frankly suited to the time in which we live as any number ever issued. Of course, the Tribune Almanac is mainly for the use of people who take some interest in public affairs and need to have exact information.

The old Jos. W. Gray house, owned by Mrs. Gray and occupied by herself and John Gray and family, was burned about 3:30 last Sunday morning. The house was an old land mark in this vicinity, situated on the Adrian road about one and one-half miles southwest of town. It was built in 1844 by Jos. W. Gray and was one of the oldest brick houses in this section. The fire probably caught from a defective chimney. The house was insured for a small sum, but there was no insurance on the goods, most of which were fortunately saved. The family wish to thank their neighbors and friends for their prompt and effective assistance, and especially engineer Joe Nopper, of the Lake Shore for so effectively giving the alarm.

Mrs. Harriet M. Webster's eightieth birthday, which was celebrated Thursday, Jan. 16, and very briefly mentioned in our last week's issue, seems to demand a more extended notice. About forty of her friends knowing of the time, decided to show their kindly remembrance by meeting at the home, bringing abundant refreshments, and substantial gifts, among which was quite a well filled purse of money. Mrs. Webster was taken completely by surprise. Her first surprise was in the morning, when she met her daughter, Mrs. Webb, from Indiana, at the breakfast table, she having arrived on the late train Wednesday evening. Among those present were six ladies whose combined ages numbered 485 years. After the presentation of gifts, Mrs. Webster made a few well chosen remarks, thanking all for the kindness shown, and fervently wishing all might meet her in the heavenly home, she also said it had been the happiest birthday in all her life. The guests took their leave feeling that for them it had also been a most enjoyable occasion.

Mr. J. G. Osborne arrived from Milwaukee this morning, called by the illness of his grandmother, Mrs. Wm. H. Osborn.

As a little side issue, incident to leap year, the rustics of Adrian and vicinity enlivened their institute by a double wedding held in the court room there Wednesday afternoon. An affair of this kind is a most wholesome object lesson to the young sons of the soil in any locality.

Last Sunday morning Richard Jones, an Englishman aged 84, died in Franklin. An autopsy was held Monday, establishing the diagnosis of Dr. North, the attending physician, that the man was afflicted with caries of the cervical vertebrae. The history of the case is rather sad. Jones was a very hard working man and invested his savings in Dakota land. In December, 1894, he injured his neck and shoulder by a fall, and has suffered more or less since. During his last sickness, he was supported by the town of Franklin as his property in Dakota could not be sold.

A Farmer's institute is slated for Tecumseh some time during February. Leading farmers and stockmen take part. Frank Davidson will discuss the use of the Masonic goat for butter purposes, and butter milk. John H. Osborne will talk on "Short horns" as best for farmers. Geo. Merritt will read a paper on "best methods of breaking saw horses," and Alf. James will give an illustrated lecture on "How bees make a honeymoon." All sessions are free, but it being leap year, grass widows will not be allowed to take part in the proceedings.—Adrian Press.

SILVER MEN MEET.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 18.—A convention of the advocates of free coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one, made up of delegates of both democrat and republican parties was held here Thursday, and the field canvassed for the formation of a party and the polling of a gubernatorial ticket in the field.

Resolutions were adopted providing that in case neither the republican nor democratic party adopt a platform and nominate candidates positively pledged to the treatment of gold and silver on absolute equality as to coinage at the ratio now provided by law, then it is to be recommended that all friends of free silver in all parties join in the organization of an independent party to secure the full restoration of silver to its former place in the standard money of the United States. The resolutions also provide for the appointment of a committee of one from each congressional district to call a convention for the organization of such party as soon as possible after the old parties have held their conventions, if they fail to meet the full expectations of the free-silver men. This committee will be or-

Lansing, Jan. 18.—The sequel of the conference of the free silver men here Thursday came Friday in the selection of a committee to create a new state committee of three members from each congressional district to undertake the work of forming the new party in case the old party platforms and candidates are disappointing. The committee is composed of such prominent republicans as James M. Turner, of Lansing; Sybrant Wessellius, of Grand Rapids; Judge J. G. Ramsdell, of Traverse City, and J. N. McBride, of Owosso; such democrats as ex-Congressman Justin R. Whiting, of St. Clair; Spencer O. Fisher, of Bay City, and Williard Stearns, of Adrian; J. H. Hatman, an independent war horse of Rochester, and A. M. Todd, of Kalamazoo, the big man of the prohibition party. In case of the failure of the old parties to declare for free silver they are pledged to form a new independent American party.

Lansing, Jan. 21. — Officer John A. Henson, who came all the way from Perry, O. T., for John V. N. Gregory, a banker of Dexter, Mich., and a former member of the legislature of this state, left for home empty-handed Monday night. Gregory was indicted for receiving money for deposit in the First State bank of Perry, of which he was advertised president, although knowing the institution to be insolvent. He proved to the satis action of Gov. Rich that he was first apprised of the fact that he was an officer of the bank when notified that indictments had been returned against him, and that, so far as having any knowledge of the offense charged to have been committed last September, he had not been in Oklahoma since the spring of 1894. On this showing extradition papers were refused.

Two Boys Burned to Death.

Midland, Jan. 20.—About two o'clock Wednesday afternoon two little sons, aged two and four years, of Lewis Sanger, of Hubbard, were burned to death together with the house and contents. The father was away from home and the mother locked the children in while she went to call on a neighbor. A few moments later the house was discovered to be on fire, but the fire had gained such headway that all efforts to rescue the boys were useless.

Wants Holland Harbor Dredged.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 16.—Congressman Smith, of Michigan, has offered a joint resolution in the house directing the secretary of war to spend $50,000 in dredging the harbor of Holland, Mich., and in rebuilding the piers protecting the harbor. The resolution recites the fact that the piers protecting this important harbor are being undermined and washed away, involving a large loss to the government and danger to property and life.

DIED WORTH MILLIONS.

Mrs. Clara McAdow, Who Made a Fortune in Western Mines, Passes Away.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 20.—Mrs. Clara A. McAdow, aged 58 years, died at her residence here Sunday morning from a complication of diseases after an illness which lasted nearly six months. She was the wife of Hoyt A. McAdow and was a Michigan woman. She and her husband went to Montana many years ago and invested in mines, one of which, "Spotted Horse," proved a bonanza. She returned to Michigan some years ago and settled in this city. She represented Montana on the board of woman managers of the world's fair in 1893. The gold for the base of the famous $80,000 silver statue at the fair was taken from one of Mrs McAdow's mines and was contributed by her. Mrs. McAdow leaves a fortune estimated at $2,000,000.

Detroit, Jan. 22.—The body of Mrs. Clara L. McAdow, who died Sunday, was incinerated Tuesday at the Michigan crematory. Reed Stuart, of the Unitarian church, made an eloquent address, not, he stated, as a clergyman, but as a long-time friend of the dead.

Gorham, of Grand Rapids. The election of Bishops Satterlee, of New York; Johnson, of Detroit; Burton, of Louisville, and Garrett, of Northern Texas, were confirmed without question. Then the case of Bishop G. Mott Williams, of Marquette, was taken under consideration. The diocesan report and the certified report from the Marquette diocese of the election was first read, and then the protest against Dr. Williams and the report of the Marquette diocesan standing committee were opened after a brief discussion. A ballot was taken, and Dr. Williams was confirmed, so far as this diocese is concerned, by a unanimous vote.

GOOD SHOWING BY BANKS.

No Failures of State or National and But Three of Private Institutions.

Lansing, Jan. 20.—In his report for the last calendar year Theodore C. Sherwood, commissioner of banking, says there was not a failure of a state or national bank in Michigan during the year. There were three failures of private banks, and the commissioner urges that the law be amended so as to compel the private institutions to use their individual or firm name, and no longer be allowed to use such names as "City bank," etc., which serve only to deceive the public.

In spite of the business depression the deposits in state banks increased $7,214,148.47 in 1895, aggregating $66,253,139.02 at the close of the year. This total is $1,662,239.73 greater than in December previous to the panic, and $725,569.37 greater than in May, 1893, when they were at the highest point previous to the panic. The national bank deposits in the state at the close of 1895 were $35,981,634.14, an increase of $871,108.33 for the year, but a decrease of $6,776,221.38 from the total on December 9, 1892. There were ten less national banks to report in 1895, however.

As the total deposits of state and national banks December 13, 1895, less amount due to banks and bankers, were $102,244,773.16, the gain over 1893 was $16,514,621.33, while they were but $5,113,981.65 below the figures for December, 1892, when they reached the highest point in the history of banking in Michigan. The commissioner points to this fact as an evidence of the rapidity with which this state is recovering from the effects of the panic of 1893.

At the close of the year there were 171 state banks and three trust companies in Michigan. The total expenses of the banking department were $9,076.82, and the total receipts $8,332.81.

A SPECIFIC —FOR— La Grippe, for Colds, Coughs, AND LUNG TROUBLES, AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Two years ago, I had the grippe, and it left me with a cough which gave me no rest night or day. My family physician prescribed for me, changing the medicine as often as he found the things I had taken were not helping me, but, in spite of his attendance, I got no better. Finally, my husband,—reading one day of a gentleman who had had the grippe and was cured by taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,—procured, for me, a bottle of this medicine, and before I had taken half of it, I was cured. I have used the Pectoral for my children and in my family, whenever we have needed it, and have found it a specific for colds, coughs, and lung troubles."—EMILY WOOD, North St., Elkton, Md.

The full intensity of living is reached only by the perfectly healthy. Sickness discounts the capacity for enjoyment. When a piano is badly out of tune, the noises that come from it are certainly not musical. They [illegible] it is only a little bit out of tune, you can play some few things on it. You can create a semblance of music, but you cannot make really beautiful, satisfying, soul-stirring music, unless every string is tense and firm, unless every piece of the whole instrument is in perfect tune, in perfect condition, in perfect harmony with every other piece.

It is the same with a human being. If his body is all out of order and run-down, he will not be able to enjoy anything, no matter how full of enjoyment it may be for other people. If he is just a little bit out of order, if he "is not sick, but doesn't feel just right" he will only be able to enjoy things in a half-hearted sort of way. The nearer he is to being perfectly well, the nearer will his capacity for enjoyment be perfect. To really live, and to take his part in the work and pleasure of the world, his body must be in perfect condition. If this condition doesn't exist, something is wrong and something ought to be done. Lesson For the Week Beginning Jan. 26, Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M.

Topic, The Intercessory Prayer.

Christian unity! How much has been written and spoken and sung and dreamed upon this subject! How diligently men have sought a basis of union, and after all seeking and resolving and debating have separated more hopelessly than before! Will mankind never be united? In some things they always have been one. In other matters they never will be and never ought to be. Unity and uniformity are entirely different matters, yet are often confounded. An old motto is a good one to remember in this connection, "In essentials, unity; in nonessentials, liberty; in all things, charity."

The difficulty is men see things through different eyes and represent in themselves all stages of mental and spiritual progress and development. Yet each wants all others to do as he does. Modes of worship must conform to the taste and prejudices of the one or the few. Belief must be such as the one or the few have discovered of the great realm of truth. Conduct must conform to the ideas and conveniences of the few who set the styles. All this is a uniformity of death and not a unity of life. So long as men live all hope of such conformity to type must be abandoned. No compact, however solemnly made, can keep men together in these things. No laws, however stringent, can repress and hold in check the ruling forces of nature in the development of diversity in the individual life. Each must unfold his own life somewhat differently from any and all others in the universe. Unity, if it ever come, must be a unity of spirit in a diversity of manifestations. Let each one study anew and with deep thoughtfulness this prayer of Jesus the Christ. "That they may be one, even as we are one," contains the essential principle of it all. Compare with this Paul's teaching regarding the unity of the spirit in the different members and offices of the church, and we see the utterly unwarrantable nature of much of the striving after union of the present time.

The Young Men For Christ.

It is unquestionably a fact that the majority of the young men of the land are not at the present time in the church and active in her work. Figures are often cited to show the proportion of those who are not Christians as compared with those who are professed followers of Christ. Whoever is intimately acquainted with the young men of any locality knows enough of their practices to make his heart sick with sorrow and to arouse him to warn them of their danger.

But there is encouragement to be had from a comparison of matters as they now are with the condition of things at the opening of the century. At that time infidelity was open, bold and predominant among the young men of this country. In the colleges the Christians were very few, being the rare exceptions to the general rule. Those studying for the ministry were conspicuous by their rarity. Open vice abounded. Now there are multitudes of the most talented young men active in church work. The Young Men's Christian association has become one of the powerful agencies everywhere recognized in the country as making for righteousness. Our colleges have changed in moral tone, so that the Christian men among the students form a large and influential company, who deeply affect the life and tone of the whole body. The young people's societies in the churches are surely changing the type of young life, making it purer, more refined, happier, more helpful and Christlike. Visions of a better day rise before the eyes of our young men. Christ is their worthy leader.

Keep Step.

"How can two walk together unless they be agreed?" If you will have fellowship with men, and above all companionship, you must find some way to keep step with them. This is neither going far ahead nor following far behind them. It is being among them and in many things like them. Each one must do his own walking, use his own feet, exercise his own muscles, but keep time with the movements of others. Independence lies not so much in a different time to the step or a different direction to the walk or anything which can mark the individual as peculiar, as in the power of self direction, the perfect willingness to go, the ease of movement, the freeness and grace with which one acts. Contrariness is not proof, not even a sign of liberty. Rather it is an indication of bondage of mind, of narrow and cramped feeling. The spirit of isolation and separation does not so much show the possession of superior ability and merit, does not display freedom so much as it exhibits the fetters of pride and inability to gauge one's true worth and the claims of others. We are much like other folks. Better keep close together and in touch with your fellows.

The Time For Revival.

It is now. Some special time should be given each year in every church to the work of deepening the spirituality of the membership, widening the scope of their usefulness and awakening the religious sensibilities of the unsaved people in the community. The autumn is largely pre-empted for conventions, conferences and the like. The summer is much broken in church activity by vacations. This is the time for work. Evenings are long. People can be gathered. Plan and carry out some extra work for awakening the unconverted.

Is it not sinful to ask in prayer for God to give that which we slothfully neglect or willfully refuse to obtain by His appointed means?

Do we not dishonor God by waiting for a special impulse to do what His word plainly commands?

a dark lantern, and have the old gentleman blindfolded? I told the senate that the consideration of the bill would "not probably consume any more time than the time consumed in reading it." I also told the senators that the same bill passed the senate two years before after full debate. The senate knows nothing about it; the president knows nothing about it; the country knows nothing about it;—nobody knows anything about it but me and two or three others. . . For the love of heaven keep still. If the people once understand this, you will lose all the advantage you speak of.—and what will become of me?—National Bimetallist.

JOHN BULL—That his right Uncle Sam. Hi like han honest man, Hi do, hand the man wot is willing to pay two dollars for one, his just the kind hof a man for me. But hi ham a little surprised that you should do hit, has your debt is so big. Ow did hit appen?

PRESTON CALLED DOWN.

Some of the arguments used in favor of the gold standard are of such a character that it is actually impossible to notice them without, in a measure, at least, over-stepping what is usually considered to be dignity in discussion. For example, the director of the mint, Mr. Preston, is reported as having recently said:

"When you have an increase in the production of gold you will surely have an increase in the money of the world. Gold is the same as money the world over, for you may take a gold dollar and put it into the furnace and melt it down and still it will retain its value, unaided by any other security. The more gold produced the more money we will have in circulation. Gold is the only money in the world that can stand the fire test, and because of its stability, it is the only recognized standard money the world over."

Of course, no student of the money question will ever recognize Mr. Preston as an authority. Regarded simply as an individual, his opinions are scarcely worth noticing. But he is director of the mint, and therefore his utterances carry with them the weight that pertains to the office. Indeed, his position is such that he ought to know something about the subject of metallic money. If he does, aside from mere clerical details of production and coinage, he succeeds in keeping it to himself with rare skill.

It really seems that a man who will invoke the "fire test" as proof of the superiority of gold, knows about as little of the question as it is possible for one to know and know anything at all.

There is one answer that completely explodes it: The silver dollar met that test perfectly up to the very day of its demonetization. With the American mint open it would in all human probability do so again.

The fact that silver is so treated that it will not stand the "fire test" is the very essence of the silver men's complaint.

Let us re-open the mint to silver and see if an ounce of bullion will not then be equal to an ounce of coin. We will also see whether the law of supply and demand will be completely reversed in the case of silver, and an increased demand make it cheaper, as the goldite persistently claims.—H. F. Bartine.

Hardin Led His Ticket.

The goldbug papers are constantly declaring that Hardin defeated the democratic ticket in Kentucky by making silver speeches. The World-Herald has called attention to the fact that all the state ticket went down with him, although there were some gold standard men on the ticket. The figures show that Hardin led his ticket in every county but one and only lacked five vots of leading it there. He was nearly 15,000 votes ahead of his colleagues. If figures can can prove anything they prove that free silver was stronger than the democratic party. But the publication of these figures will not silence the goldbugs. They will still point to the Kentucky election as a vindication of Cleveland. The gold standard crusade can only be supported by gross deception.—World-Herald.

A New Voice for Silver.

We welcome the advent of a new advocate of the cause of bimetallism. It is called the National Bimetallist. Those of our readers who are dissatisfied with us because we do not give space enough to the silver movement will be pleased with this new publication, which is devoted to currency reform and nothing else. Its sixteen pages are filled with first-class arguments, and it starts out well in its fight in the cause of "the people against plutocracy."—Ex.

CAUSE OF THE PEOPLE.

The Organization of the Free Silver Forces Sweeping Everything.

Hon. Jerry South is one of the coming men of the South. He is young, able and ambitious. He graduated at the University of Virginia a few years ago and went to Arkansas to grow up with the country. He stopped at Mountain Home and invested in a vast area of farming lands. He has been at the place less than ten months—not long enough to vote—when he beat three of the oldest inhabitants for the legislature. He has been in the house ever since that time and is one of the political leaders of the state. He served in the legislature with Governor Clarke and that gentleman has the very highest confidence in him.

"My state is overwhelmingly for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1," said Mr. South yesterday. "There are practically no gold men in Arkansas. The only gold men are those who are enjoying federal patronage. Even the bankers are silver men in our state.

"What do I think of the prospects for silver legislation in this country? The situation is just this: I hardly think silver will receive the recognition it should receive at the national convention. My little state, with its 40,000 Democratic majority, will cast its sixteen electoral votes for silver and Democracy. Texas, with her 140,000 Democratic majorty, will cast her twenty-two votes in the same way. Indiana, which is never Democratic or Republican above 2,000 majority either way, will follow right beaind us and cast forty-eight votes for gold. Pennsylvania, with her sixty-four electoral votes, and none for Democracy when the final count for president comes, will vote for gold. New York, with her seventy-four votes, and, if I am a prophet, none for the Democratic candidate for president, will be for gold. The solid Republican states will vote against us, and what chance will the states of the South and West, that must be relied upon to furnish the big Democratic majority, stand of outvoting these thickly populated states which always make our platforms, but never give us majorities.

"If silver cannot get recognition, I am in favor of bolting. We can at least follow our principles. We can get solid backing in the West.

"I believe we should nominate Stevenson. He is right on the silver question. He is one of the most popular men in the country and he is so popular in his own state that there is no doubt but that he would carry his own state for us."—Atlanta Constitution.

Let those who are hugging the delusion that the silver issue is dead, continue to hug it while they can. Their pleasure will be of short duration. There never was a time in the history of our country when any idea crystallized as rapidly as the silver sentiment is now.

The National Bimetallist is more than pleased with the outlook. From all over the West and the South the most cheering words reach this office. Everywhere the friends of bimetallism are girding on their armor for such a struggle on behalf of really "sound" and "honest" money as the world has never yet seen. The final result of such a struggle cannot be for a moment in doubt. Bimetallism is the cause of the people and it must win.—Ex.

Florida Democrats.

The convention of Florida democrats at Jacksonville was addressed by Senator Call and others. Following was passed: "Resolved, That it is the sense of this conference that it is absolutely essential to the welfare of the people of the United States that silver and gold be placed on an exact equality in the coinage laws of the United States. It was decided that the delegates to the conference organize democratic free silver leagues in their respective counties, with a view of sending only free silver delegates to the state democratic convention, and that every member of these leagues be pledged to support only free silver men for any office within the gift of the people."

POINTER FOR JOHN G.

MEXICAN EDITOR RIDICULES OUR SECRETARY.

A Schoolboy Can See that Silver Money of Redemption Would Settle the Reserve Difficulty—In This Land of Plenty.

The people of the United States are on a gold basis; in other words they are holding up something like $1,000,000,000 of currency on $92,000,000 of Treasury gold reserve, a magnificent accomplishment which reminds one of a Japanese juggler sustaining a series of ladders by his teeth while lying flat on the ground. It is magnificent but it is not finance. Mr. Carlisle, who knows so little of finance as to imagine, because the Treasury issues notes, that it is in the banking business, is filled with awe as he contemplates the currency system of his country. We do not wonder, for it inspires the same sentiment in the minds of ordinary men. And, being on a gold basis, the United States must have a prosperous government? That does not apparently follow. The Government, in point of fact, is in straits, for the revenue does not keep pace with the outgo. Not since last January have the Treasury receipts reached the average monthly requisite of thirty million dollars, the amount which must come in, if all the bills of the nation are to be met. In August the receipts ran up to $29,286,000, but the average has been below $27,000,000 for other months. It looks like another bond issue, and, if that is made, the Treasury will be easier. A loan is only a palliative, however; what is needed is permanently to increase the revenue. The throwing off of the sugar duties was the beginning of the foolishness; those duties were not felt by anyone and they kept the Treasury in easy circumstances. It is beginning to be noted by the American people that their finances are in the control of charlatans who know no more of the fundamental principles of financial administration than so many school boys. Any European finance minister, who should make such blunders as have been committed in Washington, would be retired to private life for "keeps." Fancy an English Chancellor of the Exceequer in such a mess as is Carlisle! A Commission in Lunacy would be summoned to sit on his case. And no European finance minister has such a rich country abounding in potential sources of revenue to operate in. An ordinary financial duffer ought to shine as finance minister in the great Republic which is rich beyond compute.—The Mexican Herald.

How proud we should be of a financial policy thus subjected to ridicule and scathing criticism in a country that the average American is in the habit of looking upon as only "half civilized."

When will the people open their eyes to the fact that there must be something radically wrong in a monetary system, which makes such criticism justifiable? What are they thinking about? It ought to be most painfully apparent to anyone of ordinary intelligence that under the specious pretense of upholding the cause of "honest money," and "sound money," the great bankers and money lenders are simply preying upon the Treasury and upon the people of the United States.

A syndicate of bankers maintains the gold reserve at $100,000,000 for a few months, at a profit of about $10,000,000. Gold is again going out and more bonds! is the cry. Retire the greenbacks; make money scarcer even than it is now. Depress prices still more, make times still harder, and increase the interest bearing debt. These are the remedies proposed. While this is going on, the great bankers are getting richer and richer. American heiresses are taking untold millions to Europe to exchange for impoverished titles, while millions of American people clothed in rags and destitute of the plainest necessities of life, are looking fearfully forward into the long hard winter now just breaking upon them.

All of this time we have the greatest and grandest country on the surface of the globe—one abounding in everything necessary for the comfort of mankind. Not only this, but we have "sound money," "honest money," "one dollar as good as every other dollar," and have had for 22 years.

And yet the fact remains that while our people are dreading the approach of winter, and shivering with fear every time an ocean liner takes out a million of gold, half civilized (?) Mexico, doing business with a "50 cent silver dollar" is rejoicing in the era of unexampled prosperity that has opened upon her.—National Bimetallist.

Free Silver the Cure.

No such humiliating condition as John G. Carlisle portrayed as to the condition of the treasury existed under the bimetallic system prior to 1873. Such a thing as the expensive gold reserve fund and its attending evils were then unknown.

THE HERALD FOR 1896.

Read This Column and Become a Subscriber at Once.

The Herald for 1896 will endeavor to give its readers as complete a summary of local news, both for Tecumseh and surrounding towns, as it has done in the past. It must be remembered that the Herald has always been willing and anxious to give its space for the publication of every kind of local country news, and we believe our rural subscribers, who form a large portion of our readers, appreciate this fact.

In addition to this, it will be the aim of the paper this year to publish a more comprehensive column of county news than ever before, which will be of especial interest to our patrons. We think that no paper in Lenawee county takes more time and pains in maintaining an efficient corps of correspondents from neighboring towns than the Herald. We do not wish to boast of the amount of matter published in this paper for $1 a year, but would simply invite those who are not now taking the Herald to compare the size and character of the paper with other weekly local publications, not only in Lenawee county but in the state of Michigan, which sell for the same price, or even more.

We do not pretend to give away premiums for nothing at this price, but we do claim to offer some of the cheapest and most valuable combinations ever before given. By special arrangements and liberal advertising we have procured two articles we will give our subscribers the full benefit of. They are articles which should be in every home. The latest and best map of Michigan ever printed, and the latest and most complete History of our own country ever written in one volume and by the greatest living historian of America.

We print in part the most favorable club list ever presented in these columns and any periodicals not mentioned here will be procured at the lowest price. Here are combination offers in detail.

NUMBER ONE.

Everyone knows something about the great map publishing firm of Rand, McNally & Co. Their atlases and wall maps have gained a world-wide reputation. Their new state map of Michigan is the best one ever issued. It is 41 by 48 inches in size, full mounted with rollers, showing all organized townships, beautifully colored, and sells for $2.00. The former price was $3.00. This map can be furnished at the remarkably low price of $1.40, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included.

NUMBER TWO.

Have you seen Rand McNally & Co.'s large reversible map, with the world on one side and the United States on the reverse? This is the largest map of the United States ever printed on one piece of paper. The map of the world is on Mercator's projection and gives a brief history of every country with population of chief cities, areas, voyages of discoveries etc. This map is especially suited for school use and is just the thing for ready reference in these times of international disputes. This $3.00 map and the Herald for $2.00.

NUMBER THREE.

The People's History of the United States has just been issued by the noted author and historian, John Clark Ridpath, L.L.D. It is the very best history of the United States now extant, compassed within the limits of a single volume. The cloth bound edition is sold only by subscription at $3.75 per copy. We can furnish this great work at only $2.10 per copy, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included. This is an unprecedented offer.

THE DETROIT TRIBUNE.

The Detroit Tribune has long been recognized as one of the greatest newspapers of the Republican party, not only in this state but throughout the west. Although the Tribune has long enjoyed this distinction, it is safe to say that within the last two years its management has greatly raised the standard of the publication as a political, literary, and general newspaper. The Tribune should be read in every household of Michigan. We have made a special arrangement with the management whereby we can furnish the weekly Tribune and HERALD one year for the normal figure of $1.30.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.

The Cosmopolitan is almost too well known to need particular mention. It is simply a marvel that a magazine of such merit can be furnished for the money. A new lithographing press has recently been added to their machinery which will make the paper more attractive than ever. For 1896, 1344 pages and 1000 illustrations for 85 cents if taken with the Herald.

Cheap Metropolitan Papers.

There is no excuse nowadays for a citizen failing to subscribe for a great metropolitan newspaper in addition to taking his own county paper. The "Twice-a-Week" Republic of St. Louis, which is credited with the largest circulation of any weekly paper, is only $1 a year, and for this sum it sends two papers a week, or 104 papers a year—less than one cent each. The weekly contains the best and brightest news condensed from the daily paper, together with a well assorted collection of reading matter and useful information. A popular feature of its columns next year will be the speeches of prominent men in the presidential campaign. These will be given almost in full. A reader of the Twice-a-Week Republic will always be abreast of the times, for no paper has greater news gathering facilities. The Daily and Sunday Republic can now be had by mail for a little more than one cent and a half a day, or $6 a year, when paid in advance. Though this paper has greatly reduced its price, it has increased its value twofold by adding many valuable features.

Obtained Expert Advice.

Talk about nerve! A Caribou dentist tells The Republican that a woman came to his rooms one day lately, and, showing him an aching tooth, asked if it would come out hard. The dentist, after an inspection, replied that it would be an easy tooth to pull; whereupon the sufferer remarked: "Wall, I'm glad. A blacksmith promised to pull the tooth with a pair of pinchers, and I guess I'll let him do the job, if the tooth is comin easy." And away she went, leaving an astonished and bewildered dentist to gaze at her in wonder as she started for the blacksmith's shop.—Lewiston Journal.

A New Application of Scripture.

There was rejoicing in the village at the killing of a pig. Being dead, it was cut up. A neighbor's cat stole secretly into the larder, and annexed a piece of pork, which she brought in triumph to her mistress. Next day the clergyman of the parish visited the old woman, who recounted to him the remarkable sagacity of the beast. "It was quite beautiful, sir," she said piously, "to see the way the sweet creature brought me the piece of pork; it brought to my mind what we read in the Bible about Elijah and the ravens."—Realm

The Knight's Surcoat.

The knight's surcoat, a long, flowing gown, worn outside the armor, was an impediment in action, but valuable otherwise, for it often saved his life by indicating his rank, position, wealth and the amount of ransom he was able to pay. The gold inlaid and jeweled armor of the knights served the same purpose by advertising the rank and wealth of the warrior.

Distemper.

Pink eye, epizootic, and catarrhal fever, among horses, are contagious germ diseases of the blood, and the only sure way to cure them is to use a germicide blood purifier. Distemper in sheep is the same thing. These diseases need not "run the full course" as many say, where they break out in a stable. But there is only one remedy that was ever guaranteed to cure them at once and prevent others in the same stable from getting them. Spohn's Distemper and Cough cure. It is not a condition powder. It will also cure garget in cows. Sold only by C. A. Wright, popular druggist. 1w

TERRIBLE ORDEAL OF A MOTHER

She Saw Her Little Girl Fading Away—A Story That Will Touch the Heart of Every Mother.

From the Journal, Detroit, Mich.

A very grateful mother is Mrs. A. L. Hartness, of 676 Grandy Avenue, Detroit, for the wonderful cure which her daughter has received by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Said Mrs. Hartness: "Yes, my daughter's life has been saved by using Pink Pills, thanks to a kind friend who recommended them to me.

"Blanche was sick for over three years. She had the care of the best physicians procurable, and no expense or trouble was spared to give her relief. She was so thin that she was fairly skin and bones, her digestion was out of order and she had the most awful headaches. We gave up all hope of her recovery. Her long, thin, listless face made me nearly crazy, and we did everything in our power to give her strength and induce her to take an interest in anything.

"One day a friend told me about Pink Pills, and Mr. Hartness went down town and got three boxes. She had taken about one box, when to my amazement, one morning I heard her playing on the piano. I could hardly believe it, for it had been over a year since the piano had been opened.

"Soon she began to take short rides on her bicycle, and soon she went singing around the house, our own happy, hearty, little daughter once more.

"She thinks nothing of a spin on her wheel over to Mt. Clemens or Pontiac, and is as well as she ever was.

"I had a girl living at our house who was a great sufferer from impoverished blood, and who received instant and permanent relief from the use of one box of the pills.

From the Evening Times, Buffalo, N. Y.

Women have no longer need to fear that dread enemy—Neuralgia. Science has conquered, and woman is relieved of a great burden of pain. Prominent among the many who stand as living testimonials to the new remedy and its efficacy in curing neuralgia is Mrs. Polinski, a widow lady who lives with her father, Christ Sieltzer, in a pleasant home just beyond Gowanda.

"I am not a sick woman as you can readily see," she said, and I never have been. I do not like newspaper notoriety and have never had my name in the papers before. I would certainly not say a word this time, but I think it is my duty to tell women what I have found.

"I used to be troubled with frequent headaches. They were not serious—I think they must have been neuralgia—but they were just bad enough to make it decidedly unpleasant for me. I was able to work, but in a sort of a listless fashion.

"I heard of Pink Pills made by the Dr. Williams' Company and was persuaded to try them. I did so and now all is changed. I have not had a headache in many months and have such faith in the pills that I do not think I ever will again. They did me a world of good and I know they will do as much for other women."

Charles S. Phelps, the well-known Gowanda druggist whose place of business is on Main Street, said to the reporter that he had a large sale for the Pink Pills. "They are a popular medicine," he added, "and do much good."

D. G. Freeman, of No. 97 Main Street, Springville, N. Y., the well-known and popular photographer, was called upon by another Times reporter who learned that he had likewise heard something about Pink Pills and their efficacy in curing neuralgia.

"Yes, he said, in answer to questions, my wife was greatly benefited by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. She does not like newspaper notoriety, and so do not like to say much on the subject."

"What was her ailment, Mr. Freeman?"

"Well, partly neuralgia, but that will do. I will not enter into details, and what I have said must suffice. Just put in your paper for me that she was greatly benefited; cured by the pills when doctors failed—and let it go at that. The remedy was recommended to her by Mrs. Dean Jones, of this place, who, I understand, was also greatly benefited. I will be pleased to tell anybody who calls all about the pills."

At Prior's drug store, Springville, it was said that they sell more of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills than any other patent medicine.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are not a patent medicine, but are a thoroughly scientific preparation, the result of years of careful study on the part of an eminent graduate of McGill Medical College, Montreal, and of Edinburg University, Scotland, and they were successfully used by him in his everyday practice for years before being offered for general sale. The merit of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is attested by the hundreds of marvelous cures they have wrought in all parts of the country, and now their sale far exceeds that of any other proprietary medicine. This is the best test of the fact that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills perform all their makers claim for them, and in seeking an effective nerve food which would nourish without over-stimulating, and would build up naturally the wasted, flabby and diseased nerves, and which would at the same time give a supply of blood at once purer, richer and redder, and more capable of carrying nutriment and oxygen to every nerve and muscular fibre of the body, Dr. Williams struck at the root of all disease, and it is eminently proper, therefore, to give a list of the diseases for which this preparation is intended, which we do herewith:

All diseases arising from a poor and watery condition of the blood, such as pale and sallow complexion, general muscular weakness, loss of appetite, depression of spirits, lack of ambition, anæmia, chlorosis or green sickness, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath on slight exertion, coldness of hands or feet, swelling of the feet or limbs, pain in the back, nervous headache, dizziness, loss of memory, feebleness of will, ringing in the ears, early decay, all forms of female weakness, leucorrhœa, tardy or irregular periods, suppression of menses, hysteria, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, rheumatism, sciatica, all diseases depending on vitiated humors in the blood, causing scrofula, swelled glands, fever sores, rickets, hip-joint diseases, hunchback, acquired deformities, decayed bones, chronic erysipelas, catarrh, consumption of the bowels and lungs, and also for invigorating the blood and system when broken down by overwork, worry, disease, excesses and indiscretions of living, recovery from acute diseases such as fevers, etc., loss of vital powers, gonorrhœa, early decay, premature old age. They act directly on the blood, supplying to the blood its life-giving qualities by assisting it to absorb oxygen, that great supporter of all organic life.

Pink Pills are sold by all dealers or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 1000) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

HAWAII, THE "PEARL OF THE PACIFIC."

The Second of a Series of Letters by John R. Musick.

Honolulu dates its existence as a town from 1816. Before this date it was a mere fishing village. At the time mentioned there were several white men on the islands, among them one John Young, whose romantic career almost rivals that of Captain John Smith. Young had been a mate on the American vessel Eleanor, and had been captured by King Kamehameha, together with a sailor named Davis from a little schooner The Fair American. The commander and all his crew, save Davis, were killed by the savages, Kamehameha sparing Young and Davis only because they were expert in the use of fire-arms. When all of the islands had been brought under the control of Kamehameha, John Young was made governor of Hawaii, the largest of the group.

Young was a man of more than ordinary ability. He became a true subject of Kamehameha, and his successor on the throne. In 1815 he advised the erection of a fort at Honolulu, to command the harbor. He was given full power to direct its construction, and, early in January, 1816, the fort was begun and completed the same year. This fort was nearly square, measuring between three and four hundred feet on a side, with walls about twelve feet high and twenty feet thick. It was built of hard rock and had embrasures for cannon. It stood on the seaward side of what is now Queen street. About forty guns--six, eight and twelve pounders—were afterward mounted, and the fort placed under command of Captain Beckley.

In November, 1820, the king moved his court to Honolulu, Mr. Thurston and his wife, two pioneer missionaries, accompanying him. Ever since, Honolulu has been the seat of government for the islands.

In the afternoon of the day of my arrival I decided to take a stroll about this beautiful little city of the tropics and "see the sights."

These "sights" are well worth crossing a continent and an ocean to see. They are such as no pen can describe, no camera depict, no painter place on canvass. The beauties and blessings which nature has so abundantly bestowed on these islands must be seen to be appreciated.

Perhaps the most beautiful tree in the world is the Royal Palm which grows on the Sandwich Islands. In her forthcoming book, entitled "Around the World with the White Ribbon," Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt says:

"The Royal Palm, introduced here from the West Indies, combining the beauty of architecture in its perfectly symmetrical, highly polished and beautifully colored columnar trunk, with the swaying grace of its long plume-like leaves, easily takes a place second to none in the world."

Her description is neither overdrawn nor incorrect. So smooth and symmetrical are these "columnar trunks" that a gentleman who was with me asked a citizen if they did not scrape the bodies of the trees, or sand-paper them.

There are few residences in the city which are not surrounded with palms. The city is rich in vegetation. The houses are not usually grand or imposing, but very picturesque, and the grounds are ample. The Honoluluan thinks more of his lawns thon of his house. The approach to the house is generally through a veritable flower garden. Usually there is an avenue of palms, between which are numerous plants, or shrubs, crimson, vermillion, and gold. A tall cactus often reaches the height of twenty feet, with flowers of every hue, and the banana spreads its broad leaves before you. Oranges, dates and figs grow in the yards and gardens. Almost everything is tropical. A few plants, trees and flowers may be seen which grow also in a colder clime, but they reach such gigantic proportions, and are of such gorgeous colors as to be hardly recognizable. Great trees that look as though they might have had fifty years of growth, were planted by people who are still in middle age. Walk into one of the numerous yards where plants, and trees, and vines are growing as though on their native soil, and you will find that every one of them have been imported within a comparatively recent period. Almost every quarter of the subtropical world has been laid under tribute. Here is the rubber tree, the banyan, the baobab, the litchee, the avocado, the mango, and palms innumerable. Here also are the brilliant and gaudy banyain villsea, the prolific plumeria, the night-blooming cereus, and the bright and attractive crotons. We have in this an illustration of the beneficent transformations effected by the enterprise of the foreigners in Hawaii. From the days of Vancouver, the foreign residents have been tireless in introducing ornamental and useful plants.

A smooth path of crushed and cinder-like lava usually leads from the front gate to the residence, which is almost hidden in its gorgeous surroundings of rich tropical verdure. There are a thousand shady nooks and cool retreats inviting one to come in and rest from the dust and heat.

The houses of the Americans are the most imposing and beautiful, excepting only the public buildings. They are most beautifully decorated with the greatest variety of trees, flowers, plants and shrubs, tastefully painted and ornamented. The native Hawaiian also paints his house, and gives much care to the ornamentation of his grounds, while the Chinaman's house is unpainted, but picturesque in its Oriental style of architecture. Chinese houses in Honolulu are built just as they are in Hong Kong. They are usually two stories in height, small and quaint, with the balcony fronting on the street.

At almost every hour you can see the almond-eyed Celestial with his Oriental dress, even to the sauce-pan shaped bamboo hat, a long pole on his shoulder with a weight on each end that would stagger a common man, jogging along at a dog trot, a pace at which he never seems to weary. Long experience has made him skillful in carrying large burdens.

While passing a Chinese restaurant, in company with several of my acquaintances, we were startled by a crash, and immediately there was such a commotion among the Japs and Chinamen that one might have supposed the China-Japanese War had broken out afresh. Suddenly a sailor from the U. S. man-of-war Bennington came bouncing through the crowd with a native policeman holding to each arm.

Nearly all the police of Honolulu are natives or Kanakas, and fine, lusty-looking fellows. When they get hold of one it requires strength and dexterity to get away. The young blue-jacket tried to get in a "right-hander" on them, but his right hand was caught. He then tried to get in a "left-hander," but again failed and was forced out into the street and started off to the station-house.

"I won't walk," he roared. "I belong to the American Navy, and it won't be said I was ever led by any black son-of-a-gun of a Kanaka."

"Won't you walk" asked one of his captors.

"No!"

"Then you shall ride," and he called a carriage, bounced the tipsy sailor into it, and away he went merrily singing "A life on the ocean wave." He had imbibed freely and his offense consisted in amusing himself by throwing beer bottles at the head of the proprietor.

The native police of Honolulu are said to make fairly good officers. I was surprised to find so many Kanakas holding office. In nearly every department of the government were native clerks and officers.

In the evening we wandered to a beautiful park named Emma Square, in honor of Queen Emma, who is known as the "good and just queen." Here the Hawaiian band was assembled and discoursed some of the sweetest music I ever listened to. The Hawaiians are excellent musicians, and there are many Hawaiian airs composed by the natives, seme of which are really beautiful. When first discovered, they had several musical instruments, one of which was a nose pipe, played by blowing through it with the nose.

Fort Street is the Broadway of Honolulu. From it branch off numerous streets leading to the right and left. One thing is peculiar in Honolulu. No regard is paid to the points of the compass. The terms milkai, toward the sea, or manka, toward the mountains, are used. Ewa means on the right and maikiki for the left. Thus the Hawaiian Hotel is on the manka side of Hotel Street ewa of Richard Street. I am told that these terms are even used in surveying lands. There is not a street laid out or house built with any regard to the cardinal points of the compass.

While wandering in the suburbs of the city I came in sight of a field of what at first seemed corn. "Green corn in November," I thought. "It is not possible." Determined to investigate, I entered the field and came upon tall, broad-leaved vegetation which was a puzzle to me. I hailed an intelligent-looking Hawaiian and asked:

"Will you tell me what kind of vegetation this is?"

He looked sad, shook his head, and, with a noise like a squirrel eating hickory nuts, passed on. The next specimen of the genus homo was an honest-looking Chinaman.

"My celestial friend, can you pronounce the name of this vegetation?"

"No savvy!" John sighed and passed on. I was growing almost desperate in my bewilderment, when a dark-visaged son of Italy appeared.

"I beg your pardon, stranger, but can you inform me if that rank vegetation is a field of exaggerated horseradish, or some species of tropical melon?"

With a look of contempt he answered: "Sat no banan!"

The mystery was solved at last. I remembered then having seen large banana trees in some of the yards, but without knowing what they were.

The next morning I awoke to find it raining, but in the afternoon the skies became clear. The streets of Honolulu are not as well paved and drained as they might be. After a rain they present fully as bad an appearance as do the thoroughfares of New York, Chicago, or St. Louis. Some streets are paved with a sort of cement resembling asphalt, but many are not paved at all. After a rain the heat seems doubly intense for a disagreeable steam arises which makes one sigh for the good old days in Hawaii when people did not wear clothes. This discomfort lasts only a short time, however. The streets dry quickly, and a gentle breeze fans the heated face.

Just back of the city of Honolulu a mountain rears its head several hundred feet in the air. From some supposed resemblance to that article the mountain is called the Punch Bowl. Tourists invariably scale its lofty heights, from which a grand bird's-eye view may be obtained of the city, bay, shipping, and whole surrounding country.

Like all other tourists I determined to pay the Punch Bowl a visit, and as I learned that many tourists had walked to its height I set out one morning on foot. As I left the city and entered upon the long winding road which leads up to the dizzy height, many of the busy little Japs and Chinese cast curious glances at me, and from vine-clad cottages along the way I caught occasional glimpses of dark-eyed maidens peeping shyly forth from trellised vines.

At last, wearied with traveling over a road which seemed to have no end, I began to cast glances up the steep sides of the Punch Bowl and debate in my own mind the possibility of scaling it. Determined to make the trial, I left the road and started up the mountain. A few shrubs and little coarse grass, with loose crumbling stones were all I first encountered, but soon a new obstacle presented itself in the form of a thorny shrub called lantana. It is a species of mesquite, and is ruinous to the clothes, and uncomfortable to the skin. It is a hardy plant,—triumphs over drouth and flourishes in a flood. It thrives alike in rich soil, poor soil, stony ground, and where there is little or no soil at all. The most skilled botanist has never been able to find a single use for lantana. No animal will eat it. The islanders have more fear from lantana than filibusters or the restoration of monarchy. It spreads like contagion, and defies plow and hoe. It is nearly indestructible. I have been told that if you cut it down, each joint will start a separate new plant; if you grub it out, it will come again, and if you burn it, it will rise like a phenix, triumphant from its ashes. If I had an enemy whom I wished to do a mortal injury, I would sow lantana in his fields.

Sometimes half buried in this noxious plant I struggled blindly up the mountain side. At last making my way across a sort of ravine to some rocks blackened by time, I sat down almost out of breath to rest. My hold on the rocks was slight. I had scarcely six inches of space to cling to, and below me yawned a chasm fifty feet deep. There was no breeze on this side of the mountain, and the rays of the sun were exceedingly warm. So, as soon as I had partially recovered my breath, I resumed my toilsome journey to the top. I afterward learned that there was a path on the west side of the mountain which, though steep, is accessible to foot travellers.

I was willing to return by a beaten path and less precipitous route. On the way I paused to gaze upon a squad of convicts at work on the road. The uniform of the Hawaiian convict varies according to the offense with which he is charged. If it is only a misdemeanor, he wears a suit one-half of which is blue, the other brown. If he is convicted of felony, his garb is black and white striped, the stripes being perpendicular, instead of horizontal, as is the form of most of the prisoners in the United States. But one of this squad wore striped clothes.

Special Offers and Clubbing List.

The large numbers of maps which are being taken by our subscribers prove that they are all right and are a bargain for the price. We still continue these offers, and append our club list for reference. If you have not yet made out your list of papers for 1896, consult this list.

NUMBER ONE.

Everyone knows something about the great map publishing firm of Rand, McNally & Co. Their atlases and wall maps have gained a world-wide reputation. Their new state map of Michigan is the best one ever issued. It is 41 by 58 inches in size, full mounted with rollers, showing all organized townships, beautifully colored, and sells for $2.00. The former price was $3.00. This map can be furnished at the remarkably low price of $1.40, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included.

NUMBER TWO.

Have you seen Rand McNally & Co.'s large reverarible map, with the world on one side and the United States on the reverse? This is the largest map of the United States ever printed on one piece of paper. The map of the world is on Mercator's projection and gives a brief history of every country with population of chief cities, areas, voyages of discoveries etc. This map is especially suited for school use and is just the thing for ready reference in these times of international disputes. This $5.00 map and the Herald for $3.00.

THE DETROIT TRIBUNE.

The Detroit Tribune has long been recognized as one of the greatest newspapers of the Republican party, not only in this state but throughout the west. Although the Tribune has long enjoyed this distinction, it is safe to say that within the last two years its management has greatly raised the standard of the publication as a political, literary, and general newspaper. The Tribune should be read in every household of Michigan. We have made a special arrangement with the management whereby we can furnish the weekly Tribune and HERALD one year for the normal figure of $1.30.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.

The Cosmopolitan is almost too well known to need particular mention. It is simply a marvel that a magazine of such merit can be furnished for the money. A new lithographing press has recently been added to their machinery which will make the paper more attractive than ever. For 1896, 1344 pages and 1000 illustrations for 85 cents if taken with the Herald.

MCCLURE'S MAGAZINE.

OCTOGENARIAN ANNIVERSARY.

Last Sunday, Jan. 26, was the 80th anniversary of the birth of one of our pioneers, Darius St. John. As Will St. John was home from Chicago his father thought it proper to celebrate Monday in honor of the event, but the family anticipated his intentions by arranging the occasion for Saturday, as a surprise for the principal actor. Accordingly, about 85 of the older citizens of Clinton were invited to the St. John residence at 11 o'clock to partake of a bounteous repast and to pass congratulations to their host upon his joining the ranks of the octogenarians of Clinton. Among the participants were twelve whose average age is only a few months under 80 years each, as follows:

Mrs. Hixon, 90.
Mrs. E. P. Felton, 88.
Mrs. Jane VanDeMark, 81.
Mrs. Sara Wastell, 81.
C. H. Randall, 80.
Mrs. E. Y. Powell, 76.
Mrs. Haynes, 75.
E. W. Freese, 73.
Mrs. Watson, 73.
D. Woodward, 71.
S. B. St. John, 73.

Each guest registered their name and age and this record will long be cherished by the family, for a few years will number this notable gathering of our venerable citizens with the great majority. Age, however, had little to do with the enjoyment of the occasion, unless, perhaps, to add a little for every year represented, and the spirit of youth and happy bygone memories was paramount. The jokes and pranks as played upon each other in pioneer days were told by different ones, as were also more serious and interesting stories. Uncle Roswell Randall remembered the feast at which one wild turkey was sufficient for all the adult inhabitants of Clinton, and they had good appetites, too.

The true version of how this place derived the name of Clinton was also given. A dozen or so of the early settlers got together and each one wrote his choice of names. Capt Kies wrote the name of his personal friend, (De Witt) Clinton, the famous governor of New York. Upon reading the names this one was unanimously adopted.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. St. John, of Henrietta, and Mrs. Henrietta Kedzie, of Grand Haven, the first white girl born in Clinton, were present from abroad.

ONE MAN'S SUFFERING.

The Trials and Tribulations of a Battle Creek Citizen—How He Comes to Tell This Story.

(From the Battle Creek Moon.)

Among the moulders at the works of the Michigan foundry company can be found Mr. Amos Maynard; he has lived in Battle Creek for over ten years, is honored and respected by all who know him; such is the man who makes this statement, he says; "I have had kidney trouble for years, and it has made my life miserable. The heavy lifting, necessary in my business, made me worse. I have been compelled to lie in bed in a helpless condition for as long as nine days at a time; the greatest pain was from my back, which sometimes felt as though a bayonet was being run through me in the region of my kidneys; many citizens of Battle Creek knew how bad I was. I could not move without the greatest caution, for as soon as I attempted to stoop over, bend to one side, or even turn in bed, the pain was simply unbearable. I wore porous plasters constantly for the little temporary relief they brought me. Whenever I caught the slightest cold it went straight to my kidneys and made me worse. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and got some. I have taken in all four boxes of them, and I now feel as active as ever. A few months ago I would have ridiculed the idea of being cured so quickly, and being able to work as I can now. All the long-standing pains are gone, and the former traces of kidney disorders found in my urine have disappeared. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to many friends who were troubled as I was, and in every case I have learned they proved as beneficial as with me. Doan's Kidney Pills would be cheap to me at almost any price."

How a Tree Grows.

If you wish to become thoroughly acquainted with the tree's mode of growth the first thing of importance is to keep in view the function of the "cambian layer"—the soft, spongy substance lying between the wood proper and the bark. The pulpy, porous substance is really a tissue of minute cells, visible only under the microscope, and apparently all of the same size and shape in any given variety of tree. The cells lying nearest the bark contribute a permanent accretion to the tree's covering, while those which lie nearest the wood slowly change from "cambian layer" to real tree fiber. In this way the bark becomes thicker each year, and at the same time the tree itself is permanently enlarged.

In the spring and early summer the bark on all trees is to a certain extent loosened to permit of the cambian layer exercising its functions, and when this wholly ceases the result is manifest in the "ring" of new wood and the thin layer of newly formed inner bark. The ends of each limb have also grown perceptibly—from two inches to two feet, according to the species—but knots, marks, forks, etc., on tree trunks are no higher from the ground than they were the year before. If some one tells you that a limb which is now but three or four feet from the ground "will be high enough to walk under when the tree gets its growth," put him or her down as a person knowing but little about the natural history of trees.—St. Louis Republic.

Bridge Paints.

A careful investigation of the reliability of different paints used on bridges has been made by E. Gerber of the American Society of Civil Engineers, with some important practical results. It appears that in all cases rust was found to a greater or less extent, occurring always in spots in the center of clean metal, most of this, however, being thin and as bad in new structures as in old. It was, nevertheless, found that the iron oxide paints adhered more firmly to the metal than the lead paints, only one case being found in which the latter adhered well and was tough, though much of this brittleness, it is suggested, may be due to adulteration of the oil by turpentine, benzine or other petroleum products, there being more likelihood of such adulteration with lead paints than with iron, as they are more difficult to spread, and consequently dilution of the oil is resorted to. In some cases bridges coated with iron oxide 11 or 12 years ago were found to be still in good condition without having to be repainted. Only two of the bridges examined had been painted with carbon or asphaltum paints, but the condition of things in these two cases was found to be not altogether satisfactory, as the coating was not tough or adherent. Too little attention, Gerber remarks, has been paid to thoroughly cleaning the metal before the first coat of paint is applied.

Writers Who Are Seldom Seen.

Of some celebrities we hear a great deal, because they deem it advisable to keep themselves well before the public; of others we hear nothing at all, but of their work a great deal. Of literary men Bret Harte, George Meredith, George Gissing, W. Clark Russell and "Q." keep, as the expression is, themselves to themselves and shun publicity as they would the cholera. Bret Harte—white haired now and not so slim as when he "put Sandy Bar together"—clings to the shady retirement of St. John's Wood and neither lectures, preaches, edits nor endeavors to get into parliament. But ever and anon we have a new collection of his delightful stories of "Woolly West" life, and so are made aware that he is still working away as hard as ever.

The fact that Mr. George Meredith recently spoke in public for the first time qualifies him for the title of "retiring celebrity;" Mr. Gissing avoids London's roar and dirt with a steady persistence, and Mr. Clark Russell prefers his house at Deal to the most sumptuously furnished west end mansion. "Q." seldom leaves Fowey, a solitary little township in Cornwall, whither Messrs. Cassell & Co.—for whom he acts as literary adviser—dispatch great parcels of MSS. at regular intervals, to be passed judgment upon.—London Sun.

Mortality of Physicians.

Dr. Cortright, in the Brooklyn Medical Journal has written a paper on the "Mortality and Causes of Death In Medical Men." This paper is based on the records of 450 physicians who died in New York and Brooklyn during the past eight years. The average age of death was 54.6 years, and the mortality was about 25.23 as compared with a mortality of 15.93 in clergymen and 20.23 in lawyers. There is a considerable mortality from the self administration of drugs; that from consumption is about half the general rate, while that from typhoid fever is very high. There is a high death rate due to arterial sclerosis and other degenerative changes.

The practical conclusion deducted from Dr. Cortright's statistics, says The Medical Journal, is that doctors should take at least three weeks' complete rest and change yearly; should be extremely moderate in the use of stimulants; should be regular in their meals, never worry and never hurry. This is the kind of advice that doctors give, but do not take. The further suggestion, however, that they all join some medical sickness and life assurance society is a wise one.—Medical Record.

He Must Have Been There.

An anecdote—a perfectly true one—told me the other day of the late Duke of Clarence, reminded me of another about the Duke of Wellington, who, when a party of friends were busily poring over a map of Waterloo, remarked in an unconcerned way, as if they were unaware of the fact, "I was there, you know."

But about the Duke of Clarence. He was visiting his friend and tutor, Mr. Oscar Browning, at his rooms in Cambridge. There hung upon the walls an engraving of Windsor castle, taken from a point of view unfamiliar, perhaps, to the young prince. "What a beautiful place!" he exclaimed as he looked at the picture. "Somehow I seem to know it. I think I must have been there!" "Windsor, sir, Windsor," said Mr. Browning. Of course the duke laughed heartily with every one present.—London Gentlewoman.

A Judge's Reply.

At one time a delicate question as to the construction of a statute was discussed before the venerable chief justice of the New York court of common pleas, the Hon. Charles P. Daly, and after elaborate arguments on each side, the chief justice decided the question in open court, giving his reasons in a few well timed remarks which caused a lull in the courtroom. The silence was speedily broken by the successful attorney, who stood and said, with an air of patronizing approval, "May it please your honor, I, for one, agree with you entirely." The chief justice, with a twinkle in his eye which betokened his enjoyment of the joke, but a perfectly grave face, quietly removed his glasses, and, amid a breathless stillness, said, "I have, counselor, generally found in my experience that the successful party agrees with the court."

Du Maurier, by Himself.

They are telling a good story on the other side of Mr. Du Maurier in connection with a collector of Trilbyana, who wrote to him for an autograph contribution to a volume which he is making up. The book was sent back to him with a pleasant letter from the artist and a sketch representing the creator of Trilby with angel's wings, a forked tail, his left hand in his pocket and his right holding a cigarette, in the curling smoke of which might be read the following modest legend: "Some seem to think he's got wings like an angel, some that he's got a cloven foot and a forked tail. He is quite an ordinary little man. I assure you—un vieux petit bourgeois—ni bon ni mauvais et tres malheureux qu'on s'occupe tant de lui."

Stage.

Pliny says that among the Romans of his time there was a belief that stags could, by their breath, draw serpents from their holes in the ground, and after getting them out would then trample them to death. The early hunters of this country relate many incidents concerning the enmity between deer and serpents of all kinds. It was well known that stags would often without hesitation attack rattlesnakes, and by jumping high in the air and descending upon the serpent with the fore hoofs drawn closely together would cut the snake to pieces.

Medical Writers.

The best medical writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will, by its own action, reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh during the past few years proves that only one remedy has met these conditions, and that is Century Catarrh Cure. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians, and surgeons concede this fact. The most distressing symptoms yield to it. For sale by C. A. We consulted the best medical talent. They said there was no help for me, that I had organic disease of the heart for which there was no remedy. I had read your advertisement in The Graphic and a year ago, as a last resort, tried one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart, which convinced me that there was true merit in it. OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Nothing of a startling nature accompanied the holding of the national silver conference in Washington this week. Nearly one hundred ardent and enthusiastic friends of silver held secret sessions and ratified the determination reached at the last conference to hold a national convention and put a national silver ticket in the field. The silver men in Congress were conspicuous by their absence, and it was probably their absence which caused Senator Stewart, who took part in the conference, to say that there were men in Congress talking silver who were traitors to the cause. The delegates to the silver conference, expressed confidence that the silver men in the republican and democratic parties would nearly all go to the new party after their national convention, unless one or the other of them should put a silver plank in their platform, which is not regarded as probable. The populists are not willing to be swallowed by the silver party, because they think they are in a better condition to do the swallowing, having shown a strength of 1,250,000 votes, while the strength of the new party is yet to be shown.

The Monroe doctrine is still capable of furnishing sensations to order. The reporting of the resolution affirming that doctrine, by the Senate committee on Foreign Relations, had nothing sensational about it, although many who believe in the doctrine, thought its wording somewhat unfortunate, and unnecessarily explicit. But it has been followed by several sensational features. There is apparently, consorted effort on the part of a coterie of big newspapers to stir up opposition to the resolution, and the administration, which started the whole Monroe doctrine discussion is using its influence to prevent the resolution being pushed to a vote, on the ground that its adoption would endanger the peaceful settlement of the Venezuela squabble. But the greatest sensation was the speech of Senator Wolcott, Colorado, attacking not only the resolution reported to the Senate, but the Monroe doctrine itself. The stock of sensations in this question is not yet exhausted, either.

While the urgency deficiency bill, which carries $3,242,582 to meet deficencies in the regular appropriations for U. S. Courts, and nearly a million and a half more to meet other deficencies, and which was this week passed by the House, was under discussion, there was some very plain talk by members about the manner in which these courts are run, and especially about the abuses of the fee system. To show that cases are "made" for the fees Representative Swanson, of Va., called attention to the fact that more than 45 per cent of the suits brought in the U. S. Courts are dismissed. Representative Lacey, of Iowa, declared the whole system to be honeycombed with fraud, and said judges appointed for life did not always feel a keen desire to reduce expenditures, because they sometimes helped to fatten on the spoils. He said there was a man in Ark., who held the office of clerk of U. S. Commissioner, and drew over $12,000 a year in fees.

The action of Comptroller, Bowler, in holding up the sugar bounty appropriation, is going to be investigated by the House Judiciary committee, as soon as the House adopts a resolution reported from that committee, authorizing the investigation.

The Senate passed 65 bills in less than two hours one day this week, but they were all bills which had no opposition and, while important to those directly interested, were not of general importance.

Members of the house are beginning to speculate on the probability of an unusually early adjournment for a long session. If the Senate was as thoroughly controlled as the House is, an early adjournment would be easily arrived at, but as it is, the 4th of July is likely to find Congress in session.

There was a very large attendance, twelve sir knights coming from Tecumseh alone. Eminent Commander Barrett announced that Rev. Chas. M. Brown, of Tecumseh, would read the next paper in the series on Friday evening, Jan. 31, this subject being, "Christianity and Templarism."

The musical cult of Toledo is finely developed and seems to flourish in the rythmic ozone of the Maumee marshes. The Toledo Bee thus satarizes the appreciation with which an audience there received the great Remenyi. "Up on the stage a Mr. Remenyi, and some other people played and sang. Mr. Remenyi played the violin, but he didn't often make enough noise to disturb the conversation and nobody seemed to be annoyed. There were a few people who imagined they had paid their money to hear Mr. Remenyi play, but they were mostly old fogies and are not recognized by the swagger set. Mr. Remenyi seemed to share this minority opinion, for once he stopped playing and waited for several minutes for the conversation to subside. But it didn't. During the wait it grew louder and louder, and those bits of paper, on which was printed something that was labeled 'program,' rustled as cheerfully and swished as loudly as a bran new eighteen yard skirt lined with fibre chamois. During the occasional lulls in conversation it was possible to hear some good music from the stage. Remenyi gave a series of magnificent selections, played as only Remenyi can play them."

Ann Arbor Argus: Ypsilanti is becoming noted for its poets. The distance between "Grace with snow in her face" of the Willis bard, to a four line classic upon the horrors of war by one Wm. Lambie is one that could only be accomplished in a county of letters. Now listen to this from the Ypsilantian, worthy of the new English poet laureate:

WAR.

Save us from murder, battle and war,
The cruelest curse of earth by far,
Pray everyone of honor and worth

Ypsilanti, Jan. 16, 1896. Wm. Lambie.

Of course this poem needs analyzing. The average mind would not grasp it in all its beauty. "Save us from murder." That's easy, "murder" meaning here the sacrifice of soldiers on the altar of liberty, legal "murder" since it has the sanction of the government, but "murder" nevertheless from a poetical point of view. "Battle" and "war" mean much the same, although of course the terms are not exactly synonymous with "murder" because often a war is of words and a battle may be one of ballots, in either of which cases no murder is contemplated, although one may occur. Note the cadence in "The cruelest curse of earth by far." This line needs no interpretation. It was evidently written for its cadence and is a success in the cadence business. "Pray every one of honor and worth to save us from a hell upon earth." Now that's where the poet gets in his work. He forgets the rhymic swing of the former lines to thunder forth in no unmistaking language his panacea for saving the nation from the dire disaster of war. His last line may be halting, but it contains such an heroic measure that he will be pardoned if it is an old soldier in one or two feet. It is right, too, that it should be an old soldier and limp in one foot, for is he not talking of war? We have met people who would have used "hades" instead of "hell" in the last line but when the line is read with "hades" instead of the other word equally as hot, it will be noticed that the metre when the sun goes down is badly bobbed. From the points narrated, gleaned after several minutes study of the roundelay, it will be readily seen that the Willis bard's laurels must be grasped from his brow and surrendered unto this new poetic light in the world of letters, Mr. Wm. Lambie, of Ypsilanti.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

It was a large company that responded to Mr. and Mrs. Will Schreder's invitation for the regular meeting of the club on the evening of the 28th. The fine condition of the roads and the superb moonlight made the evening all that could be desired, and it was not strange that Mr. and Mrs. Schreder had a well filled house.

We listened to vocal music by Miss Murphy at the opening of the literary program, and a nicely rendered recitation by Ethel Schreder followed. J. T. Boyce read an entertaining reminiscence of the school district in which he lives. Fred Rector gave a declamation with his usual readiness, and Andrew Kehoe, assisted by a friend, presented a very comical dialogue. The selections by different members proved interesting, and many wise sayings of our President were recalled. Some little children volunteered to assist with the program and their efforts were appreciated by all. It would be difficult to state the result of the discussion, as the speakers were inclined to deviate from the topic chosen. This much may be said, however, that mixed husbandry had the preferance, many thinking that the fertility of the soil would be enhanced to a greater degree in that manner than by any special crop.

The club adjourned to meet at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Will Rector, Tuesday evening, Feb. 11. Following is the program:

Piano Solo—Ora Gillespie.
Quartet—Members of the club.
Piano Solo—Mrs. Geo. J. Benedict.
Song—Hazel Roberts.
Duet—Ora and Jennie Gillespie.
Song—Mary Murphy.
Piano Solo—Bertha Roberts.
Duet—Mrs. G. J. Benedict and John Boyce.
Duet—Mrs. Jerome Bowen and daughter.
Solo—Mrs. Geo. J. Benedict.
Question—Would we injure our district schools by adopting the unit system?—Opened by J. F. N. Bowen.

The new program was subjected to criticisms of the students Monday, and as usual the ones with irregular courses came to grief.

What is the cause of the vacant seats, rough voices, and unharmonious sounds which lead one to believe that he is in a den of barking dogs? Can it be due to the ice on the Globe pond.

Mr. Van Slyke, a representative of the Western Seaman's Friend Society, favored the high school Monday with a description of his work among the seamen and other classes more destitute than we, and Tuesday morning a collection was taken to aid the society.

John Temple Graves.

An unusually large audience assembled to hear John Temple Graves in "The Reign of the Demagogue," last Monday evening.

Mr. Graves is a man rather under the medium size, with a striking face displaying strong convictions and intellectuality. Although the subject of demagogy is somewhat worn, it is by no means threadbare, and perhaps no theme is more timely than this, especially when presented with the force and vividness which is characteristic of this orator. Certainly no speaker has ever appeared in Tecumseh who could surpass Mr. Graves in word painting or histronic ability.

His diction, rhetoric and dramatic powers are almost beyond comparison. And yet it was the experience of many listeners, that the orator was hard to follow; presumably on account of his rapid speech. The flights of eloquence were so continuous and rapid that they seemed to strain the soaring capacity of the audience who, from their appearance, wished to light occasionally on some convenient perch of pathos or story. However, this was only granted occasionally and they were taken thro' the starry vaults of real oratory to heights never before reached by a Tecumseh audience. That John Temple Graves is a born orator there can be no doubt.

Wade Jones dedicated the end of one finger to a fodder cutter a few days since. This is the altar on which so many of our country cousins sacrifice their best fingers, so Wade has the satisfaction of knowing that he was following the example of many noble precedents.

Next week Wednesday will occur the usual monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid society of the Christian church of Britton. There will be a bounteous supper prepared for all, and as Mrs. L. Hoagland is chairman, that is sufficient. Remember the date, Feb. 5. Let all come.

Toledo parties, says the Adrian Press, are buying several farms between this city and Tecumseh, and are also operating to some extent in the vicinity of Blissfield. An anonymous communication without postmark or date line arrived at our sanctum Wednesday, announcing the birth, on Tuesday, of a pair of twin girls and a single boy. Enthusiasm over the approaching entertainment of Edouard Remenyi and his company is not confined to the musically educated public, but is shared by many who are seldom in musical affairs, yet know that for, all—musicians and "unmusical"—a delicious treat is forthcoming. Only deaf men can sit in front of Remenyi and not be moved by his marvelous talent.

Mrs. Mary C. Spencer, state librarian at Lansing, is desirous of receiving from all the study clubs of the state, those in the townships as well as in the cities and villages, a program of their work, and in all cases, as far as possible, an outline of the plan of organization, history and aims of the clubs. It is Mrs. Spencer's purpose to issue an official bulletin on the subject. Tecumseh could furnish the librarian with enough data on this subject to make quite a compilation by itself.

Clinton ladies give their 4th annual leap year ball at town hall Wednesday evening, and the ladies have been sent invitations to participate and bring along a leap year partner of the male persuasion. The county clerk will establish a branch office in Clinton in a short time.—Adrian Press.

Edouard Remenyi, the great Hungarian violinist, has recently added another gem to his collection of fine and noted violins, having recently bought the celebrated "Duke" Guanarius, owned by Hall, of London, Eng., paying for it the sum of $6,500. The "Titan," which Mr. Remenyi uses in his concert, is valued at $8,000.

The mission, which has been conducted at St. Peter's church for the past week, under the direction of Mr. Webb, of Mt. Clemens, closed Wednesday. Mr. Webb has left the impression among our citizens of being a most earnest christian worker, who is straightforward, practical and dignified in his methods. Mr. and Mrs. Webb left yesterday for their home in Mt. Clemens.

Adrian Times: Henry F. Barnes, former county drain commissioner and present postmaster of Ridgeway, was arrested by Sheriff Wilson this morning on a charge of assault and battery, preferred by Geo. Houseman, of that village. It appears the young people of the place have been in the habit of congregating in the postoffice, causing the postmaster such annoyance that he became exasperated the other day and ejected young Mr. Houseman. Mr. Barnes says he was simply carrying out the rules and regulations of the department in performing this act. He plead not guilty before Justice Westerman and gave $200 bonds for his appearance on Monday.

Hudson Gazette: Geo. Cleveland, of Addison, who is serving a sentence of eight years in the state prison, at Jackson, for assault upon Postmaster Weatherwax, at Somerset, was the means of saving the keeper's life in prison the other day. Cleveland has charge of the shirt making department, and several vicious convicts who work under him rose up in arms and started after the overseer, and were about to strike him on the head with flat-irons, when Cleveland stepped up from behind and overpowered the assailants. George is a convict, but his manly deed in saving the overseer's life has placed him high in the estimation of the prison officials.

The following is taken from a Des Moines, Iowa, paper of recent date: "Mr. Lloyd Barney, who is gaining a reputation as 'The Western Sandow,' gave an exhibition of muscle-posing, which incited great enthusiasm. He is now under a $10,000 challenge to be placed by the Des Moines Athletic club, against any one of his age, 21. Mr. Barney weighs 201 pounds. For some time he has been connected with Schram Bros.' butcher shop, but will soon go to Chicago and farther east, where alluring offers have been made him. His first engagement will be at the Hopkins' theater. E. G. Beeson is to accompany him." Mr. Barney was born in Hudson, Mich. His parents, who resided here some years ago, will be remembered by many of our citizens. Mr. Barney, sr. worked for J. R. Hialey. Mrs. Barney is a sister of M. E. A very brilliant social event occurred last evening at the residence of Albert Brewer. The occasion was the marriage of his daughter Albertine to Percival W. A. Fitzsimmons. Rev. C. M. Brown officiated, pronouncing the impressive ring ceremony before a large assemblage. The ceremony, toilets, wedding lunch and every appointment of the affair were, in form and taste, in keeping with the high social standing of the contracting parties. The guests from abroad were: Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cummins, Miss Jane Corlette and J. B. Draper, of Toledo; the Misses Dodds, C. A. Bidwell, Raynor Anderson and Roy DeWolf of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Waldron, of Jackson; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bittman, of Saginaw. The bridal party took the Wabash train at Britton, but the scribe was unable to ascertain their destination.

An Artless Sponse.

In the south of Ireland a short time ago a prominent gentleman was elected to the coronership, and very naturally was proud of the honor which had been conferred upon him. When he carried the news of his election to his home, he appeared before his wife in a very dignified manner and said:

"My dear, I was elected coroner today, and there is something I wish to say to you. In the future I wish you to cease talking so much with the servants and assume the dignity becoming the wife of a high public official. Do you understand?"

"Yes, Tom. Oh, I'm so glad that you have been made a coroner! Just think! Mrs. Brown and all the Smiths will be calling to see me!" And her eyes fairly blazed with delight.

After revolving the matter in her mind and cackling with pride as only a woman can she suddenly exclaimed:

"Oh, Tom, if you are a coroner, I suppose I shall be a coroneress, won't I?"—Liverpool Mercury.

A RESIDENCE WRECKED.

Grand Rapids, Jan. 28.—William E. Boyd and wife visited their recently purchased house in the eastern suburbs Sunday afternoon, and when they left everything was safe and in order. Early Monday morning the house was shattered by an explosion that aroused the people for a mile around, and the ruins were soon consumed by the fire which immediately started. It is believed the explosion was maliciously placed in the cellar and touched off. Boyd until recently was engaged in the chattel mortgage business. The house was valued at $2,500 and the furniture at $3,000, and the insurance is $3,000.

Shoudy, one of the heirs living in this county, of a Holland Bible 10 years old which contains, it is said, the lacking data necessary to substantiate their claims. The 50 Michigan heirs are instructed by their eastern attorneys to immediately file their claims, as the present holders of the property are making advances toward a compromise and express a willingness to settle upon liberal terms.

STRANGE PHENOMENON.

A Fireball Strikes the Earth at Nirvana.

Nirvana, Jan. 29.—A remarkable phenomenon occurred Monday night. A large fireball, apparently about the size of a bushel basket, fell to the earth at an angle of about 20 degrees. When it struck the snow it rebounded and floated off at nearly the same angle as it fell, and finally disappeared behind the hills. It is thought to have been one of those meteoric bubbles sometimes seen in this latitude, which vary in size from a hat to that seen Monday night. They are supposed to consist of phosphorescent gas, inclosed by a thin film. A number of these bubbles fell in this country in 1832, causing many people to predict the end of the world. This is the first known since that time.

Spiritualists Adjourn.

Decatur, Jan. 27.—Michigan Spiritualists closed their annual midwinter meeting Sunday night at Bangor with an address by Mrs. Jennie Hagan Jackson, of Grand Rapids.

You're Losing Something every day that you try to worry along without Pearline. And what's the use? What do you gain? You can't have washing done more safely than it's done with Pearline. And it can't be done more cheaply—if it's done safely. You lose in time and labor. Pearline saves half of both. You lose in clothes, too. You can't rub them clean in the old way on the washboard, without rubbing them to pieces. All these things that you lose are money.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 350 JAMES PYLE, New York

The Danger is Averted by Using

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray and began falling out so rapidly that I was threatened with immediate baldness. Hearing Ayer's Hair Vigor highly spoken of, I commenced using this preparation, and was so well satisfied with the result that I have never tried any other kind of dressing. It stopped the hair from falling out, stimulated a new growth of hair, and kept the scalp free from dandruff. Only an occasional application is now needed to keep my hair of good, natural color. I never hesitate to recommend any of Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. HAIGHT, Avoca, Neb.

Brimm, a new novel by William Black, written with all the author's well known charm of manner, will begin in the December Number, 1895, and continue until May. A new novel by George du Maurier, entitled The Martian, will also begin during the year. It is not too much to say that no novel has ever been awaited with such great expectation as the successor to Trilby. The Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc will continue and will relate the story of the failure and martyrdom of the Maid of Orleans. Other important fiction of the year will be a Sequel to Mark Twain, under the title, Tom Sawyer, Detective; a humorous three-part tale called Two Sermons from Muddlety, by Langdon Mitchell; and short stories by Octave Thanet, Richard Harding Davis, Mary E. Wilkins, Julian Ralph, Brander Matthews, Owen Wister, and other well known writers.

Prof. Woodrow Wilson will contribute six papers on George Washington and his times, with illustrations by Howard Pyle. Poultney Bigelow's history of The German Struggle for Liberty, illustrated by R. Caton Woodville, will be continued through the winter. Two papers on St. Clair's defeat and Mad Anthony Wayne's victory, by Theodore Roosevelt, with graphic illustrations will be printed during the year.

A noteworthy feature of the MAGAZINE during 1896 will be a series of articles by Casper W. Whitney, describing his trip of 1600 miles on snow-shoes and with dog-sledge trains into the unexplored Barren Grounds of British North America in pursuit of wood-bison and musk-oxen. Mr. Whitney's series will have the added interest of being illustrated from photographs taken by himself.

Harper's Weekly

HARPER'S WEEKLY is a journal for the whole country. It deals with the events of the world that are important to Americans.

In carrying out this policy, in 1895, Julian Ralph visited China and Japan, and journeyed through the West; Richard Harding Davis took a trip through the Caribbean Sea; the evolutions of the new navy were described and illustrated by Rufus F. Zogbaum; Frederic Remington presented studies of Army and Frontier life; Poultney Bigelow attended the opening of the Kiel Canal.

In 1896 like attention will be given to every notable happening. The chief events in art, literature, and music and the drama will be artistically presented. W. D. Howells, in the new department, Life and Letters, will discuss in his interesting way books and the social questions of the time. R. H. Martin's sprightly gossip of the Busy World will be continued. The progress of the Transportation Commission around the World will be followed and Caspar W. Whitney will conduct the department of Amateur Sport.

In 1896 will occur a Presidential election. In its editorials and through its political cartoons the WEEKLY will continue to be an independent advocate of good government and sound money.

In fiction the WEEKLY will be especially strong. It will publish the only novel of the year by W. D. Howells, and a stirring serial of a Scotch feud, by S. R. Crockett. The short stories selected are of unusual excellence and interest. In every respect HARPER'S WEEKLY will maintain its leading place in the illustrated journalism of the world.

The volumes of the WEEKLY begin with the first number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the number current at the time of receipt of order.

Remittances should be made by Postoffice Money Order or draft, to avoid chance of loss.

A mirror could not lie if it wanted to. The glass has nothing to gain by flattery. If the roses of health and plumpness of beauty are leaving your face, your mirror will tell you so. You can see for yourself you are in danger of losing the admiration which is every woman's due. You may not really realize it, but health is the greatest beautifier in the world. Lotions, plasters, creams and cosmetics cannot make as good a complexion as health can. They cannot hide the story of ill-health. They merely emphasize it. Health shows in clearness of eyes and skin, in redness of lips and vivacity of manner and expression. Disease is proved positively by the absence of these things. When a woman sees the indications of ill-health in the face, she may with almost absolute certainty look for the cause in one or both of two conditions—constipation, and derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. These things in themselves are in some degree related, and nine-tenths of all the sickness of women come from them. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure permanently and positively any so-called "female complaint." Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will cure constipation. There is no reason in the world why a woman should not be perfectly healthy. It rests with herself. If she will take these truly wonderful remedies, and follow a few hygienic measures, she may become perfectly strong and healthy in all ways. She will gain in health, length and flesh. Hollows and angles will give place to fullness and grace. She will be that noblest and most beautiful of all creation—a perfect woman. All druggists sell Dr. Pierce's medicines, but if you care to know more about them and to know all of the grandest medical truths, send 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, and a complete copy of Dr. Pierce's 1008 page book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" will be sent post-paid. It is a veritable medical library, complete in one volume. Several finely illustrated chapters are devoted to the consideration of diseases of women, and their successful home-treatment. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Feb. 2. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, Personal Work.

SCRIPTURE READING.—John iii. 1-3; Matth. xix. 16; Luke xix. 5; John iv. 1-10.

Christ's ways of winning souls is the general topic for study during February. Our work is to win men to Him. In no other way can we so well learn how to do this work as by studying His own method. He declared, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me." We are to rely not upon our own eloquence or persuasiveness, not upon peculiar methods and artistic attractions, but upon the substantial truth which can become sure foundations for a soul's salvation. In all this work recognition must be had of the powerlessness of all human effort in itself. The divine Spirit must take the things of God and impress them as a seal upon the heart of the sinner, or there will be no change of life from evil to good.

This abiding power and presence of the Holy Spirit is promised every true and devoted worker for Christ. Skill in the use of the appointed means of salvation can be acquired by the workers. This is a legitimate subject of study. How did Christ do? What would He do in a case like the present one? Earnest desire to know His mind and persistent seeking to acquire His methods will not fail to make one more efficient in reaching and influencing men.

This work cannot be delegated to others. Angels could not do the work of God in saving men. The mere proclamation of God's will and law never moves any one to do it. By the law is the knowledge of sin, and as men realize their contrariness to God's nature they naturally hate His rule. Angels might bring the law, but could never give grace to the human heart. Jesus when He comes brings life and immortality to light, less by what He said than by what He was and what He did. He not only told men of the love of God, but He loved men as God, and love awakened answering love. Law never can have such response. Angels never knew the depths of love divine, and so could never reveal it. Only souls that know the divine compassion and sympathy are fitted to save men to God. This is the reason that those gifted with little of earthly learning or culture, but possessed of souls aflame with earnest love of men and God, have often been the most successful evangelists. They touch men and awaken them to a better life.

So Christ sought out men. He became like them that He might make them like Himself.

Boyhood Home of Wesley.

Deeply interesting to all who admire the good and love the true must ever be the home where Susannah Wesley gave such careful training in early years to the "little Jackey" who in after time was destined to be so influential in the advancement of true piety. The view given above shows the window, just above the right hand gatepost and almost hidden by ivy, from which the boy is said to have been rescued when the old rectory was burned. It probably corresponds to the window in the former house. That one, which was built "all of timber and plaister and covered all with straw thatche," was destroyed by fire Feb 9, 1709. The present edifice was erected in 1710 by Rev. Samuel Wesley, the father of John. None of the children was born in the present rectory. Charles was the last one born in the old one. Kezia, the nineteenth child, was born in the house of a neighbor a month after the fire. Probably some of the old oak beams not consumed in the fire were used in building some part of the new rectory, as some scorched by fire have been found during recent alterations. Many additions and changes have been made to the house since the time of the Wesleys. It is still the home of the rector of the parish church of Epworth.

EPWORTH RECTORY.

Wesley's Loan Fund.

Many of the methods most employed by the workers among the poor at the present time were used if not originated by John Wesley in his work. At the old foundry in Moorfields, London, he established a loan fund from which the poor could be assisted and so saved from pawning their goods and paying exorbitant rates of interest. Such funds are among the most recent means used by the reform workers in our great cities. If this work had been kept up among Methodists and enlarged to meet the needs of the times, it would have prevented the rise of a host of so called benevolent insurance organizations which have proved so detrimental to the interests of the people, consuming time for unnecessary meetings and squandering large sums of money on visionary schemes.

He Needeth Thee.

Jesus, Thou needest me,
Even me, Thou Light Divine!
O Son of God, Thou needest me,
Thou needest sins like mine!

Thy fullness needs my want,
Thy wealth my poverty.
Thy healing skill my sickness needs,
Thy joy my misery.

Thy strength my weakness needs,
Thy grace my worthlessness.
Thy greatness needs a worm like me
To cherish and to bless.

It was Thy need of me
That brought Thee from above.
It is my need of Thee, O Lord,
That draws me to Thy love! —Bonar.

A GREAT REPUBLICAN

SENATOR HANSBOROUGH FOR AMERICAN POLICY.

A Gentle Hint to the National Convention Next Year—Why Protect Industries and Leave Financial System Exposed to Foreign Invaders.

Senator Hansbrough, of North Dakota, is not only a statesman of discernment and ability, but he is an experienced journalist and knows how to put his views into concise English for publication. In compliance with a request, he sends the editor of the World the following interesting summary of the political outlook in North Dakota:

"The political situation in this state amounts to this: The people are looking forward anxiously to the time when they can assist in bringing about a change of administration. The money question and the tariff will be the two national issues here. The two old parties are about equally divided with respect to silver. There is talk about organizing a silver party, and I should not be surprised to see a third party upon an exclusively silver platform, place a ticket in the field next year. There is a very strong and growing disposition on the part of the people, regardless of party, in favor of independent action on the part of the United States on the financial question. Our people are getting tired of dictation from abroad. A great many republicans do not understand why it is that our party, which goes for the protection of American industry, should not also go for an American financial system. I am one of the republicans who cannot understand why we should favor a foreign financial system. Perhaps I do not fully grasp the American idea." —Cleveland World.

In the forgoing, Senator Hansbrough voices the sentiments of vast numbers of republicans in all parts of the United States. They are at a loss to know why the average republican leader should swell with indignation, look big and talk big whenever it is suggested that we should follow England's revenue policy, and at the same time enter a tremulous protest against an independent financial policy.

They appear to think that our very salvation depends upon being in accord with England's monetary system. Just why, they never explain.

The talk in a grandiloquent way about the "best money in the world," but they never clearly and intelligibly state how gold meets that definition. They start out with the broad assumption that gold is the best money in the world, and if we only preserve the gold standard, our monetary system will necessarily be "sound," even though the business of the country be paralyzed. They never stop to consider that we have had the gold standard for 22 years—that since 1878 every dollar in use has been upon a par with every other dollar, and still there has been endless complaint.

We have had high protection all these years. Some classes and some favored localities have prospered, but at the same time general conditions have not been healthy. There has been a constant melting away of property and commodity values, altogether to the disadvantage of those engaged in productive industry, and utterly destructive of genuine prosperity.

While millions of producers have been literally ruined by the ever-increasing burden of debt, consequent upon the fall of prices, in the money centers, millionaires and multi-millionairs have been created with startling rapidity. If there is a party leader in the country who can not see so palpable a fact, he ought to descend from his pedestal at once.

Republicans ought to know that there is less reason why we should adopt England's monetary standard, than there is for us to oppose her free-trade policy. In the latter, there is simply a legitimate rivalry. But upon the question of adopting a monetary standard the interests of the two countries are completely reversed. England is a creditor nation; the United States is a debtor. A creditor is benefited by a rise in the value of money; a debtor is injured by such rise. As gold goes up the English creditor is enriched, while the American debtor is impoverished. Instead of making ourselves a potential factor in maintaining and enhancing England's gold standard, the principle of self-preservation should prompt us to use our strength in breaking it down.

If we should demonetize gold entirely, it would considerably lower the value of that metal, and relieve us of a portion of our debt to England. On the other hand, the more nations England can induce to demonetize silver, the greater becomes the demand for gold and the more it rises in value.

What America wants is not "England's monetary system," not especially the money standard of any nation, but an honest standard, which will measure the same to-day, to-morrow and for all time.

Of course this would be an "ideal" standard which it would be difficult, perhaps impossible, to reach; but there can be no question that the restoration of true bimetallism by the full and free use of both gold and silver, will be a vast improvement upon existing conditions. But to return to Senator Hansbrough. The significant part of his utterance is that relating to the formation of a silver party. It is very closely in line with the language of Senator Pettigrew a short time since, and it indicates a strong silver sentiment in the ranks of the republican party. Republican leaders will do well not to be over-confident because of the recent elections. Hundreds of thousands of silver men voted the republican ticket because at the time there was nothing else for them to do. They were thoroughly disgusted with Clevelandism in finance, but no man should make the mistake of assuming that they will be satisfied with Shermanism as a substitute.—Republican.

GOD OR MAMMON.

Birmingham, Ala. (Special Telegram)—Captain Joseph F. Johnston, a prominent banker of this city, and leader of the free silver forces of the Democratic party in Alabama, to-day announces himself a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. This announcement, coupled with the canvass just begun by Senators Pugh and Morgan for free silver, formally inaugurates the campaign in Alabama. Captain Johnston has been a candidate for Governor twice before; in 1890, and last year. Each time he was the second strongest man before the convention. Morgan and Pugh and other silver leaders will canvass every county in the State for Johnston. The friends of Gov. Oates have practically forced the latter to make the race for Governor again, although he is a candidate for Senator to succeed Pugh and says he does not desire to stand for re-election for Governor. He says, however, that he will not decline the gubernatorial nomination, which his friends regard as assurance that he will run. This brings on a fight to the finish between Democrats with the money question as the issue, Oates being a sound money man, and promises to split the party to pieces and make Republican chances for success easy.—Press Dispatch.

The foregoing is highly suggestive, and encouraging to the friends of silver. Alabama, like all of the other Southern States, is strongly in favor of bimetallism—the gold and silver money of the constitution. Nothing has caused the slightest appearance of weakening but the baleful influence of Clevelandism, which poisons everything it touches.

There is not the slightest danger of the Republicans carrying Alabama on an anti-silver platform. The only way they can possibly carry the State at all is by a combination with the Populists, who are solid for silver. It would not be surprising to see all the free silver forces in Alabama united at an early day, and Morgan, Pugh, Johnston and Kolb standing shoulder to shoulder in the struggle of the people against plutocracy.

The first and most important step in that struggle, is to restore silver to the position it formerly occupied as one of the standard money metals of the country and of the world.

No Decline of Wheat in Silver Countries.

Mr. Harvey: A farmer in India or Mexico takes his wheat to the world's market at London, and sells it today for about $1.25 a bushel in silver, or for half that amount in gold, and with it buys the silver and takes the silver home with him—$1.25 per bushel—and pays with it $1.25 worth of debt. Now, before this change in our monetary system began, that $1.25 was about what the price of our wheat was. Hence the farmer in India and Mexico is still getting the price we once got in the honest currency of the country—silver. There is a stable currency for you. A debt contracted in 1872 could be paid now in those countries with the same number of bushels of wheat that it could then. We take our wheat to London and sell it for sixty-five cents, say, and bring it back here, and we can't, by any exchange of silver or otherwise, pay more than sixty-five cents of debt with it. (Applause.) I am going to settle this whole price question directly so that you can decide it right in your rooms at home. It has been so arranged by one of the greatest societies to promote civilization in the world, and I am going to place it directly in your hands. They have figured out what we are trying to do here and what Mr. Horr is making fruitless efforts to try to do. —From the Great Debate.

How to Detect a Criminal.

Mr. Harvey: Mr. Horr says that I have no proof that the scheme was concocted in London to demonetize silver in the United States. When I was a boy I went into a courthouse one day to hear a criminal trial, and I hear a lawyer say, "When a crime is committed and you want to detect the criminal, look for the man that is benefited by the crime." (Applause.) Reasoning by induction will more invariably locate the criminal than any uncertain human testimony. Silver was demonetized in England, and in England only, prior to the day it was demonetized in this country. That was where the movement started,—that is another evidence. London bankers initiated the Paris conference of 1867, at which Mr. John Sherman was present, therefore, I have the right to say the conspiracy originated in London.—The Great Debate.

A man who covers himself with costly apparel and neglects his mind is like one who illuminates the outside of his house and sits within in the dark.

Stigmatize originally meant simply to brand, and in the days of Shakespeare the farmer was said to stigmatize his sheep.

Woman's Work

Is never done, and it is especially wearing and wearisome to those whose blood is impure and unfit properly to tone, sustain, and renew the wasting of nerve, muscle and tissue. It is more because of this condition of the blood that women are run down,

Tired, Weak, Nervous,

Than because of the work itself. Every physician says so, and that the only remedy is in building up by taking a good nerve tonic, blood purifier and vitalizer like Hood's Sarsaparilla. For the troubles Peculiar to Women at change of season, climate or life, or resulting from hard work, nervousness, and impure blood, thousands have found relief and cure in

LITERARY NOTES.

Scribner's for February might be called a mid-winter out door number, as it contains an unusual number of articles of life and adventure in the open air. First among these is the leading article of the number on the Colorado Health Plateau, by Lewis Morris Iddings, which is a delightful social study by a man who has travelled in many regions of the world, and who knows the region around Colorado Springs thoroughly, having spent a number of winters there. He describes picturesquely and with a great deal of invaluable information the life that is led there by those whose health makes it necessary for them to reside in that climate. Of a very different description is the brief account of Hunting the Musk-Ox with the Dog Ribs, by Frank Russell, a skillful naturalist, who made a remarkable journey with only Indian companions into the barren lands of Northwest Canada. This is one of the most modest and yet exciting narratives of hunting adventure that has appeared for a long time. The illustrations are exact representations of the scenery and the expedition made from photographs. Still another article of adventure of a unique kind is the graphic account of the Ascent of Mt. Ararat, in Armenia, by H. F. B. Lynch.

The second magazine number of The Outlook surpasses the first in pictorial qualities and timely interest. Clara Barton and the Red Cross has a direct bearing upon the relief of the sufferers in Armenia. It gives a charming view of Miss Barton's personality, and of the way in which she took up and carried on the great Red Cross work. The article is written by Miss Myrtis Willmont Barton, (a niece of Miss Clara Barton) and is fully illustrated. The Higher Life of New York City: Dr. Albert Shaw of the Review of Reviews gives a comprehensive view of the elements which are tending to make New York a better and more attractive city. Thirty-five illustrations help to bring out the salient points of the subject. Mr. Hamilton W. Mabie presents a fair estimate of the literary standing of Alfred Austin, England's new Poet Laureate, together with a readable account of his life and work. A recent portrait, and pictures of beautiful scenes in and about Mr. Austin's fine home in Kent, accompany the article. Ian Maclaren's serial novel, "Kate Carnegie," is continued. These are only a few of the many literary and illustrated features that make up a number nearly double the size of the regular weekly issue.

THE ARENA FOR FEBRUARY.

The February Arena is probably the most attractive issue of this great reformative and progressive review that has yet appeared. In its 176 pages are found notable papers by Forbes Winslow, D. C. L., of the Royal College of Physicians of London, on Madness as Portrayed by Shakespeare. The Land of the Noonday Sun, by Justice Walter Clark, LL. D., of the Supreme Bench of North Carolina (profusely illustrated). Justice Clark has visited Mexico under the auspices of The Arena to study our sister republic, this issue contains the opening paper of a series which will be magnificently illustrated, and which we predict will prove exceedingly interesting to all persons interested in travels and history, as well as social and economic problems. The Bond and the Dollar, by John Clark Ridpath, LL. D.; the second paper of a most notable series by America's most popular living historian. Bryant the Poet and Politician, by Frank B. Sanborn. Personal Reminiscences of Whittier, by his friend, the Rev. Christopher Coffin Hussey (with full-page half-tone illustration of the old Whittier homestead and portrait of Mr. Hussey).

THE CURATIVE VALUE OF SLEEP.

Every sleeping apartment should be so arranged that a current of fresh air will enter and keep the air in motion and pure all night; without this precaution the carbonic acid gas exhaled from the lungs will, in the stagnant air, hug the bed from its own weight, and spread over the sleeper a blanket of impurity, and the rebreathed air will, before morning, be foul beyond belief. The requisites for that beauty of tint and complexion which health gives are not many, and are in the reach of all who care to take a little pains. Give yourself plenty of sound, restful sleep, from seven to nine hours, according to your avocations and the tax upon your body and brain. If sleep, on a good bed in a well-ventilated room, does not come readily, try a cup of hot milk or hot water, the last thing before getting into bed, and acquire a habit of relaxing all the muscles when you lie down, and banish thought. Don't take sedatives and narcotics to banish worry, but have sufficient faith in the temporariness of all worries to realise that dwelling upon them does much harm and no good.—From Daily Hygiene in Demorest's Magazine for February.

McClure's Magazine for February will contain eight important portraits of Lincoln, and will present material never before published. During this period Lincoln suffered financial wreck as a country merchant; made his first acquaintance, in a very romantic way, with Shakespeare and Blackstone; mastered surveying in six weeks, and became deputy county surveyor; was elected to the General Assembly, and began his acquaintance with Douglas; and fell in love with a sweet and beautiful young girl, Ann Rutledge, and suffered the half-crazing affliction of her death on the eve of their marriage. In illustration of the paper there will be, including the eight portraits of Lincoln, twenty-eight pictures—many of them, also, never before published.

Ex-President Benjamin Harrison will discuss "The Presidential Office" very comprehensively in his "This Country of Ours" series in the forthcoming February Ladies' Home Journal. He will detail the provisions and methods of electing a Chief Magistrate, and will have much to say bearing upon the eligibility of a president for re-election; will give his views as to the length of the Presidential term, and express rather decided opinions relative to the annoyance to which Presidents are subjected from office-seekers. The article is practical, based upon experience and observation, and is very timely. Gen. Harrison believes that the fears (expressed by the framers of our Constitution) that the power of the office is such as to enable an ambitious incumbent to secure an indefinite succession of terms have never been realized.

A Communication.

On the 22d inst., Willis G. Smith, of Lawton, was fined $14 for selling lottery tickets. He put up a cow and sold chances on her. The judge remarked that his case could not be considered as a precedent as the law in such cases was punishable with a $200 fine or a year's imprisonment in the county jail. The Detroit Journal in commenting upon the case said that the same thing occurred in every church fair. This is not true. Of late, such things as raffles in church fairs seldom happen. Even church fairs have been arrested for violating the laws in such cases. Now for Tecumseh, you seem to have a more liberal minded class of people, for only a few days since, one man sold chances and raffled off three guns in less than a week's time, realizing nearly $25 on one old fusee hardly worth carrying home. Just why he escaped arrest is not known unless it was because he bought three beers for every ticket sold; i. e. one for himself, one for his pal, and one for the purchaser of a ticket and three beers seventy times would be about $10.50. Had this man at Lawton given or bought a glass of milk for every purchaser of a ticket on his cow he might have escaped on account of his liberality as well as extreme poverty. "One thing is certain," said one of our citizens, that man cannot plead poverty when he can afford to spend so much money for beer and whiskey." VERITAS.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c and $1 per bottle at Baker & Hall's drug store. 1

A Solemn Warning.

What is the man doing?

He is climbing to the electric lamp to light his pipe.

Will he light it?

No, but we will go to his funeral tomorrow.

Is he a poor man?

No, but he never subscribed to a newspaper and does not know that the war is over.—Atlanta Constitution.

The Wise Book Lender.

It is a wise lender of books who writes her name on the inner margin of the forty-seventh page as well as on the fly leaf. She has in this way been enabled to identify her own books in friends' houses when the fly leaves have mysteriously disappeared.

Pitt at Play.

Mr. Pitt liked practical fun and used to riot in it with Lady Hester, Charles and James Stanhope and myself. Once we were resolved to blacken his face with burned cork, which he most strenuously resisted. At the beginning of the fray a servant announced that Lords Castlereagh and Liverpool desired to see him on business. "Let them wait in the other room," was the answer, and the great minister instantly turned to the battle, catching up a cushion and belaboring us with it in glorious fun. We were, however, too many and strong for him, and after ten minutes' fight got him down and were daubing his face when he said: "Stop! This will do. I could easily beat you all, but we must not keep those grandees waiting any longer."

His defeat was, however, palpable, and we were obliged to get a towel and basin of water and wash him clean before he could receive the grandees.

Being thus put in order, the basin was hidden, and the two lords were ushered in. Then a new phase of Mr. Pitt's manner appeared. Lord Liverpool's aspect is well known—melancholy, bending, nervous. Lord Castlereagh was a model of quiet grace and strength. What was my surprise to see them both bending like spaniels on approaching the man we had just been maltreating with such successful insolence of fun! But Mr. Pitt's instant change of manner and look entirely fixed my attention. His tall, ungainly, bony figure seemed to grow to the ceiling; his head was thrown back, his eyes as if reading the heavens and totally regardless of the bending figures near him.—"Memoirs of Lady Hester Stanhope."

Ore Deposits.

Ingenious theories have from time to time been advanced by scientists relating to ore deposits—the cause, time, manner, etc.—and among the most recent and able of these Professor Le Conte may well be ranked. His conclusion is that such deposits, using the term in its widest sense, may take place from many kinds of waters, but especially from alkaline solutions, these being the natural solvents of metallic sulphides, and the latter are usually the original form of such deposits. They may take place from waters at any temperature and pressure, but mainly from those at high temperature and under heavy pressure, because, on account of their great solvent power, such waters are heavily freighted with metals, and the depositing waters may be moving in any direction—that is, may be up coming, horizontally moving, or even sometimes down going, but mainly up coming, because, by losing heat and pressure at every step, such waters are sure to deposit abundantly. Furthermore, Professor Le Conte says that deposits may take place in any kind of waterways, such as open fissures, incipient fissures, joints, cracks and even in porous sandstone, but especially in large open fissures, the latter being the main highways of ascending waters from the greatest depths. Deposits may also be found in many regions and in many kinds of rocks, but mainly in mountain regions and igneous rocks.

Took the Wrong Antidote.

The prisoner told the court he was not in the habit of getting drunk and declared on this occasion he was excusable.

"Your honor," said the prisoner, "I got home late last night, and before starting to bed I went to my medicine cabinet to get a dose of cough sirup. I thought I knew just where the bottle stood, and that I could get it in the dark. I made a mistake and drank a big swig of some strange mixture. I thought I was poisoned, and rushing down to the drug store with the bottle still in my hand I asked the clerk for an antidote. He smelled what was left in the bottle, and then says he: 'My friend, all the antidote you need is to swallow a comb and brush. That stuff is hair vigor.'

"Judge, I just felt so ashamed of myself that I started drinking."

He was discharged.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Lincoln Letter.

George Kluetsch, editor of the Lincoln (Neb.) Freie Presse, has in his possession in the handwriting of Abraham Lincoln, written in 1859, an interesting letter. It was written to T. J. Pickett, at one time editor of the Republican paper in Rock Island, Ills., who has given it to Mr. Kluetsch. It reads as follows:

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 16, 1859.

T. J. Pickett, Esq.:

MY DEAR SIR—Yours of the 13th is just received. My engagements are such that I cannot, at any very early day, visit Rock Island to deliver a lecture or for any other object. As to the other matter you kindly mention, I must, in candor, say I do not consider myself fit for the presidency. I certainly am flattered and gratified that some partial friends think of me in that connection, but I really think it best for our cause that no concerted effort such as you suggest should be made. Let this be considered confidential. Yours very truly,

A. LINCOLN.

Old English Journalism.

The interesting reminiscences of G. J. Holyoke, recently issued, give some facts showing that English journals were not always as free from scurrility as they are now. The London Times, for instance, which then had not adopted the rule of excluding "poetry," once published some verses on O'Connell beginning—"Slime condensed of Irish bog, liar, traitor, demagogue." The same journal also spoke of its neighbor, The Morning Chronicle, as "that squirt of filthy water," and The Morning Chronicle referred to The Morning Post as that "slop pail of corruption."

A Sincere Wish.

She—I have an instinctive feeling that I can trust you.

He (passionately)—Ah, my darling, would that some others felt that way!—London Tit-Bits.

First Morals, Then Literature.

Moral teaching was Miss Edgeworth's first object; literature or the interest of her tale came only second. To this cardinal defect she is indebted for most of her faults as a novelist. Her plots are improbable, and her characters become dummies. If she does not avow her didactic purpose so clearly as Hannah More or Mrs. Sherwood, she is not satisfied, like Miss Austen, to leave her characters convey their own lesson. She seems more intent upon erecting moral sign posts for the convenience of future travelers than of accomplishing her own journey with rapidity and success. Nor is her teaching of an elevated kind. Its pole star is enlightened selfishness.

As her pattern children are always rewarded, so her heroes and heroines are sure to prosper, to discover themselves the inheritors of great fortunes and to marry into the peerage. Small space is allowed in her system for imagination, passion or religious enthusiasm. The internal struggle which their strength creates would only have disturbed her simple balance between right and wrong. Previous novelists had based morality on feeling. She ascribes it to the understanding. She allows no amiable weaknesses, no sudden impulses, no uncontrolable emotions. Even Cupid, king of men, is elbowed from his throne and in exchange for his kingdom is offered a sinecure as the keeper of nonconformist consciences. A large tract of life is, in fact, to Miss Edgeworth a terra incognita of which she knows nothing because she feels nothing.—Quarterly Review.

Pictorial Fiction of Chinamen.

Under the heading, "Pictorial Lies," the Shangtung correspondent of the North China Daily News says: "Not long since I found in a Chinese inn a set of highly colored pictures, such as the natives are wont to use as wall decorations, setting forth the events of the late war with Japan. The superscriptions narrated in very bad Chinese how that the petty king of Japan had rebelled against the constituted authority of the Dragon throne, and in the pride of his heart had constructed a navy and troops to harass his imperial majesty withal. But at Ping Yang the rebellious king, even after hiring the Koreans to fight for him, was completely routed without the loss of a single Chinese banner. The terrible havoc at Ping Yang is depicted with much display of gore among the Japanese ranks. Next scene, great victory of the Chinese troops in Manchuria. General Sung is represented as issuing forth from a city gate and chasing the panic stricken enemy pell mell over a stone bridge. Then comes the storming of a fortress on the sea coast. A dozen impossible warships are belching forth fire and shell. The flags at the mastheads are inscribed with the common Chinese names of Japan, England, France, Germany and the United States. Notwithstanding this unequal contest of all the world against China, the soldiery of the fortress are watching the onset with the utmost complacency, not even deigning to return the fire."—London News.

The Light of the Diamond.

An expert in gems has lately called attention to a property in the diamond which has not hitherto been fully appreciated. In a paper by Robert Boyle, published in the transactions of the Royal society, mention is made of a diamond that became phosphorescent simply by the heat of the hand, absorbed light by being held near a candle and emitted light on being briskly rubbed.

The observations by Mr. Kunz, the gem expert referred to, confirm Boyle's statement that diamonds become phosphorescent in the dark after exposure to the sunlight or electric light, but they also show that all diamonds emit light by being rubbed on wood, cloth or metal.

This property is an important one, as it will enable the nonexpert to distinguish between the true diamond and other hard stones as well as paste, none of which exhibits this phenomenon. This property is evidently not electric, as is clearly shown by its being visible when the gem is rubbed on metal.

Blackie's Ways.

It is said that the late Professor Blackie had a quaint, ceremonious little way of expressing his reverence for the Wizard of the North. Whenever, through his long life, he passed Walter Scott's house in Edinburgh, he would stand still, and, leaning on his stick, remain for a moment in silent meditation. Strangers were often puzzled when they saw the venerable figure of Professor Blackie, standing motionless in Castle street, his plaid blown by the wind, and his face wearing a look of dreamy abstraction. Another out of door note on Blackie is this amusing one: Calling on a lady, he said abruptly: "When I walk along Princes' street, I go with a kingly air, my head erect, my chest expanded, my hair flowing, my plaid flying, my stick swinging. Do you know what makes me do that? Well, I'll tell you—just conceit!"

Past, Present and Future.

The same object seen from three different points of view—the past, the present and the future—often exhibits three different faces to us, like those signboards over shop doors which represent the face of a lion as we approach, of a man when we are in front and of an ass when we have passed.—Longfellow.

Much attention is being paid at present to the long neglected letter "u" of our alphabet. Teachers in vocal culture give their pupils the sentence, "Did you get your Century I sent you?" to enunciate with an entire elimination of "j" and "ch" sounds.

Brave conquerors! for so you are, that war against your own affections and the huge army of the world's desires.—Shakespeare.

TEMPLE, McCLURE & CO.

CRUSHING THE TRUTH.

Or Trying to Do So, Is the Game of the Goldbugs Now.

Among the many other absurdities now being put forward by the gold people is the utterly preposterous one that Colorado has weakened on the silver issue. It is more than absurd, it is false. It is within the limits of extreme moderation to say that of the voters of that State, 24 out of every 25 are unreservedly in favor of restoring silver to the right of coinage and full legal tender which it enjoyed up to the year 1873.

The people of that State, however, do not intend to spend their whole lives in weeping and wailing over the wrongs they have suffered in the crippling of their silver mining industry. They are a bold, energetic people, and while relaxing not a whit of their just demands, they are bringing their very best intelligence to bear for the development of that splendid state on every possible line. The people of Colorado are not, and never have been, unduly selfish in dealing with this question. They began the agitation mainly as silver producers, but as they proceeded with their studies, they soon discovered that the great agricultural States of the Mississippi Valley were being injured vastly more than the silver mining States. The blow that struck down silver as money, lowered the value of every product of the American farm, and generally of the factory also.

In the last issue of this paper it was shown by a report of Secretary Morton, that upon the export of three agricultural products, cotton, bacon and lard, for the year 1894-5, the fall in prices from those of the previous year alone, entailed a loss of $82,000,000.

Even this enormous sum is no more than a drop in the bucket compared with the vast aggregate of loss sustained by American agriculture since silver was demonetized and prices began to adjust themselves to the gold standard.

Let the goldites borrow no trouble about Colorado. She, as well as the other silver mining States and territories, is infinitely better off than the best agricultural States in the Union at the present time. Yes, better even, all things considered, than the manufacturing States of the East. There are ten times as many beggars on the streets of Chicago as there are in all the silver mining States and territories put together.

If the people of the great East would arouse from their lethargy and study this question of money, just a little, they would know what is the matter, and the problem would be speedily solved.—H. F. Bartine.

AT HIGH WATER MARK.

The Great Silver Movement at the Height of Its Activity.

The silver stream is at high water mark still in Louisiana as elsewhere. The New Orleans Times-Democrat says:

"That the farmers of Louisiana have not changed their views because worms and bad weather have cut down the crop, and consequently advanced prices, the recent Democratic primary in Madison parish, the first in the State, proves. The primary was for the purpose of nominating candidates for local offices, but at the same time a vote was taken on the question of instructing our Senators and representatives in Congress to vote in favor of the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. This stood more than 4 to 1—exactly 4 1-3 to 1—in favor of free silver. It leaves no doubt how Madison stands on the silver question, and Madison is a fair test. It is not as strongly silver as the hill parishes of North Louisiana. Moreover, it is to be remembered that this was a Democratic primary and the Populists were left out; they are animously for free coinage. It would indicate that the white voters of Madison stand 8 or 10 to 1 in favor of free ever, with the interior parishes more enthusiastically for the metal.

"Madison is distinctively a parish, and deeply interested in price. If the recent advance had effect anywhere of weakening the ver cause, and persuading the that the demonetization of silver not responsible for the low prices farm products, we might expect operate in Madison; and the retu the Democratic primary show has not had the slightest infl there. In spite of 8½ cent cotto Democratic voters of Madison a satisfied as ever that the perma prosperity of the country demands free coinage of silver at 16 to 1."—mingham Herald.

The most celebrated hotel and bathing place in the islands is Sans Souci, which is near the famous Diamond Head. Sans Souci has had for its guests some of the most famous literary men of the age. Mark Twain spent a good deal of his time while on the islands at this place. Jules Verne and Robert Louis Stevenson made it their home. The latter, in writing of this cool retreat, said:

"If any one desires such old-fashioned things as lovely scenery, quiet, pure air, clear sea water, good food, and heavenly sunsets hung out before his eyes every evening over the Pacific and the distant hills of Waianae, I recommend him cordially to the Sans Souci."

I found several gentlemen at Sans Souci who had very vivid recollections of Stevenson. He is described by all as a small man weighing, perhaps, less than one hundred pounds, and an inveterate cigarette smoker. It is barely possible that nicotine poison hastened the end of this strange, mysterious, gifted man.

"He smoked from morning until night," said the manager of the hotel. "I am certain he would consume sixty cigarettes a day. He was very pleasant, unless irritated, and then he was like a madman. Those who disturbed him while writing or meditating were sure to hear from him."

Mr. Timmons, city editor of The Hawaiian Star, said:

"I met Mr. Stevenson while he was here, and was very strangely impressed by him from the first. I learned that he was at Sans Souci, and went to call upon him. Reaching the quiet place, I crossed the lanna and entered the house proper. No one was in sight but a small, ordinary-looking man, who sat at a table writing.

"'Where is the landlord?' I asked.

"'He is out,' answered the small man, and he went on with his writing.

"'Well, perhaps you can answer my question; I came to see Mr. Stevenson.'

"'I am Mr. Stevenson.'

"This was my introduction to this remarkable man."

Then Mr. Timmons told me how Mr. Stevenson came to write his famous novel, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

"The novel was written on this island and in this town. The Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde live in Honolulu, and you will perhaps meet him before you go. That novel was the off-spring of a bitter religious war between Reverend Father Dannion and Rev. Dr. Hyde, D.D., who has charge of the mission school in this city for the training of preachers. The controversy between the priest and Dr. Hyde waxed warm, and Mr. Stevenson espoused the cause of the Catholic priest. He threw his whole soul into the conflict, and for a while it seemed as if we were likely to have a religious war. Dr. Hyde, able, sharp, and cutting, answered him from the pulpit and through the press until the contest became personally bitter.

"Mr. Stevenson had up to the time of this controversy, it seems, entertained a high regard for Dr. Hyde, but as the wordy war grew bitter, he fancied he discovered in him a dual nature. At times he thought the doctor the very perfection of a gentleman, a scholar, and a Christian; at others he seemed a very demon. This idea seemed to grow with his morbid fancy, and he conceived from it his wonderful novel."

I was anxious to meet Dr. Hyde, the man who so strangely inspired the wonderful novel, and when I did meet him was impressed that he was more Jekyll than Hyde. He is a tall, finely-formed, highly cultured gentleman, with a fine scholarly appearance. He is secretary of the Social Science Club, a meeting of which I had the pleasure of attending, and at which place I met him.

This club, by the way, is composed of the most scholarly men on the Islands President Dole is a member, and attends the meetings regularly. In addition to myself there were other American guests present, the most prominent of whom were United States Minister Willis, and the captain of the warship Bennington. At this meeting Dr. Rodgers, Secretary of the Labor Bureau, read an able paper on the labor problem, which was thoroughly discussed and commented upon. One cannot but realize the force of Americanism in the club. Chief Justice Judd, of the Supreme Court, and Professor Alexander, the historian, are members of the club and were born on the Islands, yet they with the others, argued the question from an American standpoint.

The meeting was at the residence of Dr. Hyde, and, although I studied him closely all the evening, I discovered none of the "incarnate fiend," which Stevenson represents Mr. Hyde to be in his novel.

It was while living at Sans Souci that Robert Louis Stevenson conceived and wrought out his wonderful book, and I decided to visit the famous resort. To reach Sans Souci I had only to take the Waikiki street car, go to the end of the line, and walk the rest of the way. The ride is a pleasant one, and well worth the time and ten cents it costs to make it. It was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when I boarded the car driven by a native and went rolling along the street past the government grounds and buildings, past pretty houses half hidden by graceful swaying palms, ferns, and the rich tropical foliage, past banana plantations and groves of tall cocoanuts, for long stretches with the sea beach on one side and a delightful grove on the other.

The manager of the famous resort showed me the room which had been occupied by Jules Verne and Robert Louis Stevenson, also the tables at which they wrote, and narrated some anecdotes about them. Their rooms fronted on the beach. After a sea-bath I returned to the cool lanna, and was joined by Mr. Thomas E. Evans, a gentleman who is stopping at the Sans Souci. Mr. Evans, who is a Royalist of the most pronounced type, is a Canadian by birth. He was prominent in pushing the lottery scheme to which the missionaries objected so strongly.

The Royalists are still very bitter against the Republic. They always refer to it contemptuously as the Provisional Government, and the adherents of it are styled P. G.'s. But they all have great respect for President Dole. I have met more than one who says the country is safe in his hands. The natives all respect him, but they want him to be declared King. It is not the man they object to, so much as the Republican form of government.

All of the more intelligent Royalists, however, admit that the Republic has come to stay, and even the Queen has lost all hope of being restored to the throne, unless Great Brittain or some European power espouses her cause; which even she admits is not probable.

I have been informed that Mr. Chas. Wilson, the agent and trusted friend of the ex-Queen, has declared that he is willing to shoulder his musket to support the Republic. He was the ex-Queen's bravest friend in her hour of trouble. He advised her against the promulgation of the constitution which brought about her overthrow, but when he found she was determined, he declared he would stand or fall with her. When the uprising came, he was the only one of her followers willing to fight the revolutionists. The average Kanaka doesn't care a fig about any sort of government. His mind is taken up with luaus, hulas, and fishing. To him life presents no serious problems. He devotes more energy to a fishing party than to political matters.

The sun was setting when I left Sans Souci, and it was nearly dark by the time I reached the street car line. No car was in sight, and I was told that it would be fifteen minutes before another would come along. I walked about two hundred paces further down the track to where a Chinaman has erected and fitted up a small shop and restaurant, and took a seat on the bench under his awning. The shop-keeper, a man well long in years, whose queue is turning grey, came out to keeep me company. On learning I was from New York, he tried to scrape up an acquaintance. He once conducted a laundry in that city, and thought the Brooklyn bridge the most magnificent structure in the world. He was more sociable than most Chinamen, and talked very freely of the customs and habits of his countrymen. He said that they had only worn queues for the last three hundred years. The queue was not a religious badge, but a fad of their Emperor. He had been to China nine times since his first arrival. Like most Chinamen, he had a wife and children in China and one in this country, this, he explained, as a matter of economy. It was much easier to support a family in each country than to be constantly transporting a family from one land to the other. The average Chinaman remains in this country from three to seven years and then goes back to China, to spend an equal length of time there, and again return.

The Stimpson Computing Scales.

The Stimpson Computing Scale Company have recently perfected a butchers' or meat scale which is pronounced by retailers and mechanical experts the most perfect scale ever put on the market. This scale combines the computing features with a perfection of mechanical construction which is entirely a new departure in the building of scales to be used in the grocery and meat business.

This is also true of the grocers' computing scale which the company is now putting on the market. In the first place, their scales have the simplest and most accurate computing attachment in the world; in the second place they certainly have no superiors in the mechanism and workmanship of the scale itself.

The following description of the two scales is taken from the columns of The Iron Age of Jan. 30. The Iron Age is the authority of this country on subjects of this kind, and this extended notice, coming as it does unsolicited from this source, is a most flattering recognition of the real merits of the Stimpson scales and speaks volumes for the success of this industry:

"Stimpson Computing Scale Company, Tecumseh, Mich., for whom W. H. Jacobus, 90 Chambers street, New York, is agent, are offering computing scales, as herewith illustrated. The scales are finished in wine color baked enamel, with all bearings of tool steel, pivoted, and with a leverage of 20 to 1. The grocers' scale, Fig. 1, has a brass scoop and is furnished with either marble or iron top, as desired. The tare beam and frame of the upper beam are nickel plated. The poise and computing table of the upper beam are of aluminum. A weight is provided which exactly balances the scoop when using it. The lower beam is for tare, while the weighing is done with the poise on the wide beam above. This beam is pivoted at the ends so as to turn over and show the other side. The price per pound is given in the first column to the left on the poise, the prices on the side shown being from 3 to 17 cents and on the other side from 18 to 40 cents. Anything up to 10 pounds can be weighed on the upper beam, while weights are provided for weighing larger quantities. The value of any quantity up to ten pounds at any price ranging from 3 to 40 cents per pound is instantly shown on the computing table. Thus in the illustration the poise is set at 5 pounds, the value of which at 10 cents per pound is shown on the table to be 50 cents. The value is always shown on the table between the pointers nearest the price per pound. Four weights—10, 20, 30 and 40 pounds—are provided. Though not shown in the illustration, over the second column of figures on the poise is the number 10, over the third column is the number 20, over the fourth column the number 30 and over the fifth column the number 40, these numbers corresponding to the weights. If the article weighed 15 pounds—5 pounds being shown on the beam and 10 pounds by the weight—the weight value at 10 cents per pound would be shown in the second column of figures, opposite the price per pound, which would be $1. This added to the value of the 5 pounds shown on the beam, 50 cents, instantly gives the value of the 15 pounds at 10 cents per pound, or $1.50. By the use of the tare beam 180 pounds can be weighed on the scale. The points of excellence claimed by the makers for the scale are as follows: That both weight and value are given by the movement of one poise; that the correct weight is shown to both the buyer and seller; that in selling all articles such as butter, cheese, &c., which cannot be cut to exact weight asked for by the customer, the correct weight and value of the article is given, and that the poise can be set at a given weight and will at once indicate the correct value, as both weight and value are given by the movement of one poise. The butchers' scale, Fig. 2, embraces all the valuable features of the grocers' scale described."

Adrian Times: Bruin, the star attraction at the Page fence company's zoo, crawled out of his coop yesterday, after hibernating for nine weeks, and then loped back again, as he saw his shadow in a chance gleam of sunshine.

The Blissfield Advance came to us last week enlarged to a six column quarto. Other improvements in the make-up and contents of the paper are noticable and its 23d year seems prosperous and propitious.

Adrian Times: Ernest Chase, of Raisin, aged 21, whose illness has before been mentioned, died at 5 o'clock Sunday morning of pneumonia, after being sick for a week. Deceased was a son of Levi W. Chase, and for the last two months has been employed at Pennock's store. The funeral will be held from the house at 10:30 tomorrow.

The Ann Arbor Courier presents the tale of a fish to its readers, and would have them believe an 18-pound pickerel recently caught through the ice contained the gold watch lost long before by the party who caught the fish. The watch, it says, was running, and supposes that, being a stem winder, the fish kept it wound up in the process of masticating its food, the watch being in its throat. With due respect for the Courier, we cannot but regard this statement as a deviation from truth. In short we look upon the story of the watch in this "case" as a lie on its "face."—Monroe Democrat.

The following appears in the Morenci items of the Adrian Times: "A tidal wave of religion is just now sweeping over the town. Every afternoon at 1 o'clock, the 'Angelus bell' is rung from the Methodist church, and every Christian is expected to cease his labors and offer up a silent prayer. Last night all business houses closed at 7:30. Even the saloon-keepers locked their doors, blew out their lights, and with their bartenders attended church." People in this part of the county have long looked for this terrible upheaval from the depths of Morenci's wickedness. From one extreme to the other; but it is sincerely hoped that some lasting good will result in this case.

The editor of the Addison Courier manages a Sunday school, does job printing, writes for his newspaper, is a member of the council, sells watches and clocks to remind subscribers of the value of time, preaches Sundays to admonish them of eternity, and has a little space left between eternity and time to drop into poetry, which he does in a news item as follows:

"John Harrison, of Waldron, wanted fun so stole a gun and away he run. In jail he lays for ninety days to mend his ways."

If there be those who would quarrel with the grammar of this poem, let them remember that while it is well to be right it is not well to be excessively right, when to be so would knock a rhyme's brains out. 'Taint every one can be a poet, no more'n a sheep can be a goat.—Monroe Democrat.

Young ladies of the Church of the Sacred Heart, says the Adrian Times, gave a black face minstrel show at the Hudson opera house, Tuesday night. The place was packed and the play decidedly clever. Fictitious names appeared on the programme, making it next to impossible to identify the performers. There were six end women, wearing collar, shirt front, necktie and red swallowtail coats with black shirts. Sixteen others were similar costumes except that the shirts were white and the coats black. The interlocutor, or "middle woman," was dressed in the semi-military costume of "Trilby," and was addressed by that name. The jokes were largely of a local nature, and were very good. Here is a sample: "Why is Mr. So-and-So like an oyster? Because he's in Bryan most of the time."

PENTECOST POINTERS.

Judging from the amount of ice being taken from Sand Lake, it looks as if the farmers about here meant to keep cool next summer, in spite of war rumors, etc.

The Herald's Pentecost correspondent while visiting friends in Jackson Co. recently, received an invitation to inspect the Richard's Collection of Curiosities, a collection well worthy a long journey to see. The gentleman who founded this museum of curios died last August, but a sister, Mrs. McDonald, an accomplished and entertaining lady, is in charge of this priceless collection and is herself an enthusiastic seeker for things rare, beautiful and curious. The walls were adorned with many trophies, among them the skin of a gigantic Florida rattlesake and a small sized alligator. There were portions of a mastodon, sword fish, saw fish, shark, etc. A rarely beautiful collection of specimens in conchology also, many of them with their lovely tints and delicate markings might have served for the palace of some fairy of the ocean depths. Here a cabinet held sea urchins, star fish, sea fans, wonderful forms of coral, many and strange varieties of sponges, sea weeds, etc. There one held rare old books in many tongues and strange and most bewildering of all that seemed almost to link one with the days of Christ were the trays of ancient coins, from the tiny "mite" made famous by the widow of the scriptures, to some almost as large as tea saucers. One rare old coin bearing date some three hundred years before Christ, was of gold and copper, weighed eleven ounces and was about nine inches in circumference. Think of a shopping excursion with a pocket full of such "rocks." Four sisters were met together in the fine old family mansion, and the hours of our visit there flew by with surprising quickness while listening to their sprightly and entertaining conversation and in viewing the wonders of art and nature gathered from both hemispheres and of which this article can give but an imperfect description. One must see in order to appreciate them.

Seems as if consumption always picks out the brightest and best. Fully one-sixth of all the deaths that occur in the world are caused by consumption. Many things were once considered impossible. It would be strange if medical science did not make some progress. The telegraph and telephone, the phonograph, the electric light—all were once impossible, and once it was impossible to cure consumption. That was before the time of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Taken according to directions, this standard remedy will cure 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption. Consumption is caused and fostered by impurity in the blood. It is cured by purity and richness in the blood—surely, certainly cured by the Medical Discovery. It builds up solid healthy flesh and vigorous strength.

STOP IT NOW!

Stop It Quickly, Just the Same as Did Mr. Charles H. Hoffman, of 132 Ten Eyck Street, Jackson.

If you have a pain in your back, stop it! A lame back, stop it! An aching back, stop it! Do you want to know how? Let us tell you! In the first place, never try to rid yourself of pain without knowing the cause. If pain or ache exist there is reason for it. Find out this reason and get after it. Strike cause a stiff blow with the right weapon, and its allies, pain and ache, will flee like chaff before the wind. To get right down to it, backache is indicative of kidney disorders, a spy placed there by nature; listen to his warnings and take up the weapon, strike before disease is reinforced with allies that can not be routed by hand of man, such as Bright's disease. Let us introduce to you this weapon! Let us prove its superiority to all others! Here is a blow it struck:

Mr. Charles H. Hoffman is a fireman on the M. C. R. R., and resides at 132 Ten Eyck Street, Jackson, Mich. He says: "I have suffered for a long time from a kidney and bladder disorder which has at times rendered me incapable of work. have been at the hospital for my complaint and discharged from there as cured, but the old complaint has invariably come back again. Some time ago I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I began taking them, with most gratifying results. Urinary complaints which bothered me greatly are very much improved, and the pain I suffered in my back has entirely left me, my general condition is much improved. I would not like to be without Doan's Kidney Pills, I think others should know what a valuable remedy it is."

Dear Sir:—Thank God there is a medicine that will cure catarrh. "Mr. Pretzinger, I used your sample box of catarrh medicine which you sent me. The first night I used it it helped me. May God bless you for your kindness. I used the little box you sent me and about half of a 50 cent jar. They keep it in Chambersburg. I have told a great many people about your medicine. Hon. 'Squire Britton, brother-in-law to me, is using it: he says it is helping him very much; he has catarrh very bad. Mrs. G. D. Ludwig, daughter of me, is using your medicine. I use it in the evening before retiring to bed and am feeling better now than I have for the last five years. My head is clear and I have more energy for work and business. Before I used your medicine I felt many a time that I did not care whether I was living or dead: I had no energy; I did not care for anything. I had catarrh over sixty-seven years; mother had catarrh and it turned into consumption; she died in her 64th year. I have a farm up at Strasburg, seven miles from Greenvillage. On nice days I drive up to the farm and work. Mr. Pretzinger I think it would pay you to have it put in all the Franklin county papers as I am a reliable, honest man, so the people say, middling well acquainted over the county.

Yours truly,
GEO. K. ZOLLINGER.

Absentminded.

The story is told of a famous mathematician that he was frequently guilty during his courtship of walking the greater part of a mile with the young lady of his choice without speaking.

One evening she took advantage of his absentmindedness to play him a trick. She slipped her hand from his arm and hurried home a nearer way. He continued to hold his arm in the same position, walked up the steps of her father's house, and rang the bell, when, to his astonishment, she herself opened the door. He stared in an incredulous manner and exclaimed, "Why, S——, how in the world did you get on that side of the door?"

Dancing Mice.

There have been found in Japan some mice that have been the subject of a good deal of zoological discussion. These creatures are white and black as a rule, but some have shadings of brown and pale yellow. When the baby mouse first begins to walk, it exhibits the tendency that characterizes this peculiar breed. After moving a short distance it begins to turn round and round, increasing in rapidity until it spins almost like a top. This waltzing, for it is nothing else, amounts to a mad dissipation, being kept up for some minutes without stopping. There will then be a pause of a few seconds, when the dance begins again. These creatures waltz almost all night, sleeping in the daytime. Sometimes they dance in couples, whirling around and keeping the most perfect time. Three or four have been known to dance together, two forming an inner circle and the others dancing around the outside. The smallness of the circle they take may be imagined from the fact that they will spin for hours under an ordinary tumbler with but brief intervals of rest.—New York Ledger.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, then laxatives or other remedies are not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, then one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

WINTER IS HERE.

Winter is half over. People are continuing to catch colds, and not a house but hears the winter cough. People are trying to get something to cure these troubles, which are almost inevitable at this time of the year. It can safely be said that nine-tenths of the people in the United States have a cold some time during the winter. This is one remedy which will prevent colds and coughs and cure them with certainty when contracted. This remedy is Peruna. Taken with regularity during the winter months, it will entirely prevent coughs, colds, la grippe, consumption, bronchitis or pneumonia. It will also cure without failure catarrh and recent cases of consumption, and often in advanced stages.

Everybody should have the 64-page book on catarrh and winter diseases which is being sent free by The Peruna Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio. 1w

The Proper Time

When the most benefit is to be derived from a good medicine, is early in the year. This is the season when the tired body, weakened organs and nervous system yearn for a building-up medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Many wait for the open spring weather and, in fact, delay giving attention to their physical condition so long that a long siege of sickness is inevitable. To rid the system of the impurities accumulated during the winter season, to purify the blood and to invigorate the whole system, there is nothing equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. Don't put it off; but take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It will do you good. Read the testimonials pupilshed in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla, all from reliable, grateful people. They tell the story. 1w

Gooseberries and currents are easily grown and there is rarely an oversupply of them.

Although a very busy man, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has found time in which to write a great book of over a thousand pages entitled, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in plain English, or Medicine Simplified. Few books printed in the English language have reached so great a sale as has this popular work, over 680,000 copies having been sold at $1.50 each. The profits on this enormous sale having repaid its author for the great amount of labor and money expended on its production he has now decided to give away, absolutely free, 500,000 copies of this valuable book, the recipients only being required to mail to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., of which he is president, twenty-one (21) one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, and the book will be sent postpaid. It is a veritable medical library, complete in one volume. It contains 1008 large pages, and over 300 illustrations, some of them in colors. The Free Edition is precisely the same as that sold at $1.50 except only that the books are bound in strong manilla paper covers, instead of cloth. It is not often that our readers have an opportunity to obtain a valuable book on such generous terms, and we predict that few will miss availing themselves of this unusual and liberal offer to which we have called their attention. 1w

One of the most serious objections to giving the sheep the run of the orchard, especially at this time is their propensity to gnaw the bark of the trees.

HEART DISEASE, like many other ailments when they have taken hold of the system, never gets better of its own accord, but Constantly grows worse. There are thousands who know they have a defective heart, but will not admit the fact. They don't want their friends to worry, and Don't know what to take for it, as they have been told time and again that heart disease was incurable. Such was the case of Mr. Silas Farley of Dyesville, Ohio who writes June 19, 1894, as follows:

"I had heart disease for 25 years, my heart hurting me almost continually. The first 15 years I doctored all the time, trying several physicians and remedies, until my last doctor told me it was only a question of time as I could not be cured. I gradually grew worse, very weak, and completely discouraged, until I lived, propped half up in bed, because I couldn't lie down nor sit up. Thinking my time had come I told my family what I wanted done when I was gone. But on the first day of March on the recommendation of Mrs. Fannie Jones, of Anderson, Ind., I commenced taking Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart and wonderful to tell, in ten days I was working at light work and on March 19 commenced framing a barn, which is heavy work, and I hav'nt lost a day since. I am 56 years old, 6 ft. 4½ inches and weigh 250lbs. I believe I am fully cured, and I am now only anxious that everyone shall know of your wonderful remedies."

Dyesville, Ohio. SILAS FARLEY.

NUMBER ONE.

Everyone knows something about the great map publishing firm of Rand, McNally & Co. Their atlases and wall maps have gained a world-wide reputation. Their new state map of Michigan is the best one ever issued. It is 41 by 58 inches in size, full mounted with rollers, showing all organized townships, beautifully colored, and sells for $3.00. The former price was $3.00. This map can be furnished at the remarkably low price of $1.40, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included.

NUMBER TWO.

Have you seen Rand McNally & Co.'s large reversible map, with the world on one side and the United States on the reverse? This is the largest map of the United States ever printed on one piece of paper. The map of the world is on Mercator's projection and gives a brief history of every country with population of chief cities, areas, voyages of discoveries etc. This map is especially suited for school use and is just the thing for ready reference in these times of international disputes. This $5.00 map and the Herald for $2.00.

THE DETROIT TRIBUNE.

The Detroit Tribune has long been recognized as one of the greatest newspapers of the Republican party, not only in this state but throughout the west. Although the Tribune has long enjoyed this distinction, it is safe to say that within the last two years its management has greatly raised the standard of the publication as a political, literary, and general newspaper. The Tribune should be read in every household of Michigan. We have made a special arrangement with the management whereby we can furnish the weekly Tribune and HERALD one year for the normal figure of $1.30.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.

The Cosmopolitan is almost too well known to need particular mention. It is simply a marvel that a magazine of such merit can be furnished for the money. A new lithographing press has recently been added to their machinery which will make the paper more attractive than ever. For 1896, 1344 pages and 1000 illustrations for 85 cents if taken with the Herald.

MCLURE'S MAGAZINE.

Farmers' Social Club.

As we may chronicle a delightful evening spent within the circle of the F. S. C., this time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Well Rector. The committee on program departed from the usual routine of entertainment and arranged for our benefit a musical program. The diversion was a complete success and the efforts of our musical friends gave us irrefutable proof that we are not without talent in our club. To say that all did well would be but feeble praise, and to discriminate would be unfair; but to say that thanks are due to all is just, and it is hoped we may enjoy a similar treat again some time in the future.

The discussion was opened by Mr. J. F. N. Bowen, who favored a change in our district school system. He did not believe the unit system was generally understood, but thought if adopted it would prove beneficial.

Mr. Tenbrook, of Fairfield, was present and gave timely remarks. He believed the unit system would be the means of securing better teachers for the small scholars; believed it would be a decided improvement in many respects.

D. H. C. Bowen did not think the Michigan system a perfect one, and agreed with Mr. Tenbrook in regard to supplying the small pupils with the best instructors.

Others expressed views for and against the system and it will perhaps be the means of inducing many to investigate the unit method.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Philip Kehoe, Tuesday evening, February 25th.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Passed by the Vestry of St. Peter's Church on the Death of Wm. Hayden.

At a meeting of the vestry of St. Peter's church Wednesday J. F. Hicks was appointed senior warden in place of William Hayden and C. F. Field junior warden in place of J. F. Hicks. The following resolution was also passed unanimously:

Inasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God in his infinite wisdom to remove from our midst our esteemed senior warden, William Hayden it is eminently fitting that this vestry should take some action expressive of its feeling. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, as a vestry, representing the sentiments of this whole church and congregation, most sincerely mourn the death of our beloved senior warden. We shall deeply miss his wise counsel, his hearty cheerfulness in the midst of discouragements, his generous support and his unfailing devotion to the interests of the parish. For thirty-six years William Hayden has served continuously on the vestry of St. Peter's church, much of the time as one of the wardens. Knowing as we do the faithful services of our brother, and that, but for his noble devotion, the blessed influences of the church must at times have ceased in our midst we feel that we as a church owe to his memory a debt of gratitude which we can never repay.

Resolved, That we tender to his family our heartfelt condolence, and invoke the blessing of Heaven upon them in their bereavement.

Resolved, further, That a copy of these resolutions be given to the family and spread upon the records of the church.

A New Life of Grant.

For upwards of two years the publishers of McClure's Magazine have been quietly gathering material and pictures for a new life of General Grant. They believe that they have made a larger collection of portraits of Grant (many of them rare) and other pictures relating to his life, than has ever been before. This biography will bring out the real Grant in the same vivid, thorough, and interesting manner as Lincoln is presented in the "Life" now running in McClure's. They have been fortunate in securing the cooperation of Col. F. D. Grant, who has most of his father's papers.

The Stepmother Question.

This has been discussed during years and centuries, for aught we know, and no doubt will be to the end of all time. Need hard feeling and discord be inevitable, when, for practical or sentimental reasons, a new mother is given to a family of children? We have no doubt that careful investigation will show that in many cases the arrangement has been a complete success, and that the new-comer was loved only second to the loved one gone. If all families were as loving and harmonious and all stepmothers as brave and gentle as those depicted in the last number of Will Carleton's Magazine, Every Where, the question would be settled at once.

Send Me Your Old Stamps.

A SCHOLARSHIP.

Offered by the Women's League of The University of Michigan.

The Women's League of the University of Michigan offers a one-year scholarship (matriculation and tuition fees) in the University of Michigan to any graduate of an approved High School, who will raise and send them, before October 1, 1896, the sum of $500 for the Women's Building Fund.

For twenty-five years women have enjoyed the privileges of this institution. Nearly seven hundred are now in attendance. Until the present year no especial arrangements have been made for them. The coming spring, however, a wing, to be known as the "Women's Building," is to be added to the Waterman Gymnasium for their use. This building will be under the care of the newly elected Dean, Dr. Elvia S. Mosher, the first woman professor in the history of the University.

The Women's Building will contain a well-equipped gymnasium with bathrooms and swimming-tank; also a suite of parlors, reading-room, committee-room, kitchen, assembly-hall, etc., for social purposes—forming a central home for the women of all the classes in the various departments of the University. The plans are already completed and bids are being received for the contracts. Of the $50,000 needed $35,000 have been given by our Regents on condition that $15,000 be raised by the Women's League to complete the necessary fund. Of this amount $11,000 are yet to be secured to insure the realisation of our hopes with the opening of the College year.

For further information address, Miss A. M. Soule, No. 4 University Ave., Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Events of the Coming Year.

The coming year will be a period memorable in the history of the world, if but a part of the plans of the United States Government and European nations is carried out. In the United States there will be the liveliest presidential campaign ever held, and the Fifty-fourth Congress, now in session, will furnish exceedingly interesting debates on the tariff and financial questions until June. There will be several exciting state elections and many great political speeches. Everyone will watch with interest the progress of the Venezuelan Commission's inquiry, the results of the wars in Cuba, in South Africa, in Turkey, and the outcome of other complications now arising in the Old World.

It is a remarkable coincidence that at the beginning of a year of such rich promise of stirring news the greatest metropolitan newspaper in the United States—The St. Louis Republic—should reduce its price to $6 a year, or to less than two cents a day. This low price now places The Republic within the reach of everyone. Those who wish to keep posted on politics, trade, national and international affairs during 1896 should at once subscribe for it on these easy terms, in addition to taking their own local paper.

Newspaper readers who may think they cannot afford to take a metropolitan daily paper should at least subscribe for the "Twice-a-Week" Republic—104 papers a year—for only $1 a year. It contains the best of everything that appears in the daily.

Richard Harding Davis's papers on travel in Central and South America, published in Harper's Weekly and Harper's Magazine, will appear in book form February 14, under the general title "Three Gringos in Venezuela and Central America." Mr. Davis has the peculiar gift of telling just what we want to know, and it is pleasant as well as profitable to use his eyes. The brilliant description of Caracas, the "Paris of South America," the capital of Venezuela, will perhaps attract more attention than any other single feature of the book.

An article of rare interest is that on "The Bar as a Profession," which Lord Russell of Killowen, Lord Chief Justice of England, contributes to the February 18th issue of The Youth's Companion. It is easy to see the personality of a distinguished jurist and great man in each statement. This paper is unusually readable and is evidently a retrospective view of his own experience. "The bar does not, indeed, hold out promise of great wealth," he says, "but has distinctions and adequate means in store for those who bring to its pursuit necessary qualities of mind and character." The grievious mistake is often made, he continues of thinking that a smart and facile speaker must make a success at the bar, whereas, "after all, the desirable thing is to have something to say; and as to the manner of saying it, Daniel Webster spoke truly in his celebrated oration in honor of John Adams when he said, 'Clearness, force and earnestness are the qualities which produce conviction.'"

"The Anglo-American Imbroglio" serves as a caption under which two most important articles open the February number of the North American Review. The first is entitled "The Venezuelan Difficulty," by Andrew Carnegie, and the second "The British Feeling," by the Right Hon. James Brice, the distinguished author of "The American Commonwealth."

The great drill by the 30 little Tecumseh girls at the Opera House, Monday night with the Wall & Bigelow show, will be worth the price of admission. The drill is taken from the Pirates of Penzance. Solomon H. Dwight died at his home on Union street last Sunday evening at the advanced age of 87 years. Mr. Dwight was born in Cortland county, N. Y. July 22, and had made his home with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Adelaide Dwight in Tecumseh for the past 30 years. The deceased had been an invalid more or less for the past sixteen years, part of which time he had been an intense sufferer, though always bearing his misfortunes with patience and fortitude. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 p. m. Rev. E. C. Andrus officiating.

We exceedingly regret to note the failure this week of the grocery firm of Kennedy & Mize. On taking their recent invoice, their business was found to be in rather a precarious position and, to satisfy the demands of home creditors, two chattel mortgages were made, one to The Tecumseh State Savings Bank and one to Deloss Whitenack; each one, however, protecting the interests of several other creditors. On Monday morning the stock was sold to J. H. Smith, as trustee. The stock will be sold by wholesale to dealers, if possible, at an early date.

Elijah King died at his home on north Maumee street at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning. Mr. King had been in usual health up to Tuesday, when, experiencing an unusually severe cold, medical aid was summoned. The case developed into bronchial pneumonia and death resulted very suddenly. The deceased was 77 years of age, having come to Tecumseh, from Fairfield township, some years ago, where he still owned a farm and where he was known as a pioneer of that section. He leaves a widow here and three sons and one daughter, who reside in southern Lenawee. The funeral was held at the house at nine o'clock this morning. Rev. J. P. Varner officiating, and the remains were taken to Fairfield for interment.

Considerable excitement has occured in Adrian over the probability that the Lima Nothern railroad could be induced to come to that city in its route from Wauseon, Ohio, to Detroit. A large and enthusiastic meeting was held Wednesday night to meet the officials of the road who had promised to talk business. About all the talk they did was to say that, if Adrian wanted the road, they would have to put up a handsome bonus. A committee of 100 has been appointed to canvass for funds. It is the same old story; being worked for a bonus. If the road comes to Adrian, it will certainly have to go through Tecumseh to get to Detroit, and the old Saline grade has been considered.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, then laxatives or other remedies are not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, then one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

THE LABOR LAW.

Commissioner Morse Reports Upon Its Working.

Lansing, Feb. 10.—Factory inspection was inaugurated in Michigan three years ago. The wisdom of its establishment has been frequently justified, and the forthcoming report of Labor Commissioner Morse will treat the subject at considerable length. A synopsis of the report follows:

During the year 1895 the factory inspectors visited 3,137 factories on their tours of inspection and obtained reliable and valuable information regarding the manner in which they are conducted. Of the number of factories visited 2,561 were running full time, leaving 576 idle or running short time. The number of employes at work when the factories were running to their full capacity was 157,995, but at the time of inspection the number of employes was 112,048. The daily loss by reason of the factories being closed or running short hours, computed upon the basis of $1.37 a day, the average daily wage, is $54,758; $127,230 weekly, and in the course of a year $17,015,993.

The number of male employes in the factories inspected is 95,881 and the number of females 15,164, the number of males constituting 86 per cent. of the whole number. Only 30 per cent. of the factories employ female labor.

There were found by the inspectors 146 children under the age of 14 years at work. They were employed in 64 different factories and were all discharged, the law expressly prohibiting their employment. In 481 factories were found 1,989 children over 14 and under 16 years of age.

The aggregate of the monthly pay rolls of the factories running and inspected was $4,822,815, an average to each factory of $1,379.34 per month, and an average daily wage of $1.32. The reports show that there has been on the whole no perceptible change in the average daily wages from those paid in 1894.

The inspectors failed to find a single instance where the law prohibiting females under 21 years of age working more than 60 hours a week was being violated. Only two factories were found where employes were permitted to clean machinery while in motion, contrary to the law. Forty-five places were visited where orders had to be made requiring all doors to be swung outward or mounted on rollers or slides, and 15 places were inspected where the practice of locking doors during working hours was ordered discontinued. Fire escapes were ordered constructed on 84 different buildings during the year, but as a rule the former orders of the inspectors had been complied with, and over 90 per cent. of the factories where fire escapes were necessary were fully equipped.

The inspection laws in Michigan are considered very strict, it being provided that all machinery, belting, gears, pans, saws, logs, set screws and gearing of every description shall be properly guarded. In the factories inspected 380 orders were made regarding these requirements, but as manufacturers realize that the protection of their employes is the protection of themselves, in nearly all cases a cheerful compliance with the statute was promised.

A recapitulation shows that changes of some kind were ordered in about 30 per cent. of the factories inspected, the number of factories being 827 and the number of changes 1,614. A large per cent. of the changes were immediately made in the presence of the inspectors.

An interesting chapter in the factory inspection report will relate to the subject of accidents. Nearly 40 per cent. of the accidents were due to causes beyond the reach of any factory inspection, such as boiler explosions, bursting of emery wheels, etc., there being no provision in the present law for boiler inspection. The whole number of accidents reported was 253, of which 43 resulted fatally, 106 are classified as serious, 70 as severe and 34 as slight. The number of fatal accidents was greatly augmented by the boiler explosion in the Detroit Journal office, in which 20 persons lost their lives. The number of accidents caused by improperly guarded machinery has gradually diminished since the inspection laws went into effect.

Houghton Restaurant Keeper Suspected of Causing His Child's Death.

Houghton, Feb. 12.—At ten o'clock Tuesday morning Dr. A. L. Wheeler was summoned to attend the eight-year-old daughter of J. N. Clayton, proprietor of a restaurant of Franklin. The child died an hour later and on Dr. Wheeler's representations to the authorities Clayton was arrested and placed in the county jail. A coroner's jury was impanelled and adjourned till Wednesday afternoon. The child's body was covered with terrible bruises indicating horrible beatings from her unnatural father. Clayton came here with his wife and child from Milwaukee last summer.

MICHIGAN FARMERS.

Resolutions Adopted at the Club Convention.

Lansing, Feb. 6.—General resolutions adopted at the concluding session of the State Association of Farmers Clubs favor equal suffrage; decreasing the appropriation for the fish commission, and increasing that for the traveling library system; the abolition of legislative junketing trips; a general reduction in official fees and salaries; the printing of school text-books by the state and furnishing them to school districts at cost; and a law preventing appeals from justice courts in cases involving less than $50.

Special resolutions were adopted commending the last legislature for ordering a recompilation of the general laws and the publication of such compilation by the state instead of by private parties, and asking the next legislature to add its enactments thereto; calling for a reduction in the number of employes of state departments and in the salaries paid these clerks; and asking all clubs to exact from all candidates, especially those for legislative offices, a pledge to carry out this reform and give state institutions only such appropriations as are needed for practical and absolute necessities; as well as bring about a more economical administration of public affairs.

Officers were chosen as follows: President, A. M. Kimmis, Jr., Wixom; vice president, J. T. Daniells, Union Home; secretary, B. F. Peckham, Parma.

MR. UHL BECOMES AMBASSADOR

Appointment Sent to the Senate and Promptly Confirmed.

Washington, D. C. Feb. 11. — The president sent to the senate Tuesday the nomination of Edwin F. Uhl, of Michigan, now assistant secretary of state, to be ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Germany. The senate in executive session confirmed the nomination. Mr. Uhl was appointed assistant secretary of state November 1, 1893. He is best known as the author of the dispatch to Spain calling upon that country in a peremptory manner to account for the firing on the Alliance by the gunboat Conde de Venadito off Cape Mayst, on the coast of Cuba.

Grand Rapids, Feb. 11.—The common council Monday night adopted a resolution congratulating Edwin F. Uhl upon his appointment and prompt confirmation as ambassador to Germany. Mr. Uhl will return home before going abroad, and numerous banquets and receptions are already being planned for him.

ACETYLENE GAS.

Chicago Capitalists Will Manufacture It at Sault Ste. Marie.

Lansing Feb. 11.—Chicago capitalists have organized the Michigan Liquefying company and the Michigan Carbine company, each capitalized at $1,000,000, for the purpose of manufacturing acetylene gas in this state. A plant will be established at Sault Ste. Marie, so as to take advantage of the magnificent water power at that place. The parent company will also establish a plant at Niagara. Lime, coke and electricity are used to produce a portable substance which gives off the gas under certain conditions, readily produced, and which can be shipped directly to the consumer.

Want Lower Rates.

Grand Rapids, Feb. 11.—At a recent convention of fruit-growers associations in this city a committee was appointed to compile statistics of the fruit shipments last season. The committee will report that the shipments aggregated 4,575 cars of 400 bushels each, and will recommend that a committee be sent to New York personally to present arguments for more favorable freight rates to points beyond Buffalo and Pittsburgh. Letters to the traffic managers setting forth the facts and claims seem to receive little or no attention.

Decatur, Mich., Feb. 10.—Chief Pokagon, of the Pottawatomie Indians, who are domiciled in southwestern Michigan, has received notice from Washington that the claim of the Port Huron Indians to a share in the $104,000 recently awarded the tribe has been disallowed and that the sum will soon be ready for distribution among the 240 survivors. This band refused to remove beyond the Mississippi in 1833, and the present claim has been pending in Washington since 1866.

To Bore for Oil.

Niles, Feb. 8.—A stock company has been formed in Van Buren county which will lease tracts of land in that region and sink a number of wells, with the hope of finding either oil, coal or natural gas. Since the earthquake of last October the presence of petroleum has been noticed in a number of streams and springs, and the amount of oil seems to be increasing. Some large oil wells are expected to be discovered.

Found Hanging to a Tree.

Battle Creek, Feb. 12.—Benjamin Kilgore, who mysteriously disappeared from his home in this city January 31, was found hanging to a tree in a swamp two miles north of this city by a hunter Tuesday. He had apparently climbed the tree, tied a rope around a branch, then fastened it to his neck, and jumped a distance of 20 feet. He was 59 years old, and leaves a wife and one son.

Farmer Hires the New Woman.

Decatur, Feb. 10.—A new woman's society in Colona was so successful in devising means to raise money for charitable purposes that the 20 members offered to work an entire afternoon for 50 cents. KNIGHTS OF HONOR.

Lansing, Feb. 12.—Every subordinate lodge in the state is represented at the sixth biennial session of the Michigan grand lodge of Knights of Honor in session here. The reports submitted show that the order has scarcely held its own in the state during the last two years, the losses being trifling, however. Sixty-four death benefits, aggregating $100,000, have been paid in Michigan during the last two years.

In his annual address the grand dictator, E. A. Fletcher, of Grand Rapids, recommended that the supreme lodge be asked to make important changes in the constitution. One of these was the admission of women to membership, another dividing the country into districts of three or four states each, each district to take care of its own death losses, thus equalizing the expense. The holding of biennial instead of annual sessions by the supreme lodge was also advocated, both as a measure of economy and as a means of lessening the amount of legislation enacted. The recommendation relative to the admission of women was indorsed unanimously, the balance being in the hands of a committee.

PROF. SNYDER IS CHOSEN.

Elected President of the Michigan Agricultural College.

Grand Rapids, Feb. 12.—The agricultural college board Tuesday afternoon elected Prof. J. L. Snyder, of Allegheny, Pa., to be president of the college, to succeed President Gorton. The election was made on the first formal ballot by a vote of six to one, after two or three informal ballots had been taken. The board decided to place on the market, beginning February 28, the Agricultural college lands in Cheboygan, Antrim, Missaukee, Otsego, Charlevoix and Kalkaska counties. A larger cash payment will be required, to stop the practice of stripping the land after a small payment down and then abandoning it.

[Prof. Snyder was born 35 years ago in Butler county, Pa., and has always lived there. He worked his way through Westminster college. He has been eight years principal of the Allegheny schools. He organized a manual training school, founded the state normal school, and has the highest recommendations. He will enter upon his duties at the beginning of the new school year.]

CROSS-EXAMINATION

(From the Kalamazoo Telegraph.)

The following statement is one of great interest to many a citizen of Kalamazoo and a man as well known as Mr. Wallace should carry more than ordinary weight with our readers. Here it is as taken down by our representative:

"My name is John A. Wallace. I am a member of the firm of J. A. Wallace & Co., doing business as tinners, etc., at 106 Eleanor Street, Kalamazoo, in which city I also reside. For the past nine or ten months I have been having attacks of kidney complaint, the pain in my back over my hips was very severe at times; my urinary system was also in a bad state of derangement, sometimes the urine was scanty and then again the amount would be excessive, and a difficulty of passage always existed. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills at a time when I felt that I was going to be sick, but their use warded off an attack, and I am now feeling very much better; the urinary organism has regained a normal condition, and the terrific pain in my back is much reduced in severity, while it is now fast going away altogether. I am continuing the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, with positive feeling that they will effect on me a permanent and speedy cure. I have unbounded confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills as a remedy for all kidney ailments; have good reason to be, as they have done so much for me."

Can you ask any more than this? Doan's Kidney Pills are relieving more backs of the burdens they have been forced to bear through the kidneys than all other means devised, and, better still, they are doing this right here in Michigan. Ask any one who has ever taken them and see what they will say.

Attacks on Washing-Powders don't affect Pearline. Pearline is a washing compound in powder form, to be sure, but quite a different thing.

It's made so that it acts upon dirt as nothing else will, but can't possibly do any harm to substance, hands or fabric. Soap-makers are advertising against washing-powders, claiming that they ruin the clothes. They're more than half right. But chemical analysis and the experience of millions of women prove that Pearline hasn't the power to harm clothes that soap has.

A card on the outside of office door says: "Gone to lunch. Be back in ten minutes." And, the man will be there on time. That is, for some days, weeks or even months, he will. Then he will be at home occasionally for a day. He'll tell you he had a headache—a turn of cholera morbus, or maybe he'll say he had a lump in his stomach and was too miserable to move. The lump was probably two or three ten-minute lunches condensed. They were hurried affairs, but they were taking their own time about getting out, or even "moving on." That is a great mistake, but as long as there's life there's a chance to rectify mistakes.

The man who "bolts" his lunches will find Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the best friend he ever met. The "Pellets" do not hurry as much as the man does, but they will do the work for which they are intended—surely—promptly—effectually.

There is no case of biliousness, constipation, indigestion, "heart-burn," or any of the rest of the night-mare breed-and brood, that these little "Pellets" will not cure.

They are not disagreeable to take, neither are the effects disagreeable. They are gentle laxatives. They cure permanently. There's no danger of forming a "pellet habit." Therefore, you don't become a slave to their use.

Send 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, and receive absolutely gratis, Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, and find out how to keep yourself and family healthy. The book contains 1008 pages, over 300 illustrations and over 680,000 copies have been sold at $1.50 each. A new edition of 500,000 copies is to be given away absolutely free. It is a veritable medical library, complete in one volume. Address, with stamps, World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Feb. 9.

Topic, Works of Mercy and Help.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Mark iii, 1-5; Luke xvii, 1-19; John v, 1-8; xiii, 2-9.

"My Father worketh hitherto, and I work," said Jesus. God is the great worker, ceaselessly active and sustaining that which He has made. Christ as the revealer of the Father God is the ever active One in mercy and helpfulness of men. "He went about doing good." If we would be His followers, we need to study His ways of winning souls. His work was personal and not delegated to others. He came himself to seek and to save that which was lost. He does with His own hands the acts of kindness. His own fingers touch blind eyes, deaf ears and leprous bodies. His own hand clasps the hand of the dead and raises Jairus' daughter to life or stops the bier at the gate of Nain and restores the widow's son. His voice and presence at Lazarus' tomb recall the soul into the lifeless clay. He teaches less by word than by example. Withered hands are healed and impotent ones at Bethesda pool are cured. He does the work and then teaches the principles on which all human helpfulness rests. If one sins against you and returns in sorrow for the wrong done, forgive him. Love is at the bottom of all. So love your brother that you can do the simplest and most menial service for him. "Do ye know what I have done?" He asks when, after His last suppper with His apostles, He has washed their feet. How little they comprehended the full significance of that act. The church up to the present time has not fully learned the lesson. She can bow at the feet of the wealthy, the eloquent, the learned, the talented; she can kiss the feet of benefactors and even worship relics of her saints, but too often she has oppressed her needy ones and scourged her halt and maimed and blind instead of ministering to their needs and healing their infirmities. It is a long lesson to learn, yet on every hand are cases ever ready at hand to remind us of the Master's healing touch, to quicken into life our faith and spur to activity our zeal and appeal to our love. Study the methods of Christ, the great Physician. Open your eyes to the sin sick and suffering on every side. "Study to show thyself approved unto God."

Irresistible Logic.

Men can turn a deaf ear to our entreaties for them to seek Christ. They can refuse to yield conviction to our arguments. They can harden themselves against all denunciations of judgment. The one thing they cannot resist is the influence of a true and consistent Christian life. This is the most invincible logic, this the most persuasive eloquence, this the severest denunciation of sin. Live like God, and the world will come to know Him and love Him, and you shall know the fellowship of the sufferings of Christ, as through the crucifixion of the earthly God raises you into the Divine communion and glorifies you with His own glory of transcendent love.

Religious Fervor.

Living valiantly and obediently on earth is more important than getting comfortably to heaven. The love of God in the heart sets a man on fire. We believe glorious and awe inspiring things, truths so high and holy and glorious that the life which faithfully reproduces them is irresistible in this world. It glows and flashes and melts opposition. It is unquenchable. Let us hide God's word in our hearts till it fuses into our inner experience, reappears in our prayers and actions; till it transfigures our lives and transforms us into the image of Christ, changing us from one glory into another, till we are like Him in all His heavenly beauty.

What Shall We Read?

Some people who are extremely particular what they wear and eat are very careless of what they read. Yet the soul life affected by the latter is much more important than the body affected by the former. An infidel poem committed to memory when a boy polluted the fountains of life, degraded the mental powers and made Voltaire an inveterate enemy of Christianity. A debate in favor of infidelity entered upon in boyhood by David Hume gave a turn to his mind from whose illogical principles he never afterward escaped. Take heed what you read!

Jesus All.

Jesus, sun and shield art Thou,
Sun and shield forever!
Never canst Thou cease to shine,
Cease to guard us never.
Cheer our steps as on we go,
Come between us and the foe,
Jesus, love and life art Thou,
Life and love forever!
Ne'er to quicken shalt Thou cease
Or to love us never.
All of life and love we need
Is in Thee, in Thee indeed.

Jesus, song and strength art Thou,
Strength and song forever:
Strength that never can decay,
Song that ceaseth never!
Still to us this strength and song
Through eternal days prolong. —Bonar.

Sweetness of Sacrifice.

The more we suffer for a person, the more we give for a cause, the deeper interest and stronger love we acquire. So with our love to God. It is not the number of benefits we have received which gauges our gratitude. It is not the depth of His affection which can measure our love or insure even our interest. When we begin to suffer and sacrifice for God, then we truly begin to love Him. Never till we completely abandon self and entirely surrender ourselves to His will do we learn the blessedness of the Divine filling. He that gives all receives all.

The education which teaches self control is the best, wherever acquired. That which neglects to teach this is a failure, wherever it may have been obtained or however much it may have cost. Whatever else one may possess, failure to get this is fatal to human character. Without it one becomes a slave to passion or prejudice and a prey of every evil which assails.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Humanity Should Make Sure that It is on the Right Road—The Highway Can Not Well be Mistaken.

And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring man, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there; and the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away.—Isaiah xxxv., 8, 9, 10.

There are hundreds of people in this house who want to find the right road. You sometimes see a person halting at cross roads, and you can tell by his looks that he wishes to ask a question as to what direction he had better take. And I stand in your presence conscious of the fact that there are many of you here who realize that there are a thousand wrong roads, but only one right one; and I take it for granted that you have come in to ask which one it is. Here is one road that opens widely, but I have not much faith in it. There are a great many expensive toll-gates scattered all along the way. Indeed, at every rod you must pay in tears, or pay in genuflections, or pay in flagellations. On that road, if you get through it at all, you have to pay your own way; and since this differs so much from what I have heard in regard to the right way, I believe it is the wrong way. Here is another road. On either side of it are houses of sinful entertainment, and invitations to come in and dine and rest; but from the looks of the people who stand on the piazza, I am certain it is the wrong house and the wrong way.

Here is another road. It is very beautiful and macadamized. The horses' hoofs clatter and ring, and they who ride over it spin along the highway, until suddenly they find that the road breaks over an embankment, and they try to halt, and they saw the bit in the mouth of the fiery steed, and cry: "Ho! ho!" But it is too late, and—crash!—they go over the embankment. We shall turn and see if we can not find a different kind of road. You have heard of the Appian Way. It was 350 miles long. It was 24 feet wide, and on either side of the road was a path for four passengers. It was made out of rocks cut in hexagonal shape and fitted together. What a road it must have been! Made of smooth, hard rock, 350 miles long. No wonder that in the construction of it the treasures of a whole empire were exhausted. Because of invadera, and the elements, and Time—the old conqueror who tears up a road as he goes over it—there is nothing left of that structure but a ruin. But I have to tell you of a road built before the Appian Way, and yet it is as good as when first constructed. Millions of souls have gone over it. Millions more will come.

Pursued this road while here below
We therefore will, without dismay,
Still walk in Christ, the good old way.

First, this road of the text is the King's highway. In the diligence you dash on over the Bernard pass of the Alps, mile after mile, and there is not so much as a pebble to jar the wheels. You go over bridges which cross chasms that make you hold your breath; under projecting rock; along by dangerous precipice; through tunnels adrip with the meltings of the glaciers, and, perhaps, for the first time learn the majesty of a road built and supported by governmental authority. Well, my Lord the King decided to build a highway from earth to Heaven. It should span all the chasms of human wretchedness; it should tunnel all the mountains of earthly difficulty; it should be wide enough and strong enough to hold 50,000,000,000 of the human race, if so many of them should ever be born. It should be blasted out of the "Rock of Ages," and cemented with the blood of the cross, and be lifted amid the shouting of angels and the execration of devils. The King sent his son to build that road. He put head, and hand, and heart to it, and after the road was completed waved his blistered hand over the way, crying: "It is finished!" Napoleon paid 15,000,000 francs for the building of the Simplon road, that his cannon might go over for the devastation of Italy; but our King, at a greater expense, has built a road for a different purpose, that the banners of heavenly dominion might come down over it. Being a king's highway, of course it is well built. Bridges splendidly arched and buttressed have given way and crushed the passengers who attempted to cross them. But Christ, the King, would build no such thing as that. The work done, He mounts the chariot of his love, and multitudes mount with Him, and he drives on and up the steep of Heaven amid the plaudits of gazing worlds! The work is done—well done—gloriously done—magnificently done.

Still further, this road spoken of is a clean road. Many a fine road has become miry and foul because it has not been properly cared for; but my text says the unclean shall not walk on this one. Room on either side to throw away your sins. Indeed, if you want to carry them along you are not on the right road. That bridge will break, those overhanging rocks will fall, the night will come down, leaving you at the mercy of the mountain bandits, and at the very next turn of the road you will perish. But if you are really on this clean road of which I have been speaking, then you will stop ever and anon to wash in the water that stands in the basin of the eternal rock.

Aye, at almost every step of the journey you will be crying out: "Create within me a clean heart." If you have no such aspirations as that, it proves that you have mistaken your way; and if you only look up and see the finger board above your head, you may read upon it the words: "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is death." Without holiness no man shall see the Lord; and if you have any idea that you can carry along your sins, your worldliness, and yet at the end of the Christian race, you are so awfully mistaken, that, in the name of God, I shatter the delusion.

Still further, the road spoken of is a plain road. "The wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein." That is, if a man is three-fourths an idiot, he can find this road just as well as if he were a philosopher. The imbecile boy, the laughing stock of the street, and followed by a mob hooting at him, has only just to knock once at the gate of Heaven, and it swings open; while there has been many a man who can lecture about pneumatics, and chemistry, and tell the story of Faraday's theory of electrical polarization, and yet has been shut out of Heaven. There has been many a man who stood in an observatory and swept the heavens with his telescope, and yet has not been able to see the morning star. Many a man has been familiar with all the higher branches of mathematics, and yet could not do the simple sum, "What shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Many a man has been a fine reader of tragedies and poems, and yet could not "read his title clear to mansions in the skies." Many a man has botanized across the continent, and yet not known the "Rose of Sharon and the lily of the valley." But if one shall come in the right spirit, asking the way to Heaven, he will find it a plain way. The pardon is plain. The peace is plain. Everything is plain. He who tries to get on the road to Heaven through the New Testament teaching will get on beautifully. He who goes through philosophical discussion will not get on at all. Christ says: "Come to Me, and I will take your sins away, and I will take all your troubles away." Now what is the use of my discussing it any more? Is not that plain? If you wanted to go to some city, and I pointed you out a highway thoroughly laid out, would I be wise in detaining you by a geological discussion about the gravel you will pass over, or a physiological discussion about the muscles you will have to bring into play? No. After this Bible has pointed you the way to Heaven, is it wise for me to detain you with any discussion about the nature of the human will, or whether the atonement is limited or unlimited? There is the road—go on it. It is a plain way. "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. And that is you and that is me. Any little child here can understand this as well as I can. "Unless you become as a little child you can not see the kingdom of God." If you are saved, it will not be as philosopher; it will be as a little child. "Of such is the kingdom of Heaven." Unless you get the spirit of little children, you will never come out at their glorious destiny.

Still further: This road to Heaven is a safe road. Sometimes the traveler in those ancient highways would think himself perfectly secure, not knowing there was a lion by the way, burying his head deep between his paws, and then, when the right moment came, under the fearful spring the man's life was gone, and there was a mauled carcass by the roadside. But, says my text: "No lion shall be there." I wish I could make you feel your entire security. I tell you plainly that one minute after a man has become a child of God, he is as safe as though he had been 10,000 years in Heaven. He may slip, he may slide, he may tumble; but he can not be destroyed. Kept by the power of God, through faith, unto complete salvation. Everlastingly safe. The severest trial to which you can subject a Christian man is to kill him, and that is glory. In other words, the worst thing that can happen a child of God is Heaven. The body is only the old slippers that he throws aside just after putting on the sandals of light. His soul you can not hurt it. No fires can consume it. No floods can drown it. No devils can capture it.

Firm and unmoved are they
Who rest their souls on God;
Fixed as the ground where David stood,
Or where the ark abode.

His soul is safe. His reputation is safe. Everything is safe. "But," you say, "suppose his store burns up?" Why, then it will be only a change of investments from earthly to heavenly securities. "But," you say, "suppose his name goes down under the hoof of scorn and contempt?" The name will be so much brighter in glory. "Suppose his physical health fails?" God will pour into him the elixir of everlasting health, and it will not make any difference. Earthly subtraction is heavenly addition. The tears of earth are the crystals of Heaven. As they take rags and tatters and put them through the paper mill, and they come out beautiful white sheets of paper, so often through cylinders of death come out a white scroll upon which shall be written eternal emancipation. There was one passage of Scripture, the force of which I never understood until one day at Chamounix, with Mount Blanc on one side, and Montanvert on the other, I opened my Bible and read: "As the mountains are around about Jerusalem, so the Lord is around about them that fear Him." The surroundings were an omnipotent commentary.

Though troubles assail, and dangers affright;
Though friends should all fail, and foes all unite
Yet one thing secures us, whatever betide,
The Scripture assures us the Lord will provide.

Still further: The road spoken of is a pleasant road. God gives a bond of indemnity against all evil to every man that treads it. "All things work together for good to those who love God." No weapon formed against them can prosper. That is the bond, signed, sealed and delivered by the president of the whole universe. What is the use of your fretting, oh, child of God, about food? "Behold the fowls of the air; for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet our Heavenly Father feedeth them." And will He take care of the sparrow, will He take care of the raven, will He take care of the hawk, and let you die? What is the use of your fretting about clothes? "Consider the lilies of the field. Shall He not much more clothe you, oh, ye of little faith?" What is the use of worrying for fear something will happen to your home? "He blesseth the habitation of the just." What is the use of your fretting lest you will be overcome by temptations? "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." Oh, this King's highway! Trees of life on either side, bending over until their branches interlock and drop midway their fruit and shade. Houses of entertainment on either side the road for poor pilgrims. Tables spread with a feast of good things, and walls adorned with apples of gold in pictures of silver. I start out on this King's highway, and I find a harper, and I say: "What is your name?" The harper makes no response, but leaves me to guess, as, with his eyes toward Heaven and his hand upon the trembling strings, this tune comes rippling on the air: "The Lord is my light and my salvation. Who shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life. Of whom shall I be afraid?" I go a little farther on the same road and meet a trumpeter of Heaven, and I say: "Haven't you got some music for a tired pilgrim?" And, wiping his lip and taking a long breath, he puts his mouth to the trumpet and pours forth this strain: "They shall hunger no more; neither shall they thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat, for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall lead them to living fountains of water, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." I go a little distance farther on the same road, and I meet a maiden of Israel. She has no harp, but she has cymbals. They look as if they had rusted from sea spray; and I say to the maiden of Israel. "Have you no song for a tired pilgrim?" And like the clang of victors' shields the cymbals clap as Miriam begins to discourse. "Sing ye to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and the rider hath He thrown into the sea." And then I see a white-robed group. They came bounding toward me, and I say: "Who are they? The happiest, and the brightest, and the fairest in all Heaven—who are they?" And the answer comes: "These are they who came out of great tribulations, and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb."

I pursue this subject only one step further. What is the terminus? I do not care how fine a road you put me on, I want to know where it comes out. My text declares it: "The redeemed of the Lord come to Zion." You know what Zion was. That was the king's palace. It was a mountain fastness. It was impregnable. And so Heaven is the fastness of the universe. No howitzer has long enough range to shell these towers. Let all the batteries of earth and hell blaze away, they can not break in those gates. Gibraltar was taken, Sebastopol was taken, Babylon fell; but these walls of Heaven shall never surrender either to human or Satanic besiegement. The Lord God Almighty is the defense of it. Great capital of the universe! Terminus of all the King's highway!

Dr. Dick said that, among other things, he thought in Heaven he would study chemistry, and geometry, and conic sections. Southey thought that in Heaven he would have the pleasure of seeing Chaucer and Shakespeare. Now, Dr. Dick, have his mathematics for all eternity, and Southey his Shakespeare. Give me Christ and my old friends—that is all the Heaven I want. Christ and His people that I knew on earth—that is Heaven enough for me. O, garden of light, whose leaves never wither, and whose fruits never fail! O, banquet of God, whose sweetness never palls the taste and whose guests are kings forever! O, city of light, whose walls are salvation, and whose gates are praise! O, palace of rest, where God is the Monarch and everlasting ages the length of His reign! O, song louder than the surf-beat of many waters, yet soft as the whisper of cherubim!

O, glorious Heaven! When the last wound is healed, when the last heart-break is ended, when the last tear of earthly sorrow is wiped away, and when the redeemed of the Lord shall come to Zion, then let all the harpers take down their harps, and all the trumpeters take down their trumpets, and all across Heaven let there be chorus of morning stars, chorus of white-robed victors, chorus of martyrs from under the throne, chorus of ages, chorus of worlds, and there is but one song sung, and but one name spoken, and but one throne honored, that of Jesus only.

A Logical Indian.

Bishop Whipple of Minnesota says that the Dakota Indians once held a war dance near a mission house. He went to Wabasha, the chief, and said: "Wabasha, you asked me for a missionary and a teacher. I gave them to you. I visit you, and the first sight is this brutal scalp dance. I knew the Chippewa whom your young men have murdered. His wife is crying for her husband; his children are asking for their father. Wabasha, the Great Spirit hears his children cry. He is angry. Some day he will ask Wabasha, 'Where is your red brother?' "

The old chief smiled, drew his pipe from his mouth and said: "White man go to war with his own brother in the same country; kill more men than Wabasha can count in all his life. Great Spirit smiles; says 'Good white man! He has my book. I love him very much. I have a good place for him by and by.' The Indian is a wild man. He has no Great Spirit book. He kills one man, has a scalp dance. Great Spirit is mad and says: 'Bad Indian! I put him in a bad place by and by.' Wabasha don't believe it."

A Smoker's Stratagem.

The editor of the Melbourne Spectator, the Rev. Lorimer Fison, is a Wesleyan with a backbone and a considerable amount of humor. He edits the paper with his coat and boots off and a great pipe in his mouth. He relates that just before his ordination he was sent for by the board of examiners.

"Mr. Fison," said one of the board, "your papers are excellent, but there is one thing we object to."

Fison asked what it was.

Fison explained that he saw no evil in it; but, taking a large plug from his pocket, said, "In deference to your opinion, gentlemen, I promise you this—as soon as I have smoked the plug I hold in my hand I will cease smoking forever."

They were satisfied, and he was ordained the next day.

But as he refills the big pipe he chuckles and tells you: "I've kept my word. I've got that very plug yet."

Congress and Parliament.

The working out of the contrast afforded by congress and parliament is [illegible]. While congress cannot touch an outwork of the constitution on which the national government is founded, in Westminster three unanimous members of parliament might, in the space of five or ten minutes, pass a bill for the abolition of the monarchy through all its stages, the speaker sitting powerless in his chair. On the other hand, congress can scatter the dollars of the nation broadcast over land and sea, though all the whole 670 of the house of commons in parliament assembled could not vote away a single shilling of the public money unless they were assured that the queen sanctioned the outlay, and if, that assurance having been vouchsafed to them, they sought to pass the 1 shilling appropriation bill through more than a single stage per sitting, the speaker would promptly interpose his veto.—North American Review.

Palsy.

People afflicted with shaking palsy are greatly relieved by traveling long journeys in fast trains. The greater the oscillation the better they are. Dr. Charcot, noticing this, has had a chair made to which a rapid side to side movement is given by electricity. The effect is to give a healthy man nausea, but a palsied patient enjoys it, and after a quarter of an hour in it is a different man. He stretches his limbs, loses fatigue and enjoys a good night's rest afterward.

A SATISFACTORY FOG.

BY W. L. ALDEN.

"I have always wanted to see a London fog," remarked the colonel, "and at last I've seen one. I saw all the fog I ever want to see last night."

"It was thick," I observed, "and it seems to have left you feeling rather tired."

"I am tired," said the colonel. "It wasn't the fog that tired me so much as the after effects. Do you know that I spent this morning at the police station. And paid a fine, all on account of that beastly fog? I'll tell you about it if you've nothing better to do than to listen.

"Last night I went to the Lyceum theater, and when I came out I found that the fog was so thick that I couldn't even see a lamp post until I had walked into it. I enjoyed it at first, for it was a new experience, and I started to walk home, thinking that I could find my way without difficulty. A man who has found his way down from the tenth story of a Chicago hotel, when the building was burning, and the corridors were black with smoke, ought, I thought, to be able to get the better of any British monarchical fog that was ever yet made. But I found before long that I had made a mistake. I lost my way, and, after wandering for an hour or so, I was mighty glad to walk into a cabman, who was leading his horse, and, as I supposed, knew the London streets as well in a fog as in clear weather. So I just climbed into the cab and told the man where to take me; and then I pulled up the windows to keep the choke-damp out, and started a cigar, and felt pretty comfortable. The cabman didn't dare to get on the box and drive, though there didn't seem to be any traffic in the street. However, I didn't concern myself with the cabman, for there is no use of hiring a cab and then doing your own driving.

"We had been slowly cruising around London—occasionally running into an ash box or wandering on to the sidewalk—for about an hour (as I should judge) when the cab stopped and the cabman opened the door. I was going to get out, thinking that we had reached my hotel, but the man stopped me and said: 'Better stop where you are, sir!'

"'And where's that?' said I.

"'Blest if I know,' said the cabman. 'To tell the bloomin' truth, sir, I don't know where we are any more than the dead. It may be Whitechapel (though it don't smell like it) and it may be Camden Town (though the road is a little too rough for that). Anyway we're nowhere's near Piccadilly way, which is where you want to go, and that's the only thing I'm sure about.'

"'I don't see,' said I, 'that this concerns me. I hired you to take me to my hotel. I'm in no sort of a hurry; but all the same if I were you I'd earn that fare instead of remarking on the geography of London.'

"'There ain't no sort of use in wandering round in this way,' said the man. 'You must see that yourself, sir! We'll never get nowhere — unless perhaps we walks into the river or some bloomin' canal. I put it to you, sir! if that's the sort of thing you'd like.'

"I began to see that there was more or less force in what the cabman said, so I asked him what he proposed to do about it.

"'I think, sir,' he said, 'that I'd better leave you and the cab here for a bit and try and find a public house—if there is one open—or a police station, so as we can know in a general way where we are. You can sit quite comfortable in the cab till I come back.'

"'All right,' says I. 'Only you'd better find a lamp post and make the horse fast to it, or else anchor him with a weight or something of that sort. I don't want him to start for Piccadilly on his own responsibility.'

"Well, the cabman led the horse along a little further till he came to a lamp post, which he hit middling fair with his nose or his forehead (judging from the remarks he made), and then he tied the horse and went off, saying that he wouldn't be gone very long.

"I don't know whether he found a public house open and got drunk, or whether he found a police station and got locked up, or whether he was run over and killed, or just suffocated by the air. All I do know is that I have never laid eyes on that cabman since he left me.

"Well, I sat in that cab until morning. There was no kind of use in deserting it and trying to find my way on foot—I had had quite enough of that.

"It was just beginning to get a little light, when a man lurched up against the door, and after a little general swearing got it open and climbed in. He told me to drive to somewhere that sounded like Victoria street, but might have been almost anything else, and immediately fell fast asleep on the seat beside me. I struck a match and managed to make out that he wore a good hat, from which it was clear that he wasn't a vagabond, and so I decided to let him have his nap out. He leaned up in the corner and snored like a high-pressure steamboat.

"About eight o'clock the fog thinned so much that I decided to make a start for Piccadilly. My intoxicated friend was still fast asleep, and now that I could see him I saw that he was a middle-aged old party who looked as if he might be a bank president or something of that kind, with too much fondness for port wine. I did not think it worth while to turn him out, so I just cast the horse loose, climbed the box and drove off at a slow walk, keeping close to the curbstone. I had my slouched hat on, and when I had pulled the cabby's blankets well up to my neck I didn't look at all out of place on the box. So I proceeded cautiously, and met with no accident worth mentioning. All of a sudden my passenger wakes up, and leaning out of the window begins to abuse me for being so slow on the road. 'Begging your pardon, sir, but this here blooming fog is so thick that I daren't drive faster than a walk.' At that he got very angry and said that he'd get out and take my number, and wouldn't pay me a farthing. I was glad enough to get rid of him, but when he bolted round the corner I began to see that a cabman may have things to trouble him which we folks don't often think about.

"Pretty soon a woman hailed me, and as the cab was moving very slowly she managed to get the door open and to climb inside, in spite of my telling her that I was engaged. 'A very likely story,' said she, settling herself in the cab as if she meant to stay there. 'You can't refuse to take a passenger when you've got nobody,' she said, making as if she was going to stir me up with her umbrella; 'and you know it. You drive me to Bloomsbury square, or I'll make it 'ot for you!'

"Now I knew too much to get into an argument with a woman, and so I drove to Bloomsbury square. But when I had stopped at the number that she had given me she did not attempt to get out. She was perfectly sober, but, in my opinion, she was stark crazy, for she insisted that I had lost my way and that we were not in Bloomsbury square. I got down from my seat and tried to argue the matter with her. I asked her to look at the corner of the street, where she could see 'Bloomsbury Square, North,' in large letters, but she told me not to be impertinent or she would summons me, and refused to look at the corner of the street or anything else. I rang the door-bell of the house, but when the servant had answered it, and looked at my fare, she said that she didn't know her, and went back into the house, calling out to me from the doorstep that I ought to be ashamed of myself for being in such a state so early in the morning. I got back on the box, and wondered if everybody in London was made either drunk or crazy by an extra thick fog.

"There was very little fog by this time, and I made up my mind to drive back to the place where I had taken the woman up, leave her on some quiet doorstep and drive off before anyone could stop me. It wasn't very long before I was back again in the Finsbury quarter, but it wasn't a very pleasant drive, for the woman kept yelling to me out of the window. When I got to Finsbury I selected a good, quiet street, and then got down and told my passenger that she must get out. Of course, she said she wouldn't do anything of the kind, and when she saw that I meant business she set up a yell that promised to wake the whole street. About 50 windows went up, and more than 50 men and women put their heads out and remarked: 'Fire!' and 'Murder!' at the top of their lungs. It was clear that this sort of thing would never do; so I jumped upon my perch again and drove away, feeling more sympathy for cabmen than I had ever felt before.

"Having started to scream the woman kept it up. Moreover, she managed to pull the front window open and set to work to jab me in the ribs with her umbrella. The street filled up with people, though where they came from I couldn't imagine, and some of them cried 'Shame!' and 'Stop him!' Boys seemed to spring up out of the ground and followed me, running alongside the cab, and all the time that dreadful woman kept screaming 'murder' and 'thieves,' and making other unpleasant personal remarks of the same general character.

"It would have been useless for me to abandon the cab and run away, for I would have been caught before I could have fairly got off my box. I knew that a policeman would turn up presently, and for the first time that morning I was anxious to see one. Anything would be better than driving that yelling demon of a woman and having a mob gather round me. The thing went on for perhaps ten minutes longer, when a policeman arrived, and the woman gave me in charge for attempted murder and a general assortment of miscellaneous offenses.

"That policeman was an intelligent man. He saw at once that the woman was crazy, and he was evidently ready to accept my version of the affair; but when he asked me for my number and saw that I hadn't any he changed his mind. It certainly was a suspicious circumstance from his point of view that I didn't have any number; and after he had asked me a few questions, which I answered in a way not to give him much information, for I didn't want to explain things before the crowd, he got into the cab, so as to keep the woman quiet, and told me to drive to the station house.

"Of course, when I saw the officer in charge I told him the whole story. It did sound rather improbable as I couldn't help feeling while I told it; and I could see that he didn't believe a word I said, but was of the opinion that I was some desperate sort of villain who had been caught in the act of trying to kidnap an inoffensive woman. So they locked me up. What they did with the woman I don't know.

"I sent off messengers for my landlord and my banker and half a dozen other people, and the upshot of it all was that the next morning I was taken before a magistrate, who, after examining into my case, gave me to understand that I wasn't guilty of the great majority of the crimes that had been charged against me, but that as a sort of warning to me never to commit any of them he should fine me. I paid the fine—I needn't mention just how much it was—and went home in a cab that had a real cabman on the box.

"I've considerable more sympathy for cabmen than I used to have, and if as a class they are men who look on the rest of mankind as their natural enemies, whom they have a perfect right to impose upon, I don't much wonder at it, now that I've been a cabman myself and know a little of the troubles that an honest cabman may have to endure."—Cincinnati Gazette.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Caillouette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at Baker & Hall's drug store.

WOMEN ARE GREAT SUFFERERS

They do not get Enough Outdoor Exercise—The Bicycle Will do Them More Good Than Medicine.

The Experience of Two Women who had Led an Indoor Life and the Outcome.

From the Standard-Union, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Few women have had a more miserable existence and lived to tell the tale than Mrs. Anna L. Smith, of 311 Pulaski Avenue, Brooklyn. With all the comforts that money affords, with all the happiness that many loving friends can give, the joy of Mrs. Smith's life was blasted for years by the terrible ravages of sickness. Mrs. Smith's experience is unique because her suffering was not caused by one disease only but by many; until it seemed as though she was a living sacrifice. Doctors were employed, money was spent—the wide world was searched for remedies that would give her the joy of good health. Despite all efforts the clouds of life grew darker until it looked indeed as if death was hovering near. It was in this hour of distress that she heard of the now famous remedy—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and by their virtues was restored to good health and happiness. The story is most interesting as told to a reporter:

"I was an invalid for years, suffering first with one complaint and then with another. My case was truly that of a complication of diseases, due to an accident which I received some years ago. The thing which caused me the most discomfort and made me offensive to my family was the worse case of indigestion imaginable. I made all around me miserable by my sufferings, and was most miserable myself. I had the best physician we could find, and occasionally his prescriptions relieved me temporarily. But the pains and misery would all soon return again. I became desperate, and started in to try remedies of which I read. Among them were the Pink Pills. Their appearance captivated me instantly, for I am a great believer in the beautiful. I took the pills and followed out the directions to the letter, and before many days I began to feel like a different woman. For six weeks I took the pills regularly, and I can truthfully add after that I was as well as any one in the family. The change for the better in my condition has caused my relatives and friends to take the pills. We buy them all from the drug store of John Duryea, at the corner of DeKalb and Sumner Avenue.

"I assure you it was impossible for me to oversee my household for three years. Now I visit my kitchen every day, do my own marketing and shopping; in a word, look after everything connected with my home and family.

"Oh, yes, I still keep taking the pills. I take one daily after dinner. Prevention you know, is better and cheaper than cure. I verily believe one half of the women who are suffering from the ills which our sex are heir to would be up and well if they could be induced to give the Pink Pills a fair trial. I certainly recommend them heartily and feel grateful to the physician who put them on the market."

Mrs. Smith is a woman of some means and standing in the community and, therefore, her testimony will be accepted without question by all thoughtful people.

A DOUBLE RESCUE.
Two People Saved from a Life of Misery.
From the Journal, Detroit, Mich.

Mrs. Charles Newman, of Twelfth Street, is very enthusiastic over Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and she has every reason to be grateful for the wonderful cure she has received from the remedy. Mrs. Newman was a sufferer with muscular rheumatism. Her right arm seemed to be affected the most, and she was miserable for more than a year—unable to use her arm at all and suffering the most excruciating tortures.

She used many remedies but nothing seemed to help her at all. One day she noticed a testimonial in a newspaper of a gentleman in Canada who was cured of the same trouble by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and determined to try a box. She took, in all, nine boxes, and is entirely cured. She felt the effects of the first box and began to improve immediately. She has never had any sign of the trouble since. She had become very nervous and weak, but the pills strengthened her in every way. She heartily recommends them to any one who is troubled with rheumatism, and is very glad to add her testimonial to the wonderful virtue of the medicine.

Mr. Marvin, of No. 625 Fifteenth Street, an old soldier and a retired Baptist minister. At present he is employed in the U. S. Pension Agency, of Detroit. For many years Mr. Marvin was troubled with stomach difficulties—dyspepsia and all the attendant symptoms. He doctored with many physicians, but with no benefit. His trouble seemed to be chronic. Some one recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to him one day, and he got two boxes; by the time he had finished the second box he was so much better that he left off taking them.

About this time he went to Ludington on a business trip, and while there was taken sick; symptoms of his old trouble appeared and he employed a physician. For six weeks he suffered, until one day he remembered the Pink Pills and sent for them. It had the same immediate effect and he completely recovered. He is very glad to recommend them to anyone, and will never be without them in the future. His son is also using them for general debility and is receiving beneficial results, although he has not taken them very long.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are prepared by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Schenectady, N. Y., a firm whose ability and reliability are unquestioned. The Pink Pills are not looked upon as a patent medicine, but as a prescription, having been used as such for years in general practice, and their successful results in curing various conditions made it imperative that they be prepared in quantities to meet the demand of the people and place them in reach of all. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, and the tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration, all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature.

Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

The Knights didn't join, that is, the ceremony of installation, but they were there for every other purpose and enjoyed it, too. The ceremony was exceedingly well executed, and the impressiveness of the occasion was greatly augmented by military and fancy drills. Altogether the affair passed off very pleasantly and satisfactorily, and speaks much for the enterprise of the ladies of the hive.

The ladies were very highly entertained especially by the precise and well executed march and military maneuvers of the knights.

There are an almost countless number of remedies said to cure chronic catarrh. The most of these are of no use whatever, and many worse than useless, being actually harmful. A few are successful in a small number cases those which are very slight and easily curable—cases which might almost get well by simply taking care not to catch cold again. But all this vast multitude of medicines it cannot be said that there are more than two or three which are actually specifics, and without the most reliable is Pe-ru-na. It always cures when it is faithfully and conscientiously used. It not only cures catarrh of the head and throat, but catarrh of the stomach, liver, bowels, lungs, bronchial tubes, kidneys, and in fact any of the organs of the human body. It is indeed a dreadful case of catarrh, wherever located, that Pe-ru-na cannot cure, or at least greatly help. It may be procured at all the drug stores, and it should be given a faithful trial by those who have tried in vain elsewhere to get relief.

A book on catarrh and catarral diseases of 64 instructive illustrated pages will be sent free to any address by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio. 1w

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31, '96.

This has been a lively, at times actually exciting, week in Congress. The House started the ball in the short discussion which preceded the adoption of the Senate concurrent resolution, expressing the sympathy of Congress for the poor Armenians and requesting the European powers which are parties to to the Berlin treaty to compel the Sultan of Turkey to live up to that treaty by giving the Armenians the protection thereby guaranteed them. Several members of the House spoke in favor of taking the more radical step of sending the Turkish minister his passports. For a few minutes there was great excitement, but the cooler heads prevailed, and the Senate resolution adopted. It is now reported that President Cleveland will refuse to send that resolution to the Europeau powers, as requested and will send a special message to Congress giving his reasons therefor. Whew! If he should—just watch for a sure enough rumpus.

The excitement began in the Senate when Senator Tillman, of S. C., during a speech in favor of the free coinage substitute for the House bond bill, villified President Cleveland to an extent never before heard on the floor of either branch of Congress from a man claiming membership in the President's own party. He called Mr. Cleveland bull-headed, self-idolatrous, besotted tyrant, traitor to his own party and lots of other uncomplimentary things. He abused both the old parties to such an extent that the speech is regarded as a notice that he had read himself out of the democratic and into the people's party. He also jumped on the Supreme court for its income tax decision, and predicted that if the people did not get relief from corporation and ring rule by the ballot they would get it by bullets. Things continued lively in the Senate all during the closing debate on the coinage substitute, which at times was very bitter on both sides. The result, of course, was a foregone conclusion when the substitute was reported from the Finance committee. Therefore nobody was surprised.

The Carnegie firms, which own the only two plants in the U. S. for making heavy armor plate for vessels, may discover in the not distant future that it doesn't pay to be too greedy. That they have been greatly overcharging the government for armor plate has been made plain by the investigation of the Senate committee on Naval Affairs. The Navy Department will soon open bids for making something like $5,000,000 worth of armor plate, and if the prices submitted by the only two establishments which can bid are not much nearer prices paid for the same thing by European governments than they have heretofore been, the bids will be rejected and Congress will be asked to pass the bill introduced by Senator Smith, of N. J., appropiating the money to establish a government plant to make armor plate for our vessels. In fact, that bill may be put through anyway, as it has many advocates.

In a speech this week in favor of the Monroe doctrine resolution, now before the Senate, which was attacked last week by Senator Wolcott, of Colo., Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, said: "I do not believe that the views of the Senator from Colorado (Wolcott) commend themselves to the deliberate judgment of the American people. They may be satisfactory to the money changers. England can crack a whip to them; but, thank God, the money changers are not the custodians of the national conscience. They may be approved by Wall street, for Wall street represents that powerful syndicate which seeks to dominate the financial and industrial policy of this country; but Wall street cannot dictate to the Senate of the United States. If our people ever become so senile and degraded as to be willing to list the honor of the nation on the stock exchange, to go up or down with the market, it will be time to turn the pictured face of Washington to the wall and cast the sword of Grant into the sea." If that sort of talk indicates jingoism, nine-tenths of both branches of Congress are jingoists.

Ex-Congressman Hatch, of Mo., is still hoping that his anti-option bill, which came near enough to passing the last Congress to give the gamblers in agricultural products a bad scare, will become a law. He was this week given a hearing on the subject by the House committee on agriculture.

The Senate committee on Foreign relations reported a resolution requesting the President to use his good offices with Spain to secure a recognition of the belligerency of the Cubans, and Senator Cameron reported a minority resolution requesting the President to ask Spain to recognize the independence of Cuba. The first will probably be adopted by both Senate and House, not with the expectation that Spain will recognize the Cubans, but as the first step towards this country recognizing them as such, which is believed will immediately follow Spain's refusal, unless there shall in the meantime be a change in the condition of affairs in Cuba.

The Remenyi Concert.

A crowded house greeted the great violinist Wednesday evening. The patrons of the Star Course expected much, and they were rewarded beyond their most ardent anticipations. It isn't necessary to say very much about Remenyi. Were you there? If not, you ought to have been, and you would have seen the difference. Remenyi demonstrated the fact that a truly masterful musician can play for the people as well as the critics. A short sketch of his life will be of interest at this time.

Edouard Remenyi was born at Moskoli in Hungary. From earliest infancy he showed signs of a great musical genius. At the age of ten years he was placed under the charge of the celebrated violin instructor, Joseph Bohm, who also taught the noted Joseph Joachim. During the Hungarian uprising, Remenyi, at the age of sixteen, enlisted as a soldier. His bravery was rewarded with the position of Aid-de-camp on the staff of the Commander in Chief of the hero army, Gyorgey, with the title of Lieutenant. After the defeat of the insurgents he went to England. En route he became acquainted with the Grand Music Master of the age, his countryman, Franz Liszt, who recognized his great genius and became his fast friend and adviser. Soon after the young artist's arrival in London he was appointed solo violinist to the Queen. Having made himself famous he was called to the Court of the Emperor of Austria, as Chief Musician. He has made a tour of the entire globe and played for the potentates of all nations. His first tour in America was made in 1878-9. Since then he has made another tour, and for a time was supposed to be drowned, and has the pleasure of reading his own obituary in various languages, for he is not only a great musician but he is a great scholar also, and converses fluently in very many languages. He is also the author of a very valuable work on Japanese art. He possesses the oldest violins in the world, and the amount estimated on their value—for which he pays insurance—is ninety thousand dollars. He also has a viola for which he has been offered $7,500. His especial favorite violin is a Lupot, which rejoices in the name of "Her Ladyship." It was made by Nicholas Lupot in Paris in 1818. His viola is no doubt the finest in the world. It is known as "The Cathedral" and was made by Paola Magini in Breschia in 1617.

WILLIAM HAYDEN.

William Hayden was born in Otsego county, N. Y., March 25th, 1819. His father, Hezekiah Haydeu, was born in Connecticut and belonged to the Connecticut line of Haydens, whose first representative, Wm. Hayden, appeared in America in 1630. The subject of this sketch was left an orphan when four years old and was reared in the family of an uncle, with whom he obtained his first business experiences. He was engaged in various business enterprises in the east until 1849 when, in company with a small party from Buffalo, including his brother Levi, he took the romantic and perilous overland route to the gold fields of California. One hundred days were taken to make the journey. During this time the brother, Levi died. At one time William and another of the party were stricken with fever, and provisions being short, were left to perish. They recovered, however, and reached Sacramento with the others.

After two years in the gold state Mr. Hayden returned to New York by way of the isthmus, again meeting with accidents and shipwreck, whereby his earnings in the gold fields were entirely lost. From New York he came to Jackson in the fall of 1851, where he purchased the Vandercook mills, three miles south of that city. He afterward entered into the partnership of Hayden, Reynolds & Hayden, which bought and operated the "Kennedy Mills" with great success. On August 16, 1858 he purchased the Globe Mill, of Tecumseh, from New York parties, which has been operated by him since that time. The Globe Mill has for many years sustained a state reputation for capacity and equipment and has constituted one of the principal industries of Tecumseh.

William Hayden married Miss Sara M. Hosmer in 1856. Eight children were born to them, six of whom survive their father. Mr. Hayden's domestic life was nearly all passed in Tecumseh, and was one of contentment and happiness.

For almost 40 years Wm. Hayden has been identified with the business, social and religious life of Tecumseh. In business his name was a synonym for integrity, honor and perseverance. In public affairs he was generous, liberal and progressive; in private dealings scrupulously honest. In religion he was a devoted Episcopalian, having been senior warden of St. Peter's church for many years. His belief was in deeds and actions, rather than words. It began at home and his daily life demonstrated the fact that he believed in example rather than precept.

Personally he practiced the rigid economy, which is the first principle of business. In his family, in the church, and for the public, he was lavish without ostentation. He often did good stealthily as some men do evil. But Wm. Hayden was known to the people of Tecumseh and the readers of this paper. The virtue of his character is indelibly impressed on their memory. His actions have spoken most eloquently for themselves. A higher eulogy than words can portray has been written by the deeds of half a century of well spent life in this comunity. His life is in evidence, and it is safe to say that no man of affairs ever rested from his labors with a more nearly unimpeachable record than Wm. Hayden.

The last illness of the deceased seemed to be a gradual giving way of the physical forces which had borne so many heavy and constant burdens. It was indeed a fitting end to a noble life.

ESTHER MURRAY.

Mrs. Esther Murray is among the number of our aged residents who have been called from our midst during the past week. Since the death of her husband, nine years ago, Mrs. Murray has made her home with her niece Mrs. Abbie Fisher where she has received all the care and kindness which could have been bestowed by her own children had they been living. The deceased was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1817, lacking only one month of being eighty years old at the time of death. Loosing her parents at an early age, she was cared for by friends in Vermont, in which state she was married. Two grand children survive the deceased, but none of her five childen remain. Mrs. Murray had for many years been a faithful attendant of the Baptist church though her early affiliation was with the Methodist denomination. The funeral is held this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Fisher, Rev. Hudson officiating.

CYNTHIA COWLEY.

Mrs. Cynthia Cowley, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Brown, Saturday evening, Feb. 1, at 9:30 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Philip Cowley came to Tecumseh from Seneca Falls, N. Y., in October, 1855. Mr. Cowley died in March, 1869, after which time Mrs. Cowley lived with her daughter, Mrs. Brown.

She was born Aug. 23, 1810, at Seneca Falls, N. Y., being nearly 86 years of age. She leaves three sons and two danghters as follows: Thomas, of Plymouth Rock, Mass.; William, of Canton, O.; Augustus, of Hudson; Mrs. Agnes Brown, of Tecumseh, and Mrs DeForest, of Lansing.

All her children except Thomas were here to attend her funeral, which was held last Tuesday, Rev. B. S. Hudson officiating. Gus and Tom Cowley are well known in Tecumseh, both having lived here some years ago.

Rev. Charles M. Brown, of Tecumseh, gave an address last evening to the members of Adrian commandery at their asylum in Masonic temple on the subject "Christianity and Templarism." Sir Knight Brown very eloquently compared the ancient Templar who was bound by vows to defend the christian religion and the holy sepulchre, with the modern knight and modern templarism, and showed that the true Knight Templar of to-day could not be other than a true man and a better christian, and that true templarism is not only like christianity, but that it is christianity. There was a large attendance of the Sir Knights, who were enthusiastic in their praise of the address and gave the speaker a vote of thanks—Messenger.

Mrs. Wm. H. Osborne was stricken with paralysis several weeks ago and though enjoying consciousness since, her recovery has not been looked for. Nearly all her family have been able to come here during this time to bid farewell to their mother and to receive her last blessing. Last Saturday night she passed away in her 76th year. Mrs. Osborne was a lady of most estimable christian and domestic characteristics, and held a high rank among those noble pioneer mothers in whose unassuming but heroic lives are wrought the foundations and prosperity of every community. The funeral was conducted from the house on Union street Wednesday afternoon, Rev. J. P. Varner and Rev. Cansfield, of Ridgeway, officiating.

The Adrian meeting Feb. 22 is designed to be a rouser—a birthday celebration—for every teacher in the county. An especially strong and interesting program will be provided, one feature being a spelling contest, with White's School Management the prize to the winner. The examination of this month is an unusually good time to get your license ready for signing an early contract for the spring term. The special certificate is in great disfavor with the people and commissioner, and as you can have but one, better put that one off as long as possible—fore warned is forearmed.

EDWARD KEELER.

A Brilliant Marriage.

The following, taken from an extended account of the marriage of Miss Nellie Dewey, daughter of Dr. D. J. Dewey, formerly of Tecumseh, will be read with interest by the doctor's many friends and relatives here. The article referred to appeared in the Evening Journal, Washington, Iowa, Jan. 29:

"For several weeks past, society circles have been astir over the approaching marriage of one of our most charming young ladies, Miss Nellie Dewey, to Fred Howard Gaston. The happy event took place at the home of Mrs. J. G. Hise, an aunt of the bride, who did everything possible a fond and loving aunt could do to make the event a pleasant one. About 70 guests were present at the wedding ceremony, they being relatives and intimate friends of the two families. The bride, the beautiful and accomplished young daughter of Dr. Dewey, was born and raised in this city and, by her many good qualities and winning ways, has surrounded herself with a host of friends here and elsewhere, who gathered last night to witness the crowning event of her life. The groom, Fred Howard Gaston, came to Washington about a year ago, to take charge of his father's interests of the firm of Shanafelt & Gaston. He is a law student at Ann Arbor, and will graduate this coming June. He is a brainy young man and has a brilliant future before him."

HEIRS TO LARGE FORTUNES.

Welcome News Received by Michigan Men.

Kalamazoo, Feb. 5.—Jea. D. Veech, the man to whom a letter addressed at the Kalamazoo postoffice was addressed at the Kalamazoo postoffice from the Netherlands, informing him that he had fallen heir to a large fortune, was found in Lansing yesterday. He was found on board a vessel, about to sail for Europe, and when he read the notice in an Amsterdam paper last Saturday he came to this country on the next daylight train. Upon arriving in this city he left for Lansing. Another heir to share the estate with Mr. Veech and Judge Reed is Mrs. Nancy Ward.

Mrs. Fannie E. Ackley and Lucy B. Pegg, living at Corona, are relatives in a golden realm where fortunes are awaiting them. The information came to Lansing upon the expiration of a 99 year lease, they expect to come into possession of a large portion of $600,000 worth of property located in the heart of the city of Philadelphia. The tenants have advertised for the heirs, now scattered all over the United States, with a view to bringing about a renewal of the lease or purchase of the valuable property. The Pegg families are on the verge of poverty, but have steadfastly refused many tempting offers of cash for the right to part with their claims.

STATE FAIR FOR GRAND RAPIDS.

Grounds at Lansing May Be Transferred to the City.

Lansing, Feb. 5.—There is little doubt that the state fair will be held in Grand Rapids, on the grounds of the West Michigan society, again this year, the Grand Rapids board of trade having visited the executive committee of the State Agricultural society to do this and these invitations having been received. The State and Central Michigan Agricultural societies, as well as the city of Lansing, have a large sum invested in the fair grounds located here, and the former society offers to join the latter in transferring the grounds to the city on condition that the city settle with the state society's Lansing creditors, who hold claims aggregating $14,000, but which can be settled for 50 cents on the dollar. It is also conditioned that, in the event of transfer, the grounds be held for fair purposes for a period of ten years, after which they are to become the property of the city, to be disposed of as it desires.

Deepest Shaft in the World.

Calumet, Jan. 31.—The vertical shaft at the Calumet & Hecla copper mine is now 4,430 feet deep. At 20 feet deeper work will be stopped and cross cutting and drifting will begin to develop the mine for production. The shaft is a quarter of a mile deeper than any outside of Calumet and far the deepest in the world. The miners working in it command extra wages because of the intense heat and the acid waters, which cause ulcers.

A Boom in Wood.

Elk Rapids, Feb. 1.—Business in this section is receiving a little boom from the fact that the furniture company is buying large quantities of furnace wood. They have already purchased 10,000 cords. Much of it is shipped in by rail and cars are in great demand, both for logs and wood. One agent said he had written the railroad company for 45 cars, but would probably get three.

Western Baseball League.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—An informal conference of members of the Western Baseball league was held at the Great Northern hotel Monday afternoon to arrange for the formal transfer of the players of the Toledo club to the Grand Rapids club. The transfer was made, and all of the old Toledo players go to Grand Rapids.

Suit Dismissed.

Houghton, Feb. 3.—Judge Hubbell took the case of August A. Schoepper vs. the Hancock Chemical company from the jury and dismissed the suit. Mrs. Schoepper sued for $30,000 damages for the death of her husband, Fred L. Schoepper, who was killed by an explosion at the works on May 15 last.

UHL SELECTED.

Post of Ambassador to Germany Tendered Him by the President.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The president has tendered the post of ambassador to Germany, to succeed the late Theodore F. Runyon, to Hon. Edwin F. Uhl, of Michigan, now assistant secretary of state. Mr. Uhl has signified his willingness to accept, and the nomination will be sent to the senate to-day or Thursday.

Grand Rapids, Feb. 5.—News comes from Washington that the president has made his choice for a successor to the late Mr. Runyon as ambassador to Germany and that Assistant Secretary Uhl, of the state department, will be named for the post this week. A more popular appointment than that of Edwin F. Uhl to be ambassador to Berlin or one that would give more general satisfaction in this city could not be made by President Cleveland. The news that Mr. Uhl would be appointed did not reach here until late Tuesday afternoon, and it then came in the form of private dispatches. The news quickly spread, however, and it was everywhere received with satisfaction, regardless of politics, and the wires were kept hot until midnight conveying the congratulations of friends. A number of prominent democrats met at once and adopted resolutions and telegraphed them to Washington. Mr. Uhl will come home before going abroad, and the Jefferson club will give him a banquet.

The audience that attended "Rob Roy" cheered to the echo when the announcement was made of Mr. Uhl's appointment as the curtain dropped on the last act Tuesday night. Thomas J. O'Brien made a speech of felicitation and, acting as chairman, called on others to speak, and then resolutions were adopted and ordered sent to Mr. Uhl.

[Mr. Uhl first came into national prominence with the incoming of the present administration. Previous to that he had achieved a fine reputation as a lawyer in Michigan, where he had practiced ever since his graduation from the state university at Ann Arbor, and he was well known in financial circles, being connected with two national banks. In politics he had always been a democrat and was at one time mayor of the thriving city of Grand Rapids. Mr. Uhl has been closely attached to Don M. Dickinson, and it is generally understood that his appointment to his place as first assistant secretary of state was owing to the influential recommendation of Mr. Dickinson. As first assistant secretary of state Mr. Uhl has frequently been called upon to assume the entire burden of the administration of foreign affairs during the absence or disability of the secretary, and his name often appears signed to many important state papers. After the death of Secretary Gresham he was acting secretary of state for some weeks and was brought forward for appointment to fill the vacancy. Since Secretary Olney's entry into the state department Mr. Uhl's functions have been generally confined to the administration of the affairs of the consular service. Last fall he made a tour of Europe, including the cities in Germany where United States consulates are established, and it is assumed that he was so attracted by the kindly reception accorded him there that he desired to round out his term of service under the state department as ambassador to Germany, a place which he can readily assume, owing to his large private means and experience of the diplomatic policy of the present administration.]

WINS HER FIGHT.

Rev. Caroline J. Bartlett Has an Incompetent Official Discharged.

Kalamazoo, Feb. 5. — Postmaster Henry Bush has been dismissed from office by the board of supervisors on charges of incompetency, harsh and inhuman treatment of applicants for aid and malfeasance of office. This action is the outcome of a long and bitter fight that has been waged against Bush by Rev. Caroline J. Bartlett, of the People's church, in behalf of the poor people of this city and county. Mr. Bush has held the office since 1879. His record for the last six years was shown to be anything but enviable by the testimony of witnesses for the prosecution. The case has attracted a great deal of interest all over the state.

To Build a Magdalen's Home.

Niles, Feb. 3. The Children of God, or Saints of the Evening Light, the peculiar religious sect that flourishes in southwestern Michigan, are making preparations to erect a home for fallen women at South Haven. A site has already been purchased.

Coldwater, Feb. 5. William Perch, a pioneer farmer of Branch county, died at his home near this city Tuesday morning, aged 66 years. L. B. Johnson, ex-sheriff of Branch county, died Tuesday evening at seven o'clock, aged 70 years.

Was an Original Abolitionist.

Bruce, Feb. 4.—R. McKay, aged 83, died suddenly here Monday. He was one of the original abolitionists, casting his vote for that party in 1842, when it had hardly two antislavery votes in the town.

Death of Dr. J. M. Waldron.

Kalamazoo, Feb. 3.—Dr. J. M. Waldron, one of the most popular physicians in southern Michigan and noted for his charity work, died Saturday night in Porter, aged 36.

Given a Year for Forgery.

Menominee, Feb. 5.—Ernest A. Eves, brought from Chicago to this city, pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery and was given a year in prison.

Subject Agitated by Michigan Association of Farmers' Clubs.

Lansing, Feb. 5.—Over 100 representative farmers from various sections of the lower peninsula are in attendance upon the annual meeting of the Michigan Association of Farmers' Clubs. The number of local clubs in the state has increased over 300 per cent. in the past two years, and more are being organized now than at any previous time. The principal matter to be discussed is that of taxation, the members generally believing that the time has arrived when self-preservation demands that some change looking to greater economy in the matter of state, county and township expenditures must be adopted. They demand that only absolutely necessary expenditures be made.

Grand Rapids, Feb. 5.—The series of farmers' institutes which have been held in several counties of the state during the winter will close with a "round-up" institute to be held in this city next week. About 80 county institutes have been held in the state, conducted by members of the faculty of the agricultural college, assisted by practical farmers and horticulturists, and much has been done toward disseminating information in regard to correct and modern methods, not only for the farm and orchard, but for the dairy and apiary as well. The "round-up" institute will bring all the institute workers together, and they will have an opportunity to discuss what has been accomplished during the winter.

The institute proper will be opened with an address by Gov. Rich. One day will be given to horticulture, one to sheep and dairy interests, and the third to general agriculture, with special programmes of speeches and addresses for each evening. As a side attraction a section will be conducted by the women, with instructions in cooking and household economies, and another for boys in mechanics.

The state board of agriculture will attend the institute and on Monday, before the sessions open, will elect a president of the state agricultural college. During the institute the committee recently appointed to collect fruit-growing statistics, with the view of asking the eastern freight associations for more favorable rates on basket fruit, will meet, formulate their report and lay plans for their campaign.

PERISHED BY FIRE.

Harrisville, Alcona, Mich., Feb. 3.—Harvey Page and his wife and two children, one a boy of about five years old, and the other a girl of about three, were burned to death Thursday evening in their farmhouse about two miles from Marengo, situated on the line in Lee township. They lived upstairs and the lower part of the house was occupied by his brother and wife.

Sometime in the night the brother was awakened by the cracking of flames over them, and found that the entire upper part of the house was burned and the roof fallen in. He and his wife had barely time to escape with their lives and did not save any of their clothes or furniture. When the flames were discovered Harvey Page and his wife and two children were all dead, and their bodies were soon reduced to ashes. The neighbors who assembled could do nothing to save the bodies and the house burned with all of its contents.

It is not known how the fire caught, but from the appearance it is thought to have started in the upper part of the house from the stovepipe from a chimney, and that the occupants were all asphyxiated in their sleep. The house was a large frame building, and the flames spread rapidly, as there was no means of checking or extinguishing the fire.

Will Meet March 27.

Ann Arbor, Feb. 1.—After much correspondence between the committees representing the two colleges the date for the intercollegiate debate between the universities of Chicago and Michigan has been set, March 27. As has already been announced, Gen. Russell A. Alger, of Detroit, has consented to preside. The securing of judges for the contest has been delayed by the doubt as to the date, but will now be pushed to a decision as soon as possible.

Will Address the Students.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 4. President Charles K. Adams, of the University of Wisconsin, has been invited to deliver the address to the students at the commencement exercises of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. This will be made an occasion of more than usual importance by reason of its being the 50th anniversary of the appointment of Dr. Angell as the president of that institution.

Car Fares Reduced.

Grand Rapids, Feb. 5.—The Consolidated Street Railroad company will try six tickets for a quarter instead of five cents straight to see what difference it will make in the receipts. The experiment will begin March 1, and if it works satisfactorily it will become permanent. The move is entirely voluntary on the part of the company.

Probably the Oldest Inhabitant.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"I was troubled for years with a sore on my knee, which several physicians, who treated me, called a cancer, assuring me that nothing could be done to save my life. As a last resort, I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking a number of bottles, the sore began to disappear and my general health improve. I persisted in this treatment, until the sore was entirely healed. Since then, I use Ayer's Sarsaparilla occasionally as a tonic and blood-purifier, and, indeed, it seems as though I could not keep house without it."—Mrs. S. A. FIELDS, Bloomfield, Ia.

The Fourth of a Series of Letters by John R. Musick.

The next day, in company with Mr. Timmons, I visited the government building proper. It is a large building, two stories in height, with lofty ceilings, and a broad stairway. There is a large hall below, ornamented with handsome life-size portraits of Kamehameha I. and his wife, Kamehameha II., III., and IV., and their wives, and Kamehameha V. These comprise all the Kamehameha dynasty, the first great rulers of the nation. The upper hall is decorated with fine portraits in oil, most of them life-size. There is a fine portrait of Queen Emma, the grand-daughter of John Young, the mate of an American ship, who was the trusted adviser and general of Kamehameha I. There is a full life-size portrait of King David Kalakaua, one of ex-Queen Liliuokalani, or Mrs. Dominus, as she is now called, and her deceased husband, John O. Dominus. There is also a fine life-size portrait in oil of Admiral Farragut, who was very much admired by King Kalakaua. Legislative halls, committee rooms, and council chambers, with the various rooms of the cabinets, are in this building. The building, before the revolution which overthrew monarchy, was known as the Palace, and is even yet so called by some, though monarchy is rapidly passing away, and the spunky little republic is every day becoming more firmly seated in the saddle.

The government buildings and all the departments are guarded by soldiers. The standing army, composed exclusively of white men, numbers about two hundred regular soldiers. The National Guard and the Citizens' Guard swell this number to about two thousand fighting men. They have two Gatling guns, two Hotchkiss rapid firing guns, two brass six pounders, and some iron field pieces. Their force is sufficient to protect the island from internal troubles and from filibusters.

Their greatest dread is of Japan. The Japanese, flushed with their late victory over China, have given utterance to some portentous threats against the Hawaiian Islands for discriminating against them. With a fleet of gunboats, a few heavy guns, and two or three war ships the Hawaiians could easily defend themselves against the Japanese. Their harbors are in excellent condition for fortification. Pearl Harbor and the harbor of Honolulu have promontories, such as Koko Head and Diamond Head, which, if fortified, would be impregnable barriers against warships.

One of the noted spots on the island of Oahu is the Pali. Every tourist to the island visits this historic and picturesque place. The Pali, or pass, which is the only road by which travelers can cross the island, passes over the brink of a precipice one thousand feet above the level of the sea. From this narrow Pali, not wide enough for two wagons to pass, one can see the ocean on both sides of the island. The view is perhaps unexcelled from any other point in the world. From Honolulu there is a broad well-beaten road leading up to the Pali. Tourists go up in carriages or on horseback. I decided to make the journey on horseback, and so, mounted on a tough little mountain pony and accompanied by a young school-teacher as guide, on November 25, 1895, I left Queen Street, and cantered through the town, Monako, on toward the mountains.

It was a delightful morning. A gentle breeze was blowing, tho' my guide assured me it would be hot enough before we returned.

"Leave your vest at home," he advised. "A coat and trousers will be all you will want."

"Is it so hot on the mountains?" I asked.

"No, but we will get it coming down. The wind in the pass, however, sometimes blows so hard that you can hardly keep your hat on your head, or hair either, for that matter."

Our coats were light summer ulsters such as are worn in July and August. While cantering down the street we sometimes glanced into the open doors. The houses usually have a deserted appearance as the inmates prefer the cool lanai to the parlor. But as we passed one house, we saw a lady at a telephone gossiping with some lady friend in a distant part of the island.

"She has gone visiting," my guide explained. "Perhaps there is no place in the world where the telephone is used so much as it is here. Why the women will ask 'Central' the time of day rather than go in the next room and look at the clock. They often ask 'Central' if it is raining instead of looking out to see. 'Central' is the most overworked person on the island."

The telephone system on Oahu is perhaps the most complete in the world. Every part of the island is reached by telephone, and up every rugged mountain path the wires are stretched.

It is a long ride through the suburbs of the city, dotted with pretty little homes, adorned as only tropical homes are. Bright eyes and cheery faces met us on every side. Some people were busy in their gardens or lawns, but most of the places seemed to have been temporarily deserted. Honolulu, like all cities of the tropics has a general air of listless repose. The most industrious people seem to be the Chinese. At all hours of the day and even late into night these little people may be seen carrying loads large enough to make a mule stagger. Really, the Chinaman is the most cosmopolitan person one meets with except the American. He wears all sorts of costumes from his native Oriental garb to the white ducking of a tropical dude. He sells shoes, makes shoes and clothes, works in every sort of factory, stands in every sort of store, is on every plantation, is every kind of servant, rows boats, rides in carriages, carts, on mules, and bicycles, in fact he is met everywhere, and under all conditions and circumstances.

Passing fine apple ranches, tara patches and banana fields, we at last struck the main road. "From here we go up hill every foot," my guide explained, as he drew in his horse, panting from the recent gallop.

On our right just on a rising elevation was a veritable palace. An avenue of palms led from the main road back up to one of the neat little cottages some distance in the background, then winding and turning until it is lost to view in the dense tropical foliage. After extending a long distance mountainward, it again came into view and extended down to the main road. This avenue of palms was wide enough for a broad carriage drive.

The houses soon became fewer and of a meaner sort.

"These are mostly inhabited by Kanakas," said my guide. "Over on our right, if it were not for that grove of algerobas, you could see the grass houses of the natives."

"Do many of them still live in grass houses?"

"Not many. Some, however, prefer grass houses yet to houses of wood."

"Why?"

"Because they say the mosquitoes won't bother one in a grass house."

"I would be willing to live in any sort of a house to be free of the Hawaiian mosquitoes," I answered. "Of all the pests I ever met with they are the worst."

"There are no native Hawaiian mosquitoes," he answered.

"Do you mean to say that the mosquito is not indigenous to the soil?"

"They are not."

"Then how did they get here?"

"They were imported."

"Imported? Why the government ought to have had a protective tariff as high as the skies against such importations."

"Well, you may think this a fish story, but it's true. Mosquitoes were imported. Whaling vessels in coming to the islands brought water from mosquito countries for drinking purposes, and a family of the most active mosquitoes made their escape to the islands."

This story of the importation of mosquitoes I subsequently had verified. There have been many obnoxious insects and animals imported to these islands, among them the mongoose, imported to catch the rats, which not only attacked the rats, but has made a war of extermination on the chickens, ducks, and all fowls. Toads are being imported to destroy obnoxious bugs, the national entomologist is studying all injurious insects and the methods by which they may be destroyed.

When we had ascended the road about two miles we drew rein on a level spot, and looked back to catch a view of the city and bay. Honolulu lay among the trees like a pearl in an oyster shell, and the streets seemed mere threads in the distance, while the bay looked like a crystal mirror with the ships lying quietly at anchor. The beauty of the situation from this elevation is worth going twice the distance to see.

We were now on a higher plain covered with grass save where there were clusters of algerobas or small fields. Growing along the fence I recognized some old enemies that I used to encounter on the farm when a boy, the cuckle burrs. Notwithstanding the Americanism of the Hawaiians, the cuckle burr and taking up a collection in church were the only really familiar features in the country.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7, '96.

The half billion dollars which investors offered to put into U. S. coin bonds, this week, when the bids for that $100,000,000 issue of bonds were opened, spoke in thunder tones, which were heard around the world, of the soundness of the credit of the United States. And that wasn't all that this enormous amount of money said, and when money talks it is usually listened to. It gave the lie direct, backed by the indisputable evidence of hard cash, to the statements made in and out of Congress, by men in authority, that it would be impossible for this government to float a large issue of bonds without erasing "coin" and substituting "gold" on the face of them. It is worthy of note, too, that the very money kings who started the "gold" bond idea, and whose "advice" was responsible for all the statements made against coin bonds, in Congress, and elsewhere, were bidders for these same coin bonds. Unfortunate as it is that this enormous issue of bonds should have to be made in time of proposed peace, many people think the object lesson thereby taught is worth the price.

The Senate has entered into a game of politics, pure and simple, and the populists hold the winning trumps. The republicans are being given a lesson against biting off more than they could chew, when they reorganized the committees and became responsible for legislation. The first trick in the game was taken when Senator Jones, of Nevada, voted with the democrats of the Finance committee, and had a substitute providing for the free coinage of silver, reported for the House tariff bill. No sooner was this done than the policy of the democrats became plain. They propose to use the free silver substitute to try to kill the tariff bill, and to do so they have all become for the time silver men. This resulted in uniting the republicans, the silver republicans being more anxious to pass the tariff bill, which may possibly become a law, than to pass the free coinage substitute, which cannot possibly become a law. The populist Senators by voting as a unit can decide this game either way. If they divide, the tariff bill will win and pass.

The friends of Senator Allison are making the loudest claims of being benefited by ex-President Harrison's announcement that he would not be a candidate for the Presidential nomination of his party, but the friends of Speaker Reed, Gov. Morton, ex-Gov. McKinley and the others who are open or implied candidates seem to think that they also have been benefited. There is little doubt that Mr. Harrison would prefer Senator Allison to any other of the candidates, but there are several weighty reasons why he is not likely to make that preference known. While not a candidate, Mr. Harrison must recognize, in common with others, that a contingency may arise in the convention which might result in his being nominated. For that reason, and others, he is not likely to express a preferance among the candidates; he wants the friendship of them all.

The annual meeting of the Supreme Council of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union met in Washington this week. As usual the business was transacted behind closed doors, only a part of what was done being given out by the press committee. The organization is reported to be in a much more prosperous condition than it was at its last meeting. The council, while disclaiming the intention to drag the organization into party politics, declared in favor of the free coinage of silver. Among the well known people who delivered addresses at the several open meetings was ex-Congressman Jerry Simpson, of Kansas. Maj. Mann Page, of Virginia, was elected president.

The A. P. A. has been trying its power in both branches of Congress. It made a hard fight in the Senate on the nomination of Gen. Coppinger, but when the vote was taken there were less than twenty against the confirmation of Gen. Coppinger's nomination. Nothing dismayed, it began a fight, under the leadership of Representative Hainer, of Nebraska, in the House, on the appropriations in the District of Columbia bill for Secretarian charities in Washington, and won a victory; but whether it is only temporary remains to be seen when the bill comes back from the committee, to which it was committed by vote of the House.

The October term of the United State Supreme Court was concluded this week, and an adjournment taken to March 2d. 217 cases disposed of during the term against 165 at last year's term. Before adjourning the court set the third Monday in March for the Arguments in the sugar bounty cases, appealed from the Louisiana courts.

The Ann Arbor Argus puts it about right, thus; "The quarrel which has been going on between the two contending fraternity factions over the Annual Ball has done more to hold the university to ridicule in the minds of the people throughout the state than any one thing that has occurred in years."

A meeting of base ball enthusiasts was recently held at Adrian and it was decided that a good team could be maintained there with some assistance. Accordingly, a canvass of the city has been made and sufficient pledges procured to insure success and Adrian will be on the diamond this season.

The state agricultural board at a recent meeting in Grand Rapids, chose Prof. J. L. Snyder, of Alleghany, Pa., as president of the agricultural college to succeed President Gorton. The election was made on the first formal ballot by a vote of 6 to 1, after two or three informal ballots had been taken. Dr. Snyder was principal of the schools at that place. He has accepted the position and will take up his new duties soon. He was raised on a farm, has devoted his earnings to farming, a graduate of Westminister college, and is an educator of ability, 37 years of age.

The February term of the circuit court opened this morning. The following cases were brought up: Potter Metcalf was arranged on the charge of grand larceny. T. J. Hiller was arranged on the charge of embezzlement. The statue forbids Prosecuting Attorney Bird from procecuting that case as he had been engaged in a civil suit involving the same facts. O. B. Morgan was appointed in his stead as prosecutor. Frank Miller was also before the court on a charge of larceny. Fred Walker was arranged on a charge of bastardy. All plead not guilty and were remanded for trial.—Telegram of Wednesday.

The following, taken from the Telegram, gives some idea of the route and scope of the Lima Northern road, which may come to Tecumseh: "Judge Dennelley stated that Detroit was the objective point at present, with the ultimate object of reaching out into the northern part of the state and the northwest. The Ohio Southern, of which the Lima Northern will be an extension, has access to the celebrated Jackson coal fields, and only needs a few miles to connect with the inexhaustible coal fields of West Virginia. They want to reach the north and the northwest. Detroit is the terminal point, where the company hopes to get the advantage of dockage and lake shipments of coal. By having a direct and much shorter route from the coal fields it is figured coal can be laid down in Michigan for about a dollar a ton less than by any other road. The road, then, is to be primarily a coal road north, and a carrier for lumber from the north to the south. The passenger service will also be first-class in every respect."

Eugene Field's Last Sotry.

In 1884 Eugene Field wrote a story, which he called "The Werewolf." When it was finished he laid it aside and a year afterward entirely rewrote it. In 1886 he again took it up and revised it, and during the nine years between that time and his death in November last, he rewrote it eight times. His last revision pleased him and he decided to print it. But death came too suddenly, and the story was found, unpublished, among his effects. Mrs. Field, concluding to have the story appear, gave it to the editor of The Ladies' Home Journal, in which magazine all of Mr. Field's work, outside of his newspaper articles, was presented to the public. The story will be presented in the next issue of the Journal, strikingly illustrated by Mr. Howard Pyle.

THE LAST OF THE TEN.

BY BOHEMIAN.

The old granny sat on the door step spinning; the mother and daughter were down at the river washing; little Paola was in the field watching the single peacock, all that remained of the gallant and strutting ten that had once been his especial charge. The grandma's heart was sad, for it was eight years since her son had been outlawed and had gone to hide in the mountains that overlooked the blue Mediterranean. The mother was pensive because she knew not when she would hear the cry: "He is taken! he is taken." The little daughter was sorrowful because she had to kneel there by the river on Christmas, for they were too poor to remain idle even on a holiday. Paola was discontented; his beautiful flock of proud peacocks had been stolen; only one had been left by the brigands when they made their last descent from the mountains. Their goat, too, had disappeared. In the solitude of the mountain side near the shores of the lovely sea the lad reclined in the sunshine with his one peacock ambling haughtily around him like some princely dame with a profound disbelief in the saying about fine feathers. How grand she was, this splendid creature, with her feathers like rainbows in color and her tread that of an overconscious queen! The boy bent in adoration before her. "How splendid you are!" he said.

Yes; it was true. Little Paola adored this, the last of his pets. The loss of the others had made it more dear to him. They had once had two or three goats and he had a little hut all to himself overlooking the sea. Here he slept in storm and sunshine. A peacock may seem an odd sort of pet, but it is none the less true that a species of devotion existed between the disdainful bird and the peasant lad. The latter was the admirer; the former looked upon him with superior condescension. When it rained the boy took the last of the flock to his hut, where there was barely room for both of them within. The lad, it should be said, had once been devoted to a little, lazy, unfortunate donkey, but it was nothing compared to this affection. A donkey, he told himself, was well enough in its way, with its red tassels and bright harness, but it was not to be mentioned in the same category with this gorgeous and overwhelming creature whose attire was so bright and glowing that no princess in the world would compare with it. He guarded it as the apple of his eye, and granny said he had rather live with his gay and disdainful friend than with them, which probably was true. Granny was a very discerning old lady, but she was a mournful companion, for she often rocked to and fro and lamented their hard lot. Such bewailings were not cheering, and Paola preferred the mountain side, the shade of the olive trees, the beach running down to the caressing sea, the blue sky that changed at sunset and—above all—the last of the ten.

But on that day when granny sat spinning and the mother and daughter were washing, a misfortune befell Paola. A priest who passed him called out:

"Paola, are you not coming to church?"

"I cannot," was the reply. "It would run away." "It" was the last of the flock.

"I wonder why peacocks don't go to church?" thought the lad. "Such magnificent beings must have a soul, if I have, who am ugly, ragged, dirty and—and—hungry."

This problem occupied his attention for some time and he glanced with commiseration at his gorgeous companion whose feathers just then had assumed their most imposing appearance. It was a new aspect of their relationship. Heretofore he had been the humble one absolutely adoring; now a sense of superiority swept over him and he pityingly surveyed his feathered friend. But the latter was as disdainful as ever. It seemed a hardened sinner who cared not whether or no it flaunted its gaudy feathers through the golden gates. "Don't pity me; I'll have a good time while I'm here," it seemed to say. "Just watch me strut around and admire myself." And the boy grieved greatly. But its exultation was of brief endurance. A shadow fell upon them and a harsh voice was heard:

"Hello, boy!"

The lad looked up and saw a fierce bewhiskered man whose aspect would have terrified almost anyone.

"How do you do, sir," said Paola, politely. "You're a brigand, aren't you?"

"You've guessed it. Now don't cry out, youngster. If you do, I'll wring your neck. Besides, it would do you no good for this is a lonesome spot."

"What do you want?"

For answer the man seized the peacock, killed it and strode off with it, leaving the lad weeping as if his heart would break. He was alone in the world, for after all his home was no home, and he preferred his hut of rushes to the tiny, stuffy house of stone, where grandam was always grumbling. Sadly the sea moaned at his feet. It seemed to say: "You have lost your last friend, little boy; first they took your donkey, then your goat and now the last of your beautiful pets." The world little knows how the heart of a lad may be bound up in a pet. When he grows up a stronger passion may consume him, but not truer or sweeter than this devotion for a dumb creature. It is, often, the ideal Platonic devotion. He shields and protects; he is a father before he is a man; a grand protector. His heart is unselfish; the wants of the other are sometimes more than his wants. He is a veritable Hindoo in his regard for some animal and, like the Brahmin, he is kind, gentle and lovable.

When he had wept until he could weep no more Paola arose sorrowfully and because his hut was now distasteful to him made his way toward their home. The sun was sinking; the sky had taken a pensive dove color. Afar was a distant sail or two and Paola wished he were aboard one of those boats so distant. The rested motionless on the bosom of the sea. The boy's heart arose in rebellion. "I would like to be a Corsair; to rob and steal; others rob me; they take all I have; I will be a Corsair when I grow up. No; not a brigand, for I hate brigands; they but rob children. I would take great vessels and be a grand corsair and I would never steal from women and children." When he reached the house he heard a sound of merriment within and he hesitated to enter. Finally he summoned up courage and passed though the door. Then he stood still in surprise.

Around the table was a gay party. Grandam had donned her finest gilded bonnet which she had worn in her girlhood; the mother was dressed in her best and his little sister was seated in a high chair with her hair all braided. The table was set and there was a stranger at the board. Paola gave a great cry when he recognized in him the brigand who had robbed him and would have fled through the door. But granddam seized him by the arm, holding him.

"Where are you going, little fool?" she asked. "Are you afraid of your father?"

"My father; he's a brigand! He robbed me! He stole from me! He is a thief."

"Hush!" said grandam, sternly, shaking his arm; "it is your father."

The man at the table turned boisterously to the boy:

"So it's you, my lad. I did not know you. Curse the laws of a land that separate a father from his son! He meets him and does not recognize his own offspring. So that was your bird I took. Well, well; I but robbed my own, after all, then. Behold it, all stuffed and roasted. I had determined to take dinner this day with my family. In spite of the hounds that are after me. It's six years now since I've seen you all; eh, grandam?"

"Six yers," croaked the old lady, "six long years since you were an honest man."

"Yes, six years that I've lived in a hole like a fox. But they haven't taken me yet. At any rate, we have a royal feast now. Peacocks were only for kings and barons in the old days. It is cheering to be seated at my own board once more. Come and embrace me, my Paola."

The boy looked at the table. The sight there caused his heart to harden and his mind became filled with bitterness. His grief was greater than that of the Italian noble who sacrificed his splendid falcon when he asked his lady to dine with him.

"I won't come near you," said the boy, sturdily.

"Eh? Why not?" asked the other in surprise.

"You are a thief; you are not my father," he replied, clenching his hands.

"This is a nice welcome, grandam," roared the brigand, laughing heartily.

"I had no father. I loved but one thing; you stole that; you killed it; you are a wicked man. I tell you so and you can kill me, if you like."

"The boy speaks truly," said a calm voice. The brigand sprang up in alarm and was confronted by the priest who had spoken to the boy earlier in the day. A stately, majestic man, beloved, venerated, almost feared because of those glittering eyes that seemed to pierce the soul!

"Who are you?" cried the brigand, confronting the intruder fiercely.

"You know me—a priest," was the cold response in a voice that showed no fear, only tranquil authority. "It was I who married you; I who christened your children. And now I say your child has spoken well. Words of wisdom often fall from the lips of children. For years you have lived like a beast, an animal. You have now even robbed your own. For shame! Coward!"

"I did not know it, you meddlesome fellow!" retorted the brigand, almost mad with rage.

"The crime was none the less. I could give you up and your life would answer for your misgivings. Perhaps I should do so."

"You will not do that! I—" threateningly.

"I give you your choice," was the stern interruption; to meet your deserts now or to live a new life. Listen: in the harbor is a large sailing boat; it goes to Spain to-night; from Spain you can sail to America. I will give you the funds. Once in that land, redeem the past and when you have done so send for your family. I will recommend you to the captain of the sailing vessel. Will you do this, miserable fellow, or do you prefer living in the mountains?"

The man fell on his knees; he could not resist the glittering eyes; such merciful words he had never heard before. He put his hands over his eyes.

"Absolve me, father," he almost sobbed.

The priest lifted his ivory crucifix impressively. "Your sins are many. Not I, but Christ can forgive them. Go!"

The brigand turned to obey.

"Father," cried Paola, springing forward.

The embrace once withheld was given and the father disappeared. In his joy Paola forgot the sacrifice of his pet.

It is many years since these events transpired and it only remains to be told what the priest said to me not long ago: "I do not regret having given the man a chance. He has become an honest citizen. He has a farm in one of the western states in America and his family are with him. I think I performed a greater service for society than if I had turned him over to the authorities." Whether the end justified this conclusion is a matter upon which people may differ.—Detroit Free Press.

Seems as if consumption always picks out the brightest and best. Maybe it isn't so. Maybe it seems so because consumption is the most frequent of all diseases. Consumption kills more people than ware or Cholera or Yellow Fever. Fully one-sixth of all the deaths that occur in the world are caused by consumption. And consumption can be cured. Doctors used to say that it was incurable, but the doctors were merely mistaken. It would be strange if medical science did not make some progress. Many things were once considered impossible. The ocean steamer, the locomotive, the telegraph and telephone, the phonograph, the electric light—all these were once impossible, and once it was impossible to cure consumption. That was before the time of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Taken according to directions, this standard remedy will cure 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption. Consumption is a disease of the blood. It used to be considered a disease by itself. It is not. It is caused and fostered by impurity in the blood. Purify the blood and restore the healthy action to the various organs of the body and consumption will be cured. It is by weakness and loss of vitality in the blood. It is cured by purity and richness of the blood—surely, certainly cured. Those who have consumption or any lingering bronchial, throat or lung disease, and those who are on the road to them, have a positive remedy at hand. Any condition of the body that indicates weakness, any indication of impurity in the blood, should be attended to at once. Loss of appetite, loss of flesh, loss of vitality, nervousness, weakness and unnatural weariness, are indications that the body is running down. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes the appetite good, the digestion strong. It builds up solid, healthy flesh and vigorous strength. Thousands of people have testified that it has really saved their lives. Some of these testimonials, together with hundreds of things that everybody ought to know about health and sickness and medicine, have been embodied in Dr. Pierce's "Common Sense Medical Adviser." This 1008 page medical work, profusely illustrated, will be sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A Stirring Appeal for a Great National Revival,

To Have Its Beginning in Washington and Sweep the Country—A Revival of Forty Years Ago at the Nation's Capital.

Beginning at Jerusalem.—Luke xxiv., 47.

"There it is," said the driver, and we all instantly and excitedly rose in the carriage to catch the first glimpse of Jerusalem, so long the joy of the whole earth. That city, coronetted with temple and palace, and radiant, whether looked up at from the valley of Jehoshaphat or gazed at from adjoining hills, was the capital of a great nation. Clouds of incense had hovered over it. Chariot of kings had rolled through it. Battering rams of enemies had thundered against it. There Isaiah prophesied, and Jeremiah lamented, and David reigned, and Paul preached, and Christ was martyred. Most interesting city ever built since masonry rung its first trowel, or plum line measured its first wall or royalty swung its first scepter. What Jerusalem was to the Jewish kingdom, Washington is to our own country—the capital, the place to which all the tribes come up, the great national heart whose throb sends life or death through the body politic, clear out to the geographical extremities.

What the resurrected Christ said in my text to His disciples, when He ordered them to start on the work of gospelization, "beginning at Jerusalem," it seems to me God says now, in His providence, to tens of thousands of Christians in this city. Start for the evangelization of America, "beginning at Washington." America is going to be taken for God. If you do not believe it, take your hat now and leave, and give room to some man or woman who does believe it. As surely as God lives, and He is able to do as He says He will, this country will be evangelized from the mouth of the Potomac to the mouth of the Oregon, from the highlands of the Neversink to the Golden Horn, from Baffin's bay to the gulf of Mexico, and Christ will walk every lake, whether bestormed or placid, and be transfigured on every mountain, and the night skies, whether they hover over groves of magnolia or over Alaskan glacier, shall be filled with angelic overture of "Glory to God and good will to men."

Again and again does the Old Book announce that all the earth shall see the salvation of God, and as the greater includes the lesser, that takes America gloriously in. Can you not see that if America is not taken for God by His consecrated people, it will be taken for Apollyon! The forces engaged on both sides are so tremendous that it can not be a drawn battle. It is coming, the Armageddon! Either the American Sabbath will perish and this nation be handed over to Herods, and Hildebrands, and Diocletians, and Neros of baleful power, and alcoholism will reign, seated upon piled-up throne of beer barrels, his mouth foaming with domestic and national curse, and crime will lift its unhindered knife of assassination, and rattle keys of worst burglary, and wave forth the widest conflagration, and our cities be turned into Sodoms, waiting for Almighty tempests of fire and brimstone, and one tidal wave of abomination will surge across the continent, or our Sabbaths will take on more sanctity, and the newspapers will become apocalyptic wings of benediction, and penitentiaries will be abandoned for lack of occupants, and holiness and happiness, twin son and daughter of Heaven, shall walk through the land, and Christ reign over this nation, either in person or by agency so glorious that the whole country will be one clear, resounding echo of Heaven. It will be one or the other. By the throne of Him who liveth forever and ever, I declare it will be the latter. If the Lord will help me, as He always does—blessed be His glorious name!—I will show you how a mighty work of grace begun at Washington would have a tendency to bring the whole continent to God, and before this century closes.

William the Conquerer ordered the curfew, the custom of ringing the bell at midnight, at which all the fires on the hearths were to be banked, and all the lights extinguished, and all the people retire to their pillows. I pray God that the curfew of this century may no be sounded, and the fires be banked, and the lights extinguished, as the clock strikes the midnight hour that divides the nineteenth century from the twentieth century, until this beloved land, which was to most of us a cradle, and which will be to most of us a grave, shall come into the full possession of Him who is so glorious that William the Conqueror could not be compared to Him, even the one who rideth forth "conquering and to conquer."

Why would it be especially advantageous if a mighty work of grace started here, "beginning at Washington?" First, because this city is on the border between the north and the south. It is neither northern nor southern. It commingles the two climates. It brings together the two styles of population. It is not only right, but beautiful, that people should have especial love for the latitude where they were born and brought up. With what loving accentuation the Alabamian speaks of his orange groves! 'And the man from Massachusetts is sure to let you know that he comes from the land of the Adamses—Samuel, and John, and John Quincy. Did you ever know a Virginian or Ohioan whose face did not brighten when he announced himself from the southern or northern state of presidents? If a man does not like his native clime, it is because, while he lived there, he did not behave well. This capital stands where, by its locality and its political influence, it stretches forth one hand toward the north and the other toward the south, and a mighty work of grace starting here would probably be a national awakening. Georgia would clasp the hand of New Hampshire, and Maine the hand of Louisiana, and California the hand of New York, and say: "Come, let us go up and worship the God of Nations, the Christ of Golgotha, the Holy Ghost of the pentecostal three thousands."

It has often been said that the only way the north and the south will be brought into complete accord is to have a war with some foreign nation, in which both sections, marching side by side, would forget everything but the foe to be overcome. Well, if you wait for such a foreign conflict, you will wait until all this generation is dead, and perhaps wait forever. The war that will make the sections forget past controversies is a war against unrighteousness, such as a universal religious awakening would declare. What we want is a battle for souls, in which about forty million northerners and southerners shall be on the same side, and shoulder to shoulder. In no other city on the continent can such a war be declared so appropriately, for all the other great cities are either northern or southern. This is neither, or, rather, it is both.

Again, it would be especially advantageous if a mighty work of grace started here, because more representative men are in Washington than in any other city between the oceans. Of course there are accidents in politics, and occasionally there are men who get into the senate and house of representatives and other important places who are fitted for the positions in neither head nor heart; but this is exceptional and more exceptional now than in other days. There is not a drunkard in the national legislature, although there were times when Kentucky, Virginia, Delaware, Illinois, New York and Massachusetts had men in senate or house of representatives who went maudlin and staggering drunk across those high places. Never nobler group of men sat in senate or house of representatives than sat there yesterday and will sit there to-morrow, while the highest judiciary, without exception, has now upon its bench men beyond criticism for good morals and mental endowment. So in all departments of official position, with here and there an exception, are to-day the brainiest men and most honorable men of America.

Now, suppose the Holy Ghost power should fall upon this city, and these men from all parts of America should suddenly become pronounced for Christ! Do you say the effect would be electrical? More than that; it would be omnipotent! Do you say that such learned and potent men are not wrought upon by religious influence? That shows that you have not observed what has been going on. Commodore Foote, representing the navy; Gen. Grant and Robert E. Lee, representing the northern and southern armies; Chief Justice Chase, representing the supreme court; the Frelinghuysens, Theodore and Frederick, representing the United States senate. William Pennington and scores of others representing the house of representatives, have surrendered to that Gospel which, before this winter is out, will, in this capital of the American nation, if we are faithful in our prayers and exertions, turn into the kingdom of God men of national and international power, their tongues of eloquence becoming the tongues of fire in another Pentecost. There are on yonder hill those who by the grace of God will become John Knoxes, and Chrysostoms, and Fenelons, and Bourdeleaus, when once regenerated. There is an illusion I have heard in prayer meetings and in pulpits, that a soul is a soul—one soul worth as much as another. I deny it. The soul of a man who can bring 1,000 or 10,000 other souls into the kingdom of God is worth 1,000 times or 10,000 times more than the soul of a man who can bring no one into the kingdom. A great outpouring of the Holy Spirit in this capital, reaching the chief men of America, would be of more value to earth and Heaven than in any other part of the nation, because it would reach all the states, cities, towns and neighborhoods of the continent. Oh, for the outstretched right arm of God Almighty in the salvation of the capital.

Some of us remember 1857, when at the close of our worst monetary distress this country has ever felt, compared with which the hard times of the last three years were a boom of prosperity, right on the heels of that complete prostration came an awakening in which 500,000 people were converted in different states of the union. Do you know where one of its chief powers was demonstrated? In Washington. Do you know on what street? This street. Do you know in what church? This church. I picked up an old book a few days ago, and was startled, and thrilled, and enchanted to read these words, written at that time by the Washington correspondent of a New York paper. He wrote: "The First Presbyterian church can scarce contain the people. Requests are daily preferred for an interest in the prayers offered, and the reading of these forms one of the tenderest and most effective features of the meetings. Particular pains are taken to disclaim and exclude everything like sectarian feeling. General astonishment is felt at the unexpected rapidity with which the work has thus far proceeded, and we are beginning to anticipate the necessity of opening another church." Why, my hearers, not I have that again, and more than that? There are many thousands more of inhabitants now than then. Besides that, since then the telephone, with its semi-presence, and the swift cable car, for assembling the people, I believe that the mightiest revival of religion that this city has ever seen is yet to come, and the earth will tremble from Capitoline hill to the boundaries on all sides with the footsteps of God as He comes to awaken and pardon and save these great populations. People of Washington, meet us next Thursday night, at 7:30 o'clock, to pray for this coming of the Holy Ghost—not for a pentecostal 3,000 that I have referred to, but 30,000. Such a fire as that would kindle a light that would be seen from the sledges crunching through the snows of Labrador to the Caribbean sea, where the whirlwinds are born. Let our cry be that of Habakkuk, the blank verse poet of the Bible: "Oh, Lord, revive Thy work in the midst of the years; in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy." Let the battle-cry be: Washington for God! the United States for God! America for God! the world for God! We are all tired of skirmishing. Let us bring on a general engagement. We are tired of fishing with hook and line. With one sweep of the Gospel net let us take in many thousands. This vast work must begin somewhere. Why not here? Some one must give the rallying cry. Why not I, one of the Lord's servants? By providential arrangement, I am every week in sermonic communication with every city, town and neighborhood of this country, and I now give the watchword to north and south, and east and west. Hear and see it, all people—this call to a forward movement, this call to repentance and faith, this call to a continental awakening.

This generation will soon be out of sight. Where are the mighty men that the past who trod your Pennsylvania avenue and spake in your national legislature, and decided the stupendous questions of the supreme judiciary? Ask the sleepers in the congressional cemetery. Ask the mausoleums all over the land. Their tongues are speechless, their eyes closed, their arms folded, their opportunities gone, their destiny fixed. How soon Time prorogues parliaments, and adjourns senates, and disbands cabinets, and empties pulpits, and dismisses generations! What we would do we must do quickly or not do at all. I call upon people who can not come forth from their sick-beds to implore the heavens in our behalf from their midnight pillows, and I call upon the aged who can not, even by the help of their staff, enter the churches, to spend their last days on earth in supplicating the salvation of this nation, and I call upon all men and women who have been in furnaces of trouble, as was Shadrach, and among lions, as was Daniel, and in dungeons of trouble, as was Jeremiah, to join in the prayer, and let the church of God everywhere lay hold of the Almighty arm that moves nations. Then senators of the United States will announce to the state legislatures that sent them here, and members of the house of representatives will report to the congressional districts that elected them, and the many thousands of men and women now and here engaged in many departments of the national service will write home, telling all sections of the country that the Lord is here, and that He is on the march for the redemption of America. Hallelujah! the Lord is coming! I hear the rumbling of His chariot wheels. I feel on my cheeks the breath of the white horses that draw the victor! I see the flash of His lanterns through the whole night of the world's sin and sorrow!

And now I would like to see this hour, that which I have never seen, but hope to see—a whole audience saved under one flash of the Eternal Spirit. Before you go out of any of these doors, enter the door of mercy. Father and mother, come in and bring your children with you. Newly-married folks, consecrate your lifetime to God, and be married for eternity as well as time. Young man, you will want God before you get through this world, and you want Him now. Young woman, without God, this is a hard world for women. One and all, wherever you sit or stand, I lift my voice so that you can hear it, out in the corridors and on the street, and say, in the words of the Mediterranean ship captain: "Call upon thy God, if so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not." Oh, what news to relate to your old father and mother; what news to telegraph your friends on the other side of the moutains; what news with which to thrill your loved ones in Heaven! It was such news that a man read in a noonday meeting in Philadelphia. He arose and unfolding a manuscript, read:

Where'er we meet, you always say
What's the news? what's the news?
Pray, what's the order of the day?
What's the news! what's the news!
Oh! I have got good news to tell,
My Saviour hath done all things well,
And triumphed over death and hell,
That's the news! that's the news!

The Lamb was slain on Calvary,
That's the news! that's the news!
To set a world of sinners free,
That's the news! that's the news!

The Lord has pardoned all my sin—
That's the news! that's the news!
I feel the witness now within—
That's the news! that's the news!
And since He took my sins away,
And taught me how to watch and pray,
I'm happy now from day to day—
That's the news! that's the news!

And Christ the Lord can save you, too—
That's the news! that's the news!
Your sinful heart He can renew—
That's the news! that's the news!
This moment, if for sins you grieve,
This moment, if you do believe,
A full acquittal will receive—
That's the news! that's the news!

And now, if any one should say,
What's the news, what's the news?
Oh, tell him you've began to pray—
That's the news! that's the news!
That you have joined the conquering band,
And now with joy at God's command,
You're marching to the better land,
That's the news! that's the news!

We cannot too often think there is a never-sleeping eye, which reads the heart, and registers our thoughts.—Bacon.

THEOLOGIES are well in their place, but repentance and love must come before all other experiences.—Beecher.

Nervous

People often wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they start at every slight but sudden sound; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headaches, indigestion and nervous

Dyspepsia

The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood which is continually feeding the nerves upon refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. In such condition opiate and nerve tonic pounds simply deaden and do not cure. Hood's Sarsaparilla feeds the nerves pure, rich, red blood; gives natural sleep, perfect digestion, is the true remedy for all nervous troubles.

Self Acting Weapons.

A common story was to the effect that a Muramasa sword was once on a time pledged to a pawnbroker. The fellow thought this a fine opportunity to parade himself as a gentleman, and, accordingly, on a festival day he wore the sword. Quarreling with some idle fellows, he essayed to use the weapon, but his unfamiliarity with it excited the derision of the bystanders, who unmercifully ridiculed his bungling manner. But the merriment of these individuals was short lived. The sword itself took the matter in hand, as though the taunts impugned its own skill, and soon laid low all its traducers. Then it turned against the unfortunate pawnbroker and killed him.

Another story is the basis of a popular Japanese drama, and tells of the adventures of a samurai with a strange sword which he had borrowed from a pawnbroker. He lightly hit a man with the blade without apparently wounding him in the least. Some time after the man suddenly dropped dead, and it was found that the sword had inflicted a mortal wound even when it had scarcely drawn blood. Upon examination this was found to be a Muramasa, which, though coming from the dishonor of a pawnshop and carried in the hands of an incompetent, had thus made manifest its power.—Lyman Hoface Weeks in Lippincott's.

Preparing For the Storm.

A correspondent in the north of Ireland sends the following account of an interesting incident that came under his observation:

Being on a walking tour through Inishowen, and passing along the edge of Lough Swilly, the romantic "Lake of Shadows," he noticed an immense gathering of rooks on the sandy shore.

In company with several others, the tourist was attracted by this novel spectacle, and began to wonder at the cause of it. An old man, who was working in a field near the place, offered an explanation. He said that the birds were picking up sand to ballast themselves in a storm, and that when they did so it was a sure sign of approaching bad weather. He added that on shooting rooks after a gathering of the sort he had found that they were loaded with sand.

As a matter of fact, the gentleman concludes, a violent gale set in early next morning.—Pearson's Weekly.

Boston's "Uncle Noah."

There is a well meaning old gentleman in Boston who goes about in fair weather or foul with an open umbrella over his head. He is one of the notable characters of the town, highly respected as far as that goes, but pitied as the victim of the delusion that a downpour is always impending. The story is abroad in Boston that he once got a terrible drenching and contracted therefrom a cold that threw him into a fever, out of which he issued with his life, but an unbalanced mind. All he could remember of his experience was that he was caught out without an umbrella, and though capable of doing business and comprehending every other subject, he still lives in dread of a second deluge. He is known as "Uncle Noah."—Boston Herald.

He Wanted the Watch.

A young English barrister in Africa was once retained to defend a Zulu charged with stealing a gold watch. The evidence was entirely circumstantial, and the lawyer made such a good defense that his client was discharged. The same evening he was sitting with the magistrate on the porch of the hotel when the Zulu came up and said in English:

"Master, can I wear the watch now?" pulling out the stolen article at the same time.

How Sympathy Is Marred.

Sympathy, beautiful and pure, is apt to be marred by its being prompted merely by a sense of duty, and thus its true and natural spontaneity is veiled. It is true that the habit becomes second nature to us, and by habit we may and do develop honorable and charitable sympathy with all suffering, but the truly sympathetic are so born, and it is as impossible for them to enshroud their true desires and actions as it is "to roll a sunbeam by a touch." It is in the late youth and mature years that, as a rule, we see its most splendid achievements. In childhood it is apt to be in abeyance.

In the old age of good people its beauty is enhanced, and yet in many instances, in the sear and yellow leaf, all that was of sympathy, what little there might have been, becomes bitterness, and the selfish man clings to what he has gained, covering what he has not, with a tenacity which baffles description. All his treasures are on earth, and as he knows he must and shall leave them, there can be no eternal hope in him, and his mind becomes centered on that which is of but short duration. He becomes "earthen," and the rest of his days are spent in sordid contemplation of what at best is but an idle dread.—Exchange.

An Egg With a Golden Yolk.

A characteristic story is being told of a well known Parisian actor who recently found himself in a small town in the south of France where an entertainment was about to be given for the benefit of the poor. One of the promoters begged him to take part in it, a proposition to which he readily assented, and no sooner did his name appear on the bills than tickets went like wildfire, and the success of the entertainment was something unprecedented.

The mayor naturally felt grateful, and turned over in his prosy and pompous mind what could be done by way of acknowledgment. He asked the actor to breakfast with him and a few friends, and placed before him an egg in which 10 golden louis had been concealed.

The actor took a spoonful, and, discovering the contents, ceased eating. The other guests, who were in the secret, watched him attentively, and the hostess inquired why he did not finish the egg.

"Do you throw it away?" she asked in astonishment.

Short Editorials In England.

Yes, there is undoubtedly a strong taste just now for books of fiction made up of short stories—sketches, they might even be called. It is part of the spirit of the time, which is fond of brevity in every form. Just see how the newspapers have been affected by this mode. In my early days the London Times used to thunder in leaders a column and a half long; now half a column often suffices. I think I may claim to be the pioneer in cutting down the length of editorials in England. But in the matter of fiction it seems evident to me that the mental processes which produce a sustained, complete and logically elaborate novel are very different from those employed in the writing of a collection of episodes, even though they be of a common type as regards scene and characters. Some of your American writers do this sort of work admirably.—Hall Caine.

A Golden Floor.

King George II was once invited out to dine with a wealthy and eccentric old duke, who possessed more money than he very well knew what to do with. Upon this occasion, wishing to impress his majesty with the immensity of his riches, he had the floor of the dining hall paved from end to end with sovereigns, the head being up. Each coin was stuck in a mixture of lime, which soon dried, leaving the precious "tile" securely fastened. When the king arrived, and was shown what had been done in his honor, his amazement knew no bounds, and it was with difficulty he could be persuaded to set foot upon the golden floor.

Loveliness.

What is lovely never dies, but passes into other loveliness—star dust or sea foam, flower or winged air. If this befalls our poor, unworthy flesh, think thee what destiny awaits the soul, what glorious vesture it shall wear at last.—Aldrich.

PREBLE'S FAKE BEAR HUNT.

Got Up as a Joke on Greenhorn Hunter Gillson.

It Yielded Unexpected Fun to Such an Extent That Dave Ramsay Had to Go Out Into the Open Country to Laugh.

For more than five years not a bear nor a sign of a bear had been seen in the vicinity of Rose Lake, Pa., and consequently the killing of a big one near there one day made a great surprise in that corner of the hemlock belt. There were also circumstances connected with the killing of the bear that made it still more notable.

Doc Preble lives at Rose Lake. He is a 206-pounder, good-natured, and especially fond of a practical joke. Some weeks ago a party of sportsmen came to Rose Lake to spend a few days after partridge and other small game, which is abundant thereabouts. Among them was a slim young man from Pittsburgh, named Gillson. Young Gillson was entirely unsophisticated as a hunter, and was probably the greenest individual about backwoods things ever seen in that locality. He soon became game for mischievous natives who filled him full of hair-raising bear and wildcat stories and other tales of life in the woods thereabouts. Gillson accepted everything he heard in good faith, and became fired with a desire to kill a bear. Having been told that he was liable at any moment to come face to face with a bear or a catamount, Gillson followed the advice of Doc Preble, and every time he went into the woods he strapped a hunting ax at his side, carried a big knife, and kept one barrel of his gun heavily charged with buckshot. The rest of the hunting party themselves enjoyed the fun the natives were having with Gillson, and did not interfere.

Soon after there was a fall of snow in that locality, and Doc Preble conceived the idea of getting up a bear hunt for young Gillson's benefit. Putting on his rubber boots he made tracks in the new snow from one big laurel patch to another one a mile up the mountain and from that one to a third one nearly two miles away, on the edge of Billet's hollow. There he struck the old bark road and returned home by it. Toward evening he went to Barnes' boarding house, where the hunters were stopping, and remarked in a nonchalant way that from the tracks he had seen in the snow up along Lye's mountain that afternoon the biggest bear that ever had wintered in that district had come in and coiled himself up in some laurel patch over that way.

"It wouldn't be much trouble to rout him out, I guess," said Doc, "if anyone cared to go out and risk it."

Gillson was all excitement at once, and declared that he would go, for one. The rest of the party, suspecting there was a joke in it, said he might go if he wanted to, but that they hadn't come out there to be clawed and chawed and mussed up by bears, and would stay at home. So Doc Preble told Gillson that he would go with him, and Dave Ramsey, Barnes' boss chopper, and an old bear hunter, said he would go, too, Doc having confided the secret of the bear tracks to him.

The three started out early the next morning. Gillson with both barrels of his gun loaded with buckshot, and his ax and big knife ready at his hand. Preble and Ramsy each carried double-bitted chopping axes and a rifle, and revolvers in their belts.

"We'll find him a tough customer," said Doc Preble to Gillson. "His footprint measures nearly 14 inches, and the biggest bear I ever heard of around here before made a track only eight inches long. There's liable to be some blood spilt before night, and it won't all be bear's blood, either."

Gillson was inclined to weaken when he saw the tracks in the snow, and asked Preble why they couldn't trap the bear first and then kill him, but Preble and Ramsy laughed at him, and told him they didn't bag their bears in that way. So the unsophisticated hunter braced up and went on.

"I had laid out to have a heap of fun that day," said Doc Preble, telling about it afterward, "according to the programme I had made. This was to tramp Gillson up and down those hills and among the laurels for four or five miles, trailing the alleged bear, and all the time leading him with the danger there was in the rush of a ferocious bear from a laurel patch to anyone who might stand in his way; then for Ramsy, when we came to the laurel patch where we had agreed that the bear had stopped, to go into the swamp and rout him up making a tremendous hubbub, and howling and snorting and yelling, as if the bear was worked up to the wildest pitch of fury over being disturbed, and was going out of that swamp with a rush to carry trouble to the first one he came to. Gillson having just been posted at a point on the edge of the patch and assured that the bear would certainly come out there, so he could shoot it; and then to see Gillson break for the nearest tree and get into it at the first sound of the disturbance in the laurels.

"Everything worked first-rate. When we got to the last laurel patch I was puffing and blowing like a tired horse, and was about as near bushed as anyone could be, but I thought of the fun I was having, and the more I was going to have, and said nothing, but just went off to one side and shook my sides.

"'He's in here sure, and if there ain't breakers ahead, I can't read bear signs,' said Dave Ramsy.

"I unbuckled my revolvers and laid 'em on the snow, dropped my ax and stood my gun against a tree. I took Gillson over to one end of the patch and stood him there.

"'When the bear comes pitching out,' I said, as if it was a foregone conclusion that the bear was coming out right there and nowhere else, 'don't fire until you see the whites of his eyes. He'll come like a steam engine, and very likely run you down and trample all over you and claw you some the first time, but that's part of the hunt. I've known some folks to make a break for the nearest tree and shin up it when they saw the bear making his rush, but that spoils a man for being a bear hunter. Remember,' I says, 'and don't shoot until you can see the whites of his eyes, and when he's trampling and clawing and chewing you, then get in your little work with your ax and your knife. Understand?'

"Gillson kind o' stuttered out that he understood, and the sweat poured out of him so, and he looked so much as if he wished he was home, that I felt sorry for him, but I went off into a thicket and rolled in the snow for five minutes, and stuffed my hat in my mouth to keep from hollering right out, and then went back to wait for Dave to go in and stir up the bear. I stood right where I could see Gillson and a maple tree that stood not more than 20 feet to one side of him.

"'I'll have to burst when he throws his gun and goes fer that tree!' I says. 'And if he is too scared to climb it, I know I shall die!'

"Dave went into the patch to rout up the bear.

"'Shake the laurels up lively,' I says to him, 'and holler and howl like thunder!'

"I guess Dave had been in the swamp three minutes or more before the disturbance began. When the laurels began to snap and crack and shake, I looked up at Gillson. He stood with his feet braced and his teeth clinched, and his gun ready. I hadn't any idea that Dave could make such a commotion among such a stubborn growth as laurels, and when the growling and snarling tuned up I just laid back and wondered. Gillson stood to his post like a soldier.

"'Ain't that darn fool going to cut and run after all?' says I.

"Just then the laurels shook and snapped as if a cyclone was working among them. There came from the midst of the disturbance such a combination of yells and howls and snorts and growls that I'd taken fright myself and run if I hadn't known that is was only Dave. And Gillson stood still and waited. Then I heard a shot in the swamp, and another yell, followed by a startling creaking and swaying of the laurels, the line of that commotion leading straight toward me.

"'Gillson,' I hollered, 'he's a terror!'

"I don't know what Gillson replied, for the next second out of that laurel patch, not 20 feet from me, crashed a bear so big, and with such fury in his eyes, that it's a wonder I didn't drop in my tracks. I didn't have time to think. The bear was coming head-on for me, with his jaws snapping like a thrashing machine. I turned and I saw the maple tree that I had in my mind reserved for Gillson and my fun. I flew for it. I don't know how many feet I covered at a jump, but, although I knew the bear wasn't many jumps behind me, I had time to think:

"'Lord! If Gillson goes for that tree now he'll lead me off, and I'm a goner!'

"For fear he would, I hollered to him in my desperation:

"But he didn't. He started for the maple. I put on more steam and got there first. I grabbed the tree. I remember bearing two shots. The next I remember was that I was sitting in the snow, with my arms and legs clasping the trunk of the maple tree. That was as far as I had climbed. I looked around. There stood Gillson, a little pale, but with a grin on his face that made me feel sheepish. Near by lay the bear with the top of his head half blown off. Gillson had put both of his buckshot charges into it, with the gun almost against it. Sitting on a log, a few feet to the right, was Dave. What clothes he had on him were hanging from him in tatters, and his face and hands were streaked with blood.

"'Funny, ain't it, Doc?' says he. 'It's so funny that I've got to git in the open country where I can find room to laugh!'

"With that Dave got up and limped away home, and he hasn't spoken to me since.

"'The bear broke out in the wrong place, didn't he, Doc?' says Gillson. 'But it was deuced clever in you to run him over here so I could get a shot at him.'

"I didn't say a word, but got up and helped Gillson drag the dear bear home, only a matter of five miles, and a prouder man never walked than was that little greenhorn hunter."

It is supposed the bear was one that had been driven by hunters from the Sinnemahoning country, the chase being so long that they had given it up, and that it had come into the laurel patch before the snow, unknown to anybody, and settled there for the winter. When Dave Ramsy went into the laurels to make the mock disturbance with a bear to carry out Doc Preble's joke, he stumbled unexpectedly upon this ugly customer, and found himself in a rough-and-tumble wrestle with him before he knew it. The bear weighed 375 pounds.—N. Y. Sun.

Not Afraid of Burglars.

A short time ago a gentleman, whose sister was staying with him, came in late from a party, and was surprised beyond measure on observing a white figure prowling about the back of the house. On going to investigate he discovered his sister standing outside the back door with a cocked revolver in her hand. As she was explaining to him that there was a burglar within the door opened and a man emerged carrying a sack over his shoulder. The man, the girl and the revolver speedily made him a prisoner, and in a short time he was comfortably ensconced in jail.

When the man came home he said to his sister: "Why on earth didn't you go down through the kitchen?"

"How stupid," the brave girl replied; "don't you know the kitchen is full of mice?"—Pearson's Weekly.

As we walked our horses up a steep incline, or galloped over a level plain, we met some odd and interesting people. A long caravan of pack-mules was seen coming down the road from the mountain. They were loaded with bags of rice. It is astonishing, the amount of rice these hardy little creatures will carry up steep mountain-sides, or along shelving rocks, where a single false step would precipitate them to the sharp rocks hundreds of feet below. These caravans of pack-mules were under the control of two Chinamen, one before and one behind. The caravans usually contained eight or twelve pack-mules, all tied together; the Chinaman in front leading the first mule, and a Chinaman in the rear lashing the laggards.

Flowers in wild profusion bloomed along the way; nature has done for this mountain road what the most skilful gardener might envy. Just below the reservoir we came upon some native women washing. Their method was peculiar; the water was in a sort of stone basin, and they were kneeling with their bare knees on the stony earth, dipping the clothing into the water and rubbing it on a stone.

The reservoir which supplies Honolulu with water is fed from the mountain streams, of which there are many. A large board is placed up near the reservoir, on which is the order of the Minister of the Interior, in both English and Hawaiian, warning the people to neither fish, wash nor bathe in the water above that point.

Crossing the bridge over the reservoir from a short distance, we found the ascent less steep. Wild guava trees grew in abundance along the road, some having ripe fruit on them which we ate and found delicious. The famous guava jellies are made of this fruit.

One of the most picturesque and novel sights on the road was a Chinaman moving. He had his shoulder pole on his shoulder, on one end of which was his valise, together with his household and kitchen furniture. On the other end was his live-stock, consisting of chickens in a large gunny-sack, holes being cut in the bag for the chickens to put their heads through. This little fellow had come over the Pali and was going to Honolulu, carrying all his earthly possessions on that pole.

"It is nothing for them to carry two hundred pounds twelve or fifteen miles," said my guide. "They are tougher than mules."

We crossed some of the plains made famous by the great battles fought by Kamehameha the Great, and, reaching a plateau, halted at the half-way house to get a drink of water and allow our horses drink and rest.

Half a mile or more beyond we met a Japanese family of wanderers. The father of the family was carrying a pole on his shoulder with the household goods on each end, and the mother, who had taken off those silly, short wooden sandals and was going barefoot, had a baby lashed to her back, and two or three were walking. At the sight of us the mother's womanly pride asserted itself and she stopped and put on her ridiculously small sandals, and came on limping like a cripple.

During the entire journey we did not meet a single white person. Wandering Chinese and Japanese without any home or going to the markets were the only persons, save the native, living along the road side.

At last the Pali was reached. The path winds along the pass between two mountains through which the wind sweeps down with such terrific force as to sometimes almost take one from his feet. The view from the Pali is sublime. On one side may be seen the sea, with Honolulu looking like a speck in the distance; on the other are the plantations and houses looking like mere specks in the dim distance, with the dark blue sea for a background. Gigantic, grim, and silent as a sphinx, stands the frowning cliffs on the right, and on the left a sharp cone-like ridge extends so far away that it is lost in the distance, while the only possible place of crossing the islands is at the Pali.

One cannot but admire the military genius of Kamehameha in securing this pass. It was the Thermopylæ of Kalanikupule, the last Oahuan chief. Here was fought the great battle which made Kamehameha, the Hawaiian Napoleon, master of all the islands.

Before the battle, Kamehameha, with a fleet of war canoes and one schooner and some artillery, appeared off Oahu and landed at Waialae Bay, and, after a few days spent in arranging his men, he marched at Nuana Valley, where Kalanikupule had posted his forces.

Kamehameha had a good general in an American named John Young, whose descendants may still be found on the islands. There were several Americans in his army, and their skill with artillery gained Kamehameha his victories. He encountered the enemy at Laimi and Puiwa, where the Oahu troops made a brave resistance until Kaiana, their leader, was killed by a cannon ball, when they gave way. They were closely pursued up the valley some escaping up the ridges on either side, while others were hemmed in and driven over the Nuuanu Pali, or precipice north of the road, and dashed to death on the rocks. Their bones may still be found among the bare jungles or algeroba forests one thousand feet below. Kalanikupule wandered for several months in the Koolau Mountains until he was finally captured in a cave above Waipio, brought down and offered in sacrifice to the conqueror's war god at Moanahua.

The Pali looks like the gate between two fairy lands. It is a pass that could be made impregnable. A few hundred men could hold an army of thousands at bay. On the east side opposite Honolulu the descent is very steep and rocky. Two or three hundred feet below the top a spring gushes out from the rocks, falls into a pocket very inviting to the thirsty traveler. The road is traversed almost continually by the energetic Chinaman, the wandering Japs, and the tourists who are loud in their praise of its beauty and grandeur.

Molokai is the curse of the Hawaiian islands. It is their skeleton in the closet. There dwells the dread disease of leprosy the oldest known and perhaps the most fatal of maladies. There is no well authenticated cure for it. For some reason Hawaii has become known as the land of lepers, yet one might live in the islands a lifetime and never see a leper or even hear of one.

On the north side of Molokai there is a strip of land which forms a sort of a tongue, projecting out into the sea some ten miles. This tongue of land is about two miles wide at the south side, where there is a precipice of over two thousand feet extending across the island, and cutting off all communication with the main island. There is but one place at which it is possible for a human being to scale this cliff, and that is a narrow winding path known as the "Pali."

This portion of the island, naturally isolated from the rest of the world, was wisely selected by the Hawaiian government as a proper place for segregating those unfortunate people, the lepers. Here they live, some to a good old age. They have houses, small fields, gardens, horses, cattle, poultry, and pigs. Some marry and children are born to them. If the child born of leper parents shows no signs of the disease at a certain age it is taken from the island and kept in confinement for a certain number of years. Then, if found "clean," is so declared by the "board of health," and permitted to go about freely everywhere. It is educated at the expense of the government, and may never be afflicted by the disease. Leprosy, moreover, is not very contagious. One of the best authorities on the subject declares that the leprosy can be contracted only by innoculation and that it is not more contagious than consumption.

It is not an easy matter to visit the leper settlement. One can only go as a guest of the board of health, and these officials make but two trips a year. I was very fortunate in being in Honolulu when the board made one of its semi-annual visits. On the afternoon of November 29, Mr. J. T. Waterhouse, the president of the board of health, told me over the wires of the telephone to be at the dock of the Inter-Island Steamship Company at 8:30 sharp. I reported on time, and found the steamer, Ke-an-hou, lying at the dock with steam up and hissing from every valve.

Going on board the little craft we found Bishop Ropert and Father Pamphile and the young priests who were going to work as missionaries among the lepers. There were many prominent visitors in our party, among them Mrs. H. Lewellyn Jenkins, deaconess of the Methodist Church, and a member of the Washington Square M. E. Church, of New York, Miss Kate Field, Senator Waterhouse, Judge Wilcox, Dr. Day, and others.

Shortly after nine o'clock the whistle sounded, and our craft pushed out from the dock and steamed down the bay. It was too dark for us to note the tropical beauties along the shore. Night in the tropics comes quickly. There is no afterglow, no twilight. The sun sets and it is dark. If the sky is clear, the stars shine wondrously bright, and if there happens to be a moon it is almost as light as day. No poet ought to sing of moonlight beauties until he has seen the moonlight of the tropics.

ANN ARBOR.

The Two Great Balls, and Other Interesting Items.

EDITOR HERALD:—We are very much ashamed. It is all over now, and everybody had their own way. There were two parties and two separate lots of headaches on the following morning. I am talking about the quarrel between the Greek letters here at the University. Greek letters aren't any more pugnacious than English letters, until they begin association with fraternities. That demoralizes them. But, as I said before, meek-eyed Peace is with us again and her turtle wing is fanning the heated brows of the late contestants. I hope you don't think that we have no more brains than radiates. There is really a little intellectuality concealed in safe corners of the Campus.

We have professors who can give magnificent theories as to the origin of the Runic Futhark. We have a tradition that one of our learned scientists has proven to the satisfaction of all the world that the Goths pronounced the letter w as a bilabial spirant. He spent several years colligating the proofs but today it stands an assured fact to comfort mankind in his ignorance. It is a great consolation in the troublesome affairs of life to know that the Sanskrit gutteral spirant became palatilized about 3000 years ago. This fact is another of the noblest triumphs of linguistic science.

Please view these results spiritually, don't let any bread and butter considerations bias your opinion. Seriously, however, there is much work done there which should command the administration of all thinking people. There is an effort being made to convert the University into an academy of scientific men. That need not detract from the great work of educating the youth, but will rather enhance it. Such a change means merely the substitution of scientific men in place of pedants and mere teachers. It requires that the members of the academy have more time to themselves for individual research and better opportunities for comparing their results with those of their colleagues.

We had the genial Max O'Reil with us lately, also the acrobatic Talmage. The latter entertained us for two hours with the most astounding contortions ever witnessed here. I haven't got my eyes untwisted yet, after following his gesticulations. It was a rare treat you had, when you heard John Temple Graves. We heard him two years ago, and the students remember him kindly.

Our head professor in German was explaining the peculiar nature of German compounds and alighted on the word "leichdorn" as a sample. "This," he said, learnedly, "is a very strange collocation. The word means a very beautiful little flower. I forget the name in English, but I have gathered them plentifully in Germany. Why, Miss Zwolk, you surely have seen them." The young lady addressed is a native German. She blushed and said uncomfortably, "Now really, Professor, I thought it was a corn on the foot." The learned professor stammered something about it having been so long since he was in Germany, and subsided, while the class woke all the hallowed echoes of the main building with peals of laughter.

Please take this concoction with a good shaking, and when we have some more excitement I will inflict you again. C. H.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 14, '96.

Persons unacquainted with the undercurrents of things Congressional could see no signs of the fierce fight for and against silver in the quiet ending of the debate on the free coinage substitute for the House bond bill, nor in the taking of the vote by which the House refused by a heavy majority to accept that substitute. That is because the contest was too one-sided to justify any fighting outside of the Congressional Record and that which took place in the pages of that publication was for the edification of expectant constituencies. But all the same that fight has been going on from the day Congress assembled, everywhere that either side has had a fighting chance to gain a point. One of the most important of those fights, involving six silver Senators, was this week determined when the House committee on Territories by the slender majority of one vote decided not to report a bill admitting Arizona to Statehood. The committee did not divide on party lines, but on silver, and this vote means that bills for the admission of New Mexico and Oklahoma will meet the same fate, and that the six recruits which the silver Senators expected from the three new states will not materialize during the life of this Congress.

Senator Quay is the latest acquisition to the number of "favorite sons" whose names will be presented to the St. Louis convention for Presidential honors. Senator Quay says he has no desire to be President and adds with remarkable candor, for a politician, that by supporting him to the extent of a complimentary vote his Pennsylvania friends will avoid the embarassment which which might follow their supporting some other candidate. It is noticeable that the "favorite son" idea is being encouraged by the leading practical politicians, and the reason is not far to seek. It gives them opportunity to combine on the winner which they would not have if a nomination was made on the first ballot.

The Dawes Indian Commission, the members of which have had what the street gamins call a "good thing" for nearly two years, is going to be wiped out by Secretary Hoke Smith, because of its failure to do anything to warrant its continued existence. The commission spent the greater part of the summer of '94 and '95 in Indian Territory, but accomplished nothing. Secretary Smith has officially notified the Indian committees of the House and Senate that the Dawes Commission, the members of which are now in Washington, will remain in existence another month, in order that the committees may have an opportunity of obtaining any information the commission may have acquired during its negotiations with the Indians. Then several gentlemen will cease to draw Uncle Sam's money.

Senator Wolcott, of Col., made a few remarks, based upon a clause in the urgency deficiency bill, allowing the Secretary of the Treasury to appoint 25 expert money counters without requiring them to pass a civil service examination, which were quite as sensational as his recent anti-Monroe doctrine speech. He said that the real menace to the country was not the Civil Service Commission, but the power of patronage lodged with the Executive, and which had never before been abused to such an extent as under the present administration: that a free coinage bill would have been passed by the House of the last Congress had not the power of patronage been brought to bear by the administration; that Colorado is today flooded with appointments, many of them unfit ones, made by the Secretary of the Treasury for Congressmen who "ratted" on the silver bill, thus debauching constituencies; that the best service that could be performed would be to derive the President and his Cabinet officers of all patronage, so that Senators and Representatives would no longer hang around the White House and the executive departments, begging for crumbs of patronage.

Considerable amusement has been afforded by a letter received from Waltham, Mass., in which the writer advocates the bill prepared by the Massachusetts Immigration League, providing an educational test for immigrants. The following is a fair specimen of this letter, and is given just as written: "It is outragus the ignerent furiners what is overrunin this country. I wux lost in Boston all wun night by ignerent policemen not nowin directions w'ere me married neece live."

The Senate without a division adopted the resolution offered by Senator Hansbrough, of N. Dak., directing the Secretary of Agriculture to execute the law by purchasing and distributing seeds etc., and in order that there may be no delay in beginning the distribution the Secretary is authorized to buy in the open market. There is little doubt that the House will also adopt it. Then what will Secretary Morton do?

On Monday last the people of Macon were shocked by the sudden and unexpected death of Baron Humbolt Pennington. Mr. Pennington fell dead on the porch of A. B. Cotton's store. The probable cause of this sudden death was heart failure. Mr. Pennington was one of the best known and highly respected citizens of Macon and, it seems, was stricken down when little past the prime of life. The funeral was held at Macon yesterday forenoon conducted by Rev. DeSpelder.

Last week, as is often the case just prior to the lenten season, was a week of dances, entertainments and social events. Friday night was chosen as the date for the return party, and our society people had barely time to spare a night from the demands of a more private social nature to indulge in a good old hearty dance. The young men having the party in charge had spared no pains in decorating the hall or in preparing a bounteous supper and other accomodations for the entertainment of their guests. The music was furnished by Gray's orchestra, with Maj. Drumm, of Jackson, as caller, and both performed their parts with highest satisfaction. Sixty-three couples took part in the dance and enjoyed its pleasures till early breakfast time. Among these were several fro Tecumseh and Manchester. The return party was a success and did credit to the social enterprise of our sterner sex.

To turn from the perusal of John R. Musik's enchanting letter from Hawaii and look out upon the snowy, wind-blown picture of the last few days, is to wish for Aladdin's wonderful genii or some other means of rapid transit, to enable one to enjoy the delightful climate and lovely scenery so pleasingly portrayed by the renowned author and traveler.

Samuel Reed, who lives about three miles south-west of this place, went to the train to meet his wife on Saturday; as she was to return home from Addison on that day; but instead of meeting her he received a telegram announcing her death from heart disease, just as she was about to take the train on her return. It was a sad home coming to the desolate husband, who has the sympathy of all in his bereavement.

Dear Sir:—Thank God there is a medicine that will cure catarrh. Mr. Pretzinger, I used your sample box of catarrh which you sent me. The first night I used it it helped me. May God bless you for your kindness. I used the little box you sent me and about half of a 50c jar. They keep it in Chambersburg. I have told a great many people about your medicine. Hon. Squire Britton, brother-in-law to me, is using it; he says it is helping him very much; he has catarrh very bad. Mrs. G. D. Ludwig, daughter of me, is using your medicine. I use it in the evening before retiring to bed and am feeling better now than I have for the last five years. My head is clear and I have more energy for work and business. Before I used your medicine I felt many a time that I did not care whether I was living or dead; I had no energy; I did not care for anything. I had catarrh over sixty-seven years; mother had catarrh and it turned into consumption; she died in her sixty-fourth year. I have a farm up at Strasburg, seven miles from Greenvillage. On nice days I drive up to the farm and work. Mr. Pretzinger, I think it would pay you have it put in all the Franklin county papers as I am a reliable, honest man, so the people say, middling well acquainted over the county. Yours truly,

GEO. K. ZOLLINGER.

How They Are Forced to Sell Their Crops for Half Prices by the Money Combine—Free Silver Would Break It Back.

"Willett & Grey's statistical review places the consumption of sugar in the United States at 1,945,406 tons during the year 1895, against 2,012,729 tons in 1894. This means that the people bought less sugar by 67,323 tons in 1895 than in 1894. Yet the price of raw sugar averaged lower during 1895 than throughout any other year of which commercial history takes notice."

The above is from the Inter Ocean, and is made the basis of an argument in favor of protection, the idea being that the cheapness coming from free trade will not bring prosperity.

Whether the Inter Ocean is right or wrong upon that point, we shall not consider. The statement is reproduced for another purpose. In some cases cheapness may be a good thing, but when the cheapness is caused, not by superabundance of the commodity, but by a scarcity of money, it is an unmitigated evil so far as the masses of the people are concerned. Under such circumstances, to talk about the "consumer's" benefit is the very refinement of cruelty. The source of all human prosperity is industry, and the very basis is that particular industry which is applied to production. Without "production" no other business could live, and man himself would disappear from the face of the earth.

Production is the primary work of man, while everything else is secondary and subordinate.

The producer is also a consumer, but if he make anything more than a bare living he must sell more than he buys.

Take the case of a farmer. Suppose that of his crop he can sell $1,000 worth each year, while his expenses, including grocery bills, help on farm, doctor bills, taxes, etc., amount to $800. He saves $200. Now suppose that prices fall one-half all along the line. His crop for sale sinks to $500, his expenses to $400, and instead of being $200 ahead, he only has a balance of $100.

This, though, is upon the supposition that all things have fallen in the same ratio. But we know that all things do not cheapen uniformly. Taxes, for example, have not been reduced at all. On the contrary, in many cases, they have actually increased. Presidents, governors, congressmen, judges and local officers continue to draw their salaries as of yore, while those who pay the salaries sell the products of their labor for half price. Doctor's bills, lawyer's fees, traveling expenses and other things remain substantially the same.

The hired man stoutly resists (and properly) a cut in his wages, while the manufacturers, the middlemen, and the merchants by combinations do everything in their power to keep up retail rates. The great farm staples are usually sold at wholesale prices.

Bearing these facts in mind let us now make another calculation. Suppose his taxes, doctor bills, etc., amount to $100 of his total expense. These stand as before. Upon the remaining $700, which includes the hired man's pay, groceries, drugs, etc., we will suppose that there is a reduction of say 30 per cent. This represents a saving to him of $210, leaving his expenses on those lines $490. In the meantime his $1,000 has fallen to $500. The account now stands as follows:

Income.—(Crop for sale ..		$500.00
Expenses.—(Taxes, doctor's bills, etc.)	$100.00
Other expenses	490.00
Total expenses		590.00
Deficiency		$ 90.00

Instead of having a profit of $200, we find that he has suffered a loss of $90 on his year's work.

Now, suppose further, what is true in multitudes of cases, that the farmer is $1,000 in debt on his farm. Falling behind at the rate of $90 a year, how long will it take him to pay the debt?

The above figures are given not as representing strictly the exact ratio at which different prices have fallen, but for the purpose of emphasizing the fact that should be obvious to producers generally, that when the prices of their products fall, they do not realize a full compensation in the decline of other things.

Hence the conclusion, that a general fall in prices injures the producers more than it injures any other class. The very men who should be injured least are injured most. When a policy is pursued the tendency of which is to harm the producer, it strikes at the very foundations of national prosperity.

This was the inevitable effect of demonetizing silver, and the bulk of the complaints to which we have listened during the last twenty-two years has come from that class.

In the case given as an illustration, it stands to reason that if the farmer cannot reduce expenses in any other way, he will economize in consumption. He will use less of sugar and any other things that are not absolutely indispensable. If he cannot induce the hired man to accept a pro rata reduction of wages, he will either discharge him entirely, or lay him off part of the time. Thus the wage worker comes in for his share of the injury.

While the farmer will reduce his consumption of sugar, spices and the like, poor people dependent upon their daily toil must reduce on all lines. They will consume less bread.

Accordingly we find that in seasons of great business depression there is usually a reduced consumption of almost everything that contributes to the sustenance of man.

For example, in 1893, a very disastrous year in business, we consumed 62,000,000 bushels less wheat than in 1892. In 1894, which, as a whole, was even worse than in 1893, the consumption was nearly 102,000,000 bushels less than in the latter year.

Thus we see that the alleged overproduction so persistently brought forward by the gold people as an explanation of the falling prices is in fact under-consumption. With prices lower than ever before, the people have bought less, and consumed less. It has been simply because they have not had the money to buy with.

The idea that people can be made prosperous by making money scarce is preposterous, and the belief that silver can be displaced without making a scarcity of money, is equally so.

The bimetallic system existed in this country from 1793 to 1873 and our mints were open free to both gold and silver, and all over the world our silver was accepted at about $1.30 per ounce. But for the combined effort of the money loaners, the bond dealers and the gold syndicate who sought to make money dearer by establishing the gold standard, that would be the case today.—Cleveland Plaindealer.

Capital is always on the alert to find new and profitable fields for investment, neither are its owners slow to recognize the natural advantages of a locality. Hence it is not a matter of especial surprise that men of means have cast upon this village as a place for the safe investment of money and for the establishment of an industry which will likely prove to be of greater proportions than anything yet undertaken in this county. The scheme in question is nothing less than the building of large beet sugar mills and the founding of the extensive industry, not only for the village but for the country, which such an industry involves. Preliminary arrangements have already been perfected and a board of local directors established with Philip Strong at its head. Further particulars later.

LA GRIPPE REMAINS.

For Years in the System if Not Cured.

This country contains a large multitude of men and women who are debilitated and weak as the effect of la grippe. If every one would do as the Rev. Petty, of Virginia, did, this vast multitude of sufferers would son be well and strong again. He writes:

Last winter I had a very bad case of la grippe which left me enfeebled and liable to cold at the slightest exposure. I tried a number of remedies, but they afforded only temporary relief. I saw an advertisement of Pe-ru-na and concluded to try it. I have been using it for two months, and it has afforded me much relief. It is indeed a panacea to me. It has invigorated me more than anything I ever tried. I have recommended it to others and advised them to send for your pamphlets. I have written of it to distant friends. You can use this statement in any way you choose. REV. H. PETTY,

Baptist, Dry Fork, Va.

For further particulars and a multitude of witnesses write to the Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio, for a free copy of their illustrated treatise on la grippe. Pe-ru-na is also a sure cure for catarrh, cough, colds, bronchitis, first stage of consumption, and all climatic diseases of winter.

Centuries ago, people used to fear what they called the pestilence. "Black Death" was the most terrible thing in the world to them. They feared it as people now fear the cholera and yellow fever. And yet there is a thing that causes more misery and more deaths than any of these. It is so common that nine-tenths of all the sickness in the world is traceable to it It is merely that simple, common thing constipation. It makes people listless, causes dizziness, headaches, loss of appetite, loss of sleep, foul breath and distress after eating. The little help needed is furnished by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One pill is a gentle laxative and two a mild cathartic. Once used, always in favor. If you are careless enough to let an unscruptitious druggist sell you something on which he makes more money, it is your own fault if you do not get well. Be sure and get Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

We all know that any tired muscle can be restored by rest. Your stomach is a muscle Dyspepsia is its manner of saying "I am tired. Give me a rest." To rest the stomach you must do its work outside of the body. This is the Shaker's method of curing indigestion, and its success is best attested by the fact that those people are practically free from what is without doubt the most prevalent of all diseases. The Shaker Digestive Cordial not only contains digested food which is promptly absorbed without taxing the tired digestive organs, but it is likewise an aid to the digestion of other foods in the stomach A ten cent trial bottle will convince you of its merit, and these you can obtain through all druggists.

From LaGrippe.

NO DISEASE has ever presented so many peculiarities as LaGrippe. No disease leaves its victims so debilitated, useless, sleepless, nerveless, as LaGrippe.

Mr. D. W. Hilton, state agent of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Kentucky, says: "In 1889 and '90 I had two severe attacks of LaGrippe, the last one attacking my nervous system with such severity that my life was despaired of. I had not slept for more than two months except by the use of narcotics that stupefied me, but gave me no rest. I was only conscious of intense mental weakness, agonizing bodily pain and the fact that I was hourly growing weaker.

When in this condition, I commenced using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. In two days I began to improve and in one month's time I was cured, much to the surprise of all who knew of my condition. I have been in excellent health since and have recommended your remedies to many of my friends."

SNATCHED FROM THE GRAVE. A Warning from the Living. "At 13 I learned a bad habit. Tried four doctors and nerve tonics by the score without benefit; emissions and drains increased. I became a nervous wreck. A friend who had been cured by Drs. Kennedy & Kergan of a similar disease, advised me to try them. I did so and in two months was positively cured. This was eight years ago. I am now married and have two healthy children."—C. W. LEWIS, Saginaw.

VARICOCELE CURED. "Varicocele made life miserable. I was weak and nervous, eyes sunken, bashful in society, hair thin, no ambition. The 'Golden Monitor' opened my eyes. The New Method Treatment of Drs. Kennedy and Kergan cured me in a few weeks.—I. L. PETERSON, Ionia.

EMISSIONS CURED. J. P. EMERSON relates his experience. "I lived on a farm. At school I learned an early habit, which weakened me physically, sexually and mentally. Family doctors said I was going into 'decline' (consumption.). Finally 'The Golden Monitor,' edited by Drs. Kennedy & Kergan, fell into my hands. I learned the TRUTH and the CAUSE. Self-abuse had sapped my vitality. I took the New Method Treatment and was cured. My friends think I was cured of consumption. I have sent them many patients, all of whom were cured. Their New Method Treatment supplies vigor, vitality and manhood."

SYPHILIS CURED. "This terrible blood disease was in my system for eight years. Had taken mercury for two years, but the disease returned. Eyes red, pimples and blotches on the skin, ulcers in the mouth and on tongue, bone pains, falling out of hair, weakness, etc. My brother, who had been cured of Gleet and Stricture by Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, recommended them. They cured me in a few weeks, and I thank God I consulted them. No return of the disease in six years."—W. P. M., Jackson.

Articles of association have been filed for a new State Savings Bank at Jackson with a capital of $100,000.

About forty operatives are required for the steam shovel now operating on the south end of the Jackson extension of the C. J. & M.

Last Saturday, Mrs. Rhoda Reed when returning to her home in Onsted from Addison, jumped from the train and was killed. It is supposed that she boarded the wrong train and attempted to get off.

Base ball subscriptions to support a league team in Adrian amount to over $800 and Adrian will be in it. Manager Todd, of Jackson, also claims that the central city will also be in the organization. Kalamazoo will stay out.

Fifty (50) lawyers attended the recent Washtenaw bar banquet at Ann Arbor. It seems that the tramp nuisance is yet in full flower at Ann Arbor. Let the marshal make a "brief" "record" of it. Some of the gang are said to be like necessity—they knew no law.—Monroe Democrat.

Arrangements for the Michigan club banquet Friday night at Detroit Auditorium are well advanced, and the demand for tickets throughout the state has been so large there is no question as to a successful outcome of the feast. The list of speakers is one of the best in the history of the club. Senator Burrows is to act as toast master. Gov. Rich will deliver the address of welcome.

Lamb & Bales, of Clayton, have perfected a machine which makes tooth picks. It commences on a log, cuts out the picks, planes, rounds, sharpens both ends, counts and packs them in boxes. Now if this automaton would only pick your teeth from the inside, while your mouth was closed, so as not to interfere with the digestion of the others at the table, the inventors could say "eureka."

The Adrian Times tells how people near Hudson took advantage of a sick woman as follows: "Asaph Pierce, a wealthy farmer, died near Hudson last week. His neighbors, knowing he had money and valuables, concealed around the farm, persuaded his wife, who is very sick, to reveal the hiding place. Following her directions they found over $1,000 in gold and securities stored away in chests, trunks and bureaus and in out-of-the-way places around the farm."

The old players whom the new Adrian ball team will include will probably be Elmer Smith and Lentz. Long, Owosso's former pitcher, and White, who twirled for Kalamazoo the latter part of last season, may be secured, but no player will be signed until a manager is appointed. This manager must also be a good ball player. John Wagner, the crack second baseman, has signed with Wheeling, W. Va., Justice goes with the Patterson, N. J., team, while Billy Smith and Ireland will go west and join the Tacoma team.—Adrian Times.

The Monroe Democrat thus describes the rise of the devil: "Nearly seven years ago, a diminutive-sized 'kid' who had been selling newspapers about the city, but had an ambition to become a printer, was afforded an opportunity in the Democrat office. He soon mastered the art of sweeping out the office, graduated in lye mixing and form washing, became an expert in the detection of 'type-lice' and tackled the metallic alphabet, with such success that in the rapid course of progress he became a job printer and all-round mechanical functionary. Though not yet twenty-one years of age, Charles Harmann is one of the most capable men of his calling, and on Tuesday he went out from us to accept a tempting offer from Ibey & Co., an extensive job printing firm in Detroit. The benediction of the Democrat and the good will of its garrison go with 'Charlie' to his new field. His employers will find him both 'a gentleman and a scholar.'"

OBITUARY.

Elijah King was born in England, January 3, 1819, and died in Tecumseh, Michigan, February 12, 1896. He was married to Miss Harriet Burtenshaw, May 15, 1843. He came to this country in 1849 and settled in Ohio. One year later he removed to Adrian, Mich., where he remained two years. He then purchased a tract of unimproved land in Palmyra and settled on it and, by earnest industry, made of it a valuable farm. His first wife died March 27, 1863, leaving him with six small children, all of whom are still living—Samuel E., of Canandaigua; David, of Palmyra; Eli J., of Fairfield; Mrs. Sarah A. Drake, of Ogden; Mrs. Emily Mack, of New York, and Mrs. Rose Purcell, of Newaygo. August 9, 1868, he married Miss Henrietta Dodd. He was to her a kind and devoted husband until his death. In 1879 he left his farm and settled in Tecumseh, where he has left a very comfortable home for his widow who lives to mourn his loss. At the early age of seventeen years he became a christian and a member of the Methodist church. All who knew him respected him for the consistent christian life which he lived. He will be missed in the church of his choice.

Sweet Violets.

Violets have returned to favor earlier than ever this year, and promises to be a furor. Entire bonnets are seen of them with just a tiny border of fur; and large velvet hats have the brims entirely covered with these dainty blossoms. A purple velvet toque of unusual size, being really a sort of softly folded turban, has a wreath of violets, closely set, which encircles the hair, and above the right face is vastly becoming. Every shade of violet is much worn in accessories, and divides favor with turquois blue and geranium pink.—From Review of Fashions, in Demorest's Magazine for January.

THE HERALD FOR 1896.

Special Offers and Clubbing List.

The large numbers of maps which are being taken by our subscribers prove that they are all right and are a bargain for the price. We still continue these offers, and append our club list for reference. If you have not yet made out your list of papers for 1896, consult this list.

NUMBER ONE.

Everyone knows something about the great map publishing firm of Rand, McNally & Co. Their atlases and wall maps have gained a world-wide reputation. Their new state map of Michigan is the best one ever issued. It is 41 by 58 inches in size, full mounted with rollers, showing all organized townships, beautifully colored, and sells for $2.00. The former price was $3.00. This map can be furnished at the remarkably low price of $1.40, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included.

NUMBER TWO.

Have you seen Rand McNally & Co.'s large reversible map, with the world on one side and the United States on the reverse? This is the largest map of the United States ever printed on one piece of paper. The map of the world is on Mercator's projection and gives a brief history of every country with population of chief cities, areas, voyages of discoveries etc. This map is especially suited for school use and is just the thing for ready reference in these times of international disputes. This $5.00 map and the Herald for $2.00.

THE DETROIT TRIBUNE.

The Detroit Tribune has long been recognized as one of the greatest newspapers of the Republican party, not only in this state but throughout the west. Although the Tribune has long enjoyed this distinction, it is safe to say that within the last two years its management has greatly raised the standard of the publication as a political, literary, and general newspaper. The Tribune should be read in every household of Michigan. We have made a special arrangement with the management whereby we can furnish the weekly Tribune and HERALD one year for the normal figure of $1.30.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.

The Cosmopolitan is almost too well known to need particular mention. It is simply a marvel that a magazine of such merit can be furnished for the money. A new lithographing press has recently been added to their machinery which will make the paper more attractive than ever. For 1896, 1344 pages and 1000 illustrations for 85 cents if taken with the Herald.

M'CLURE'S MAGAZINE.

McClure's is now one of the most popular magazines in the world. Its circulation and advertising patronage are a guarantee of its worth. Its famous articles on Lincoln is the chief feature for 1896. McClure's and the Herald for $1.85.

Your Boy Won't Live a Month.

So Mr. Gilman Brown, of 34 Mill St., South Gardener, Mass., was told by the doctors. His son had Lung trouble, following Typhoid Malaria, and he spent three hundred and seventy-five dollars with doctors, who finally gave him up, saying: "Your boy won't live a month." He tried Dr. King's New Discovery and a few bottles restored him to health and enabled him to go to work a perfectly well man. He says he owes his present good health to the use of Dr. King's New Discovery, and knows it to be the best in the world for Lung trouble. Trial Bottles Free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store. 4

Senator Allen, of Neb., declared in a speech this week that two of the most gigantically useless institutions in the country were the Civil Service Commission and Inter-State Commerce Commission; that the latter was as powerful as an infant to carry out its judgements and findings, and that whenever a member of the former developed the slightest amount of backbone or independence he heard a voice from the White House announcing a vacancy in the Civil Service Commission.

The same number will contain an interesting letter from Walter Besant on the subject of encouraging the friendly relations between English people and American visitors in England; a timely article on a "Winter Campaign in the Russian Army," fully illustrated; a spirited marine double-page illustration by R. F. Zogbaum, entitled "Fire Quarters in Action;" a striking front-page drawing, by T. de Thurlstrup, of a Cuban cavalry charge, etc., etc.

Mrs. Mary Jane Kellogg expired at the home of B. L. Baxter Wednesday morning about half past five o'clock. Mrs. Kellogg was only confined to her bed one day from the effects of a cold and her demise seemed rather to be a gradual and natural giving out of life than from effects of any particular disease. The deceased was 78 years of age. She was a sister of B. L. Baxter and Mrs. Selfridge and had made her home with them at the former's residence for the past two winters. A short service was held at the house here by Rev. C. M. Brown yesterday forenoon and the remains taken to Jackson on the noon train where the funeral will be held Saturday morning.

The Outlook "Magazine Numbers" continue to improve in quality. The February issue is strong in illustration, and has variety and timeliness in its articles. Stone (twenty-five illustrations); "The Salvation Army"—made timely by the recent removal of Mr. and Mrs. Ballington Booth from the American leadership (seven illustrations); "Recollections of My Boyhood," by John Burroughs (with seven charming pictures in half-tone); "Kate Carnegie" (Ian Maclaren's new novel, third installment); "From Atlanta to the Sea" (with seven illustrations); and "How Christ Would Deal with the Labor War," by Lyman Abbott. There are sixty-eight pages and nearly fifty illustrations. ($3 a year. The Outlook Company, 13 Astor Place, New York.)

The ladies of the Eastern Star held a very enjoyable and successful Valentine and box social in the Masonic temple last Friday evening. The boxes were well filled and every man seemed to be hungry. A prominent milk man ate three boxes, and he wasn't the only one, either, for the man who shoes his horses was even, if not ahead, at the finish. The exhibition of Trilby feet and the music, both instrumental, and vocal were features of the occasion.

Several young gentlemen from Tecumseh were fortunate enough to attend the leap year party given at Manchester last Monday. The party was a very enjoyable affair and the boys are loud in their praise of the gallantry of the Manchester ladies. However the new manager of the hotel there seems to have it in for visitors. He probably goes on the plan that a sensible person wouldn't stop at his place but once any way; and so fleeces them the first time.

The following is taken from the Pantagraph, published at Bloomington Ill. The deceased will be remembered by old residents of Tecumseh. "Ralph T. Stocking died at his rooms, 409 East Front street, at 1 a. m. Saturday. He was 67 years old, and had no relatives in this section. Death resulted from asthma, with which he had been afflicted for many years. He served through the war of the rebellion in a light artillery battery from Michigan. The members of the local Grand Army post had cared for him and some time ago secured his admission to the Soldier's Home at Quincy. He desired to return here to die, and came back several weeks ago. The funeral services were held from the rooms of Carlton & Beck at 2 p. m. yesterday, Rev. H. O. Hoffman officiating, and many old soldiers being in attendance."

Wall & Bigelow's Dramatic Co. played a three nights' engagement here the first of the week. The people have learned not to expect much of the troups which are ordinarily secured to play here, but they must have something for their ten cents. Perhaps it was part of the play, "In the Streets of New York," that the audience room was about the same temperature as the streets outside. This would doubtless have been appreciated had the play been intensely interesting. But critics would say it was a little heavy for the company. Now it isn't so bad, when a troup has a heavier play than they can handle. If the house is dimly lighted and warm so the weary audience can take a comfortable snooze. A good nap is worth 10c. The company did very well the next two nights but they weren't appreciated. They play in Hudson the rest of the week, and we sincerely wish them all they deserve, for they are sadly in need of it, and, beside, we are slightly interested.

Joseph Wooden, who has lived at Battle Creek for the past several years, and whose ill health for the past year has been a cause of concern among his many Tecumseh friends, died the first of the week. The remains were brought here on the C., J. & M. today and the funeral was held at noon at the Universalist church, Rev. E. C. Andrus officiating. The deceased was a resident and active business man of Tecumseh for many years and is remembered with much kindness and respect by our citizens. He was a member of Tecumseh Lodge, No. 69, F. & A. M., and the members attended the obseques in a body and officiated at the grave.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, then laxatives or other remedies are not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, then one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

LUCK OF A MICHIGAN BOY.

Battle Creek, Feb. 19.—Seventeen years ago a poor farmer boy, Hector Holbert, left the township of Bedford, north of this city, to seek his fortune in the far west. He started in as a prospector for gold, and had ever since kept up the search, with the usual changes of fortune incident to the life of a gold hunter. He had his ups and downs. But last year his lucky day came. He discovered a big paying mine in Arizona. Last week he sold his interest for $200,000. Tuesday he sent his mother, Mrs. A. E. Pulling, of Bedford village, several thousand dollars. He also remembered his uncle, Irving Armstrong, and several other relatives and old-time friends. The usual quietude of country life has been greatly changed to one of excitement in that township, and the whole country is now talking about Hector Holbert and his good luck.

Y. M. C. A.

Kalamazoo, Feb. 17.—The 24th annual state convention of the Y. M. C. A. will be held here on February 27 to March 1. Of the 36 associations of the state about 300 delegates will represent 8,200 members. One of the special features of the convention will be a phonographic address by Hon. John Wanamaker, entitled "A Greeting to Young Men." Mr. Wanamaker delivered the address into a cylinder several weeks ago, and at the time it is given here Mr. Wanamaker will be in Jerusalem. Rev. P. S. Henson, of Chicago, the pastor of the First Baptist church, will speak on "The Way to Win." Addresses on various topics will also be delivered by Prof. Graham Taylor, D. D., of the Chicago Theological society; Gilbert A. Beaver, of Pennsylvania; General Secretary L. E. Wilbur Messer, and Fred S. Goodman, secretary of the New York state association.

PAY FOR TIMBER FIRST.

New Terms Made on Michigan Agricultural College Lands.

Lansing, Feb. 17.—The Agricultural college lands in Antrim, Missaukee, Otsego, Charlevoix, Kalkaska and Cheboygan counties, which will be restored to market February 28, will be offered on different terms than heretofore. The small cash payment required in previous years was an inducement for purchasers to strip the lands of their valuable timber and let them revert to the state. To obviate this the payment of one-fourth of the purchase price will be required at the time of sale on lands not especially valuable for timber, while all timber lands must wholly be paid for before any timber is cut from them.

NOTED POLITICIAN DEAD.

Hon. Fred S. Clark Passes Away at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Feb. 17.—Fred S. Clark, for six years clerk of Kent county and a long-recognized factor in district and county republican politics, died Saturday of Bright's disease, aged 48 years. He was chairman of the congressional committee in 1887, and it was acknowledged that more than to any other it was due to his exertions that the republicans won. Before he died Clark named six of his old political associates to be his pall-bearers, and arranged the details for his funeral. His widow and one child survive him.

Benton Harbor Firemen Quit.

Benton Harbor, Feb. 19.—The firemen and the city are at outs, and the members of two of the companies have withdrawn and will not return unless their demands are conceded by the council. The firemen recently asked the city to purchase an expensive hook and ladder truck and the city refused to do it on account of lack of funds. The city is now almost without fire protection. The firemen also demand higher wages.

DEATH IN A MINE.

Four Are Killed and Four Others Are Injured at Republic.

Republic, Mich., Feb. 17.—The most distressing accident that has ever occurred here took place Saturday morning at No. 1 pit, Republic mine. After finishing their night's work 11 miners got into the skip to ride to the surface. The skip jumped the track on an incline less than 60 feet from the bottom, and as the occupants had no means of signaling the engineer to stop hoisting the skip it was pulled along until it was caught and overturned. The men were caught between the heavy iron skip and the rough sides of the shaft and were terribly crushed.

Four of them were instantly killed, one was fatally injured, three were less seriously hurt and the remaining three escaped with slight bruises.

The dead are: Adolph Bartel, married; James Dodge, married; William McGrath, single; Matthias Tegelberg married. The most seriously injured are: Charles Anderson, three ribs broken; Eric Marti, leg broken; James McGrath, back hurt; Andrew Petersor, hurt internally, recovery doubtful. All of the victims were old residents of Republic.

NARROW ESCAPES.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 18.—The old Houseman block at the corner of Pearl and Ottawa streets, was gutted by fire, and many persons living on the upper floors had narrow escapes several of them being seriously injured. In the block was the office of the Grand Rapids Democrat, and the United States Express company and National express company had offices in the block. The fire started from an exploding lamp in a room on the third floor. Mr. E. L. Wedgewood and his wife were seriously burned and cut, and Mrs. Wedgewood is in a critical condition. Mrs Raymond and her son, aged 15 years, were also badly burned. Fireman Ed Galloway, of engine company No. 4, was overcome by cold and is in a serious condition. The damage to the block will reach $30,000, which is covered by insurance. The loss to tenants will foot up $20,000, which is also covered by insurance.

PROPOSED PINE POOL FAILS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 15.—The proposed pool of white pine men, by which it was hoped to bring about a curtailment of the cut, is now said to be impossible owing to the refusal of the Menominee manufacturers to cooperate. The latter felt that they were sure of a market for their entire cut anyway, and saw no advantage in curtailment. The Saginaw and Bay City mills felt the same way, and accordingly Duluth and Ashland have refused to come in. Thus the whole plan is impracticable.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

Look after the Back: A Fall, a Strain, a Constant Sitting or Stooping Position Brings Backache—Do You Know This Means the Kidneys are Affected?

How few people realize when their back begins to ache that it is a warning provided by nature to tell you that the kidneys are not working properly. You have a severe fall, you strain yourself lifting or perhaps you are compelled to maintain a sitting or stooping position for long intervals at a time, your back begins to ache, then your head, you become listless, tired and weary, but do you understand the real cause? We think not, else you would not use plasters and liniment on the back, which only relieve but do not reach the cause. If you would rid yourself of the pain and cure the root of the trouble, at the same time save many years of suffering and perhaps life itself, you will take a kidney remedy that has been tried and proven that it will cure.

Mr. John Robsoin of 661 Russell Street, Detroit, says: "As a result of exposure during the war I have suffered ever since with rheumatism and kidney trouble. Pains would start in my hip and go around to my back. Highly colored urine denoted kidney disorder. The pain in my back was often so bad I had to give up work until the severity of the attack passed away. I have used many liniments and other things, but received very little relief. Some time ago I started using Doan's Kidney Pills and they have worked a wonderful change in me. My back is all right now and I owe it all to the almost magical influence of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Mr. Robsoin was a member of the Fifty-first Illinois Regiment, which served through the war with honor and distinction. Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers—price, 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no other.

Georgia farmers are afraid of the peach crop. The recent warm weather swelled the buds on the trees and some are almost about to bloom. A frost would destroy the buds and ruin the prospects of a good crop.

Not Up to the Mark—the imitations of Pearline. Not surprising that so great a household help should be so largely imitated; not surprising that these imitations fail; and not surprising that they make still more popular the article on which the fraud is attempted. The merits of Pearline alone make its sales increase, and the claims of peddlers and unscrupulous grocers that they have "the same as" or "as good as" Pearline—have placed Pearline on the top notch.

AYER'S PILLS

"I would like to add my testimony to that of others who have used Ayer's Pills, and to say that I have taken them for many years, and always derived the best results from their use. For stomach and liver troubles, and for the cure of headache caused by these derangements, Ayer's Pills cannot be equaled.

When my friends ask me what is the best remedy for disorders of the stomach, liver, or bowels, my invariable answer is, Ayer's Pills. Taken in season, they will break up a cold, prevent la grippe, check fever, and regulate the digestive organs. They are easy to take, and are, indeed, the best all-round family medicine I have ever known."—Mrs. May Johnson, 368 Rider Avenue, New York City.

A mirror could not lie if it wanted to. The glass has nothing to gain by flattery. If the roses of health and plumpness of beauty are leaving your face, your mirror will tell you so. You can see for yourself you are in danger of losing the admiration which is every woman's due. You may not really realize it, but health is the greatest beautifier in the world. Lotions, plasters, creams and cosmetics cannot make as good a complexion as health can. They cannot hide the story of ill-health. They merely emphasize it. Health shows in clearness of eyes and skin, in redness of lips and vivacity of manner and expression. Disease is proved positively by the absence of these things. When a woman sees the indications of ill-health in the face, she may with almost absolute certainty look for the cause in one or both of two conditions—constipation, and derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. These things in themselves are in some degree related, and nine-tenths of all the sickness of women come from them. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure permanently and positively any so-called "female complaint." Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will cure constipation. There is no reason in the world why a woman should not be perfectly healthy. It rests with herself. If she will take these truly wonderful remedies, and follow a few hygienic measures, she may become perfectly strong and healthy in all ways. She will gain in health, strength and flesh. Hollows and angles will give place to fullness and grace. She will be that noblest and most beautiful of all creation—a perfect woman. All druggists sell Dr. Pierce's medicines, but if you care to know more about them and to know all of the grandest medical truths, send 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, and a complete copy of Dr. Pierce's 1008 page book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" will be sent post-paid. It is a veritable medical library, complete in one volume. Several finely illustrated chapters are devoted to the consideration of diseases of women and their successful home-treatment. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Kind of Sickles to be Used in Reaping the Spiritual Harvest—The Gospel the Most Po-

The sword has been poetized and the world has celebrated the sword of Bolivar, the sword of Cortez, and the sword of Lafayette. The pen has been properly eulogized, and the world has celebrated the pen of Addison, the pen of Southey, and the pen of Irving. The painters' pencil has been honored, and the world has celebrated the pencil of Murillo, the pencil of Rubens, and the pencil of Bierstadt. The sculptor's chisel has come in for high encomium, and the world has celebrated Chantrey's chisel, and Crawford's chisel, and Greenough's chisel. But there is one instrument about which I sing the first canto that was ever sung—the sickle, the sickle of the Bible, the sickle that has reaped the harvest of many centuries. Sharp, and bent into a semi-circle, and glittering, this reaping-hook, no longer than your arm, has furnished the bread for thousands of years. Its success has produced the wealth of nations. It has had more to do with the world's progress than sword, and pen, and pencil, and chisel, all put together. Christ puts the sickle into the exquisite sermonic simile, and you see that instrument flash up and down the Apocalypse as St. John swings it, while through Joel in my text God commands the people, as through His servants now He commands them—"Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe."

Last November there was great rejoicing all over the land. With trumpet and cornet and organ and thousand-voiced psalm we praised the Lord for the temporal harvest. We praised God for the wheat, the rye, the oats, the cotton, the rice, all the fruits of the orchard and all the grains of the field; and the nation never does a better thing than when in the autumn it gathers to festivity and thanks God for the greatness of the harvest. But I come to-day to speak to you of richer harvests, even the spiritual. How shall we estimate the value of a man? We say he is worth so many dollars, or he has achieved such and such a position; but we know very well there are some men at the top of the ladder who ought to be at the bottom, and some at the bottom who ought to be at the top, and the only way to estimate a man is by his soul. We all know that we shall live forever. Death can not kill us. Other crafts may be drawn into the whirlpool or shivered on the rocks, but this life within us will weather all storms and drop no anchor, and 10,000,000 years after death will shake out signals on the high seas of eternity. You put the mendicant off your doorstep and say he is only a beggar; but he is worth all the gold of the mountains; worth all the pearls of the sea, worth the solid earth, worth sun and moon and stars, worth the entire material universe. Take all the paper that ever came from the paper mills, and put it side by side and sheet by sheet, and let men with fleetest pens make figures on that paper for 10,000 years, and they will only have begun to express the value of the soul. Suppose I owned Colorado and Nevada and Australia, of how much value would they be to me one moment after I departed this life? How much of Philadelphia does Stephen Girard own to-day? How much of Boston property does Abbott Lawrence own to-day? The man who to-day hath a dollar in his pocket hath more worldly estate than the millionaire who died last year. How do you suppose I feel, standing here surrounded by a multitude of souls each one worth more than the material universe? Oh, was I not right in saying, this spiritual harvest is richer than the temporal harvest? I must tighten the girdle, I must sharpen the sickle. I must be careful how I swing the instrument for gathering the grain, lest one stalk be lost.

One of the most powerful sickles for reaping this spiritual harvest is the preaching of the Gospel. If the sickle have a rosewood handle, and it be adorned with precious stones, and yet it can not bring down the grain, it is not much of a sickle, and the preaching amounts to nothing unless it harvests souls for God. Shall we preach philosophy? The Ralph Waldo Emersons could beat us at that. Shall we preach science? The Agassizes could beat us at that. The minister of Jesus Christ with weakest arm going forth in earnest prayer, and wielding this sickle of the Gospel, shall find the harvest all around him waiting for the angel sheaf binders. Oh, this harvest of souls! I notice in the fields that the farmer did not stand upright when he gathered the grain. I noticed he had to stoop to his work, and I noticed in order to bind the sheaves the better he had to put his knee upon them. And as we go forth in this work for God we can not stand upright in our rhetoric, and our metaphysics, and our erudition. We have to stoop to our work. Ay, we have to put our knee on it or we will never gather sheaves for the Lord's garner. Peter swung that sickle on the day of Pentecost, and 3,000 sheaves came in. Richard Baxter swung that sickle at Kidderminster, and McCheyne at Dundee, and vast multitudes came into the kingdom of God.

Oh, this is a mighty Gospel! It captured not only John the lamb, but Paul the lion. Men may gnash their teeth at it, and clinch their fists, but it is the power of God and the wisdom of God unto salvation. But, alas, if it is only preached in pulpits and on Sabbath days! We must go forth into our stores, our shops, our banking houses, our factories, and the streets, and everywhere preach Christ. We stand in our pulpits for two hours on the Sabbath and commend Christ to the people; but there are 168 hours in the week, and what are the two hours on the Sabbath against the 166? Oh, there comes down the ordination of God this day upon all the people, men who toil with head and hand and foot—the ordination comes upon all merchants, upon all mechanics, upon all toilers, and God says to you as He says to me: "Go, teach all nations. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." Mighty Gospel, let the whole earth hear it! The story of Christ is to regenerate the nations, it is to eradicate all wrong, it is to turn the earth into a paradise. An old artist painted the Lord's Supper, and he wanted the chief attention directed to the face of Christ. When he invited his friends in to criticise the picture, they admired the chalices more than they did the face, and the old artist said: "This picture is a failure," and he dashed out the picture of the cups and said: "I shall have nothing to detract from the face of the Lord; Christ is the all of this picture."

Another powerful sickle for the reaping of this harvest is Christian song. I know in many churches the whole work is delegated to a few people standing in the organ loft. But, my friends, as others can not repent for us and others can not die for us, we can not delegate to others the work of singing for us. While a few drilled artists shall take the chants and execute the more skillful music, when the hymn is given out let there be hundreds and thousands of voices uniting in the acclamatia. On the way to grandeurs that never cease and glories that neve die, let us sing. At the battle of Lutzen, a general came to the king and said: "Those soldiers are singing as they are going into battle. Shall I stop them?" "No," said the king, men that can sing light that can fight." Oh, the power of Christian song! When I argue here you may argue back. The argument you make against religion may be more skillful than the argument I make in behalf of religion. But who can stand before pathos of some uplifted song like that which we sometimes sing:

Show pity, Lord, O Lord, forgive!
Let a repenting rebel live!
Are not Thy mercies large and free?
May not a sinner trust in Thee?

Another mighty sickle for the reaping of the Gospel harvest is prayer. What does God do with our prayers? Does He go on the battlements of Heaven and throw them off? No. What do you do with gifts given you by those who love you very much? You keep them with great sacredness. And do you suppose God will take our prayers, offered in the sincerity and love of our hearts, and scatter them to the winds? Oh, no! He will answer them all in some way. Oh, what a mighty thing prayer is! It is not a long rigmarole of "ohs," and "ahs," and "for ever and ever, Amens." It is a breathing of the heart into the heart of God. Oh, what a mighty thing prayer is! Elijah with it reached up to the clouds and shook down the showers. With it John Knox shook Scotland. With it Martin Luther shook the earth. And when Philip Melanchton lay sick unto death, as many supposed, Martin Luther came in and said: "Philip, we can't spare you!" "Oh," said he, "Martin, you must let me go; I am tired of persecution and tired of life. I want to go to be with my God." "No," said Martin Luther, "you shall not go, you must take this food and then I will pray for you." "No, Martin," said Melanchthon, "you must let me go." Martin Luther said: "You take this food, or I will excommunicate you." He took the food and Martin Luther knelt down and prayed as only he could pray, and convalescence came and Martin Luther went back and said to his friends: "God has saved the life of Philip Melanchthon in direct answer to my prayer." Oh, the power of prayer. Have you tested it?

Dr. Prime, of New York, in his beautiful book, entitled "Around the World," described a mausoleum in India which it took 20,000 men 22 years to build—that and the buildings surrounding—and he says: "Standing in that mausoleum and uttering a word, it is echoed back from a height of 150 feet, not an ordinary echo, but a prolonged music, as though there were angels hovering in the air." And every word of earnest prayer we utter has an echo, not from the marble cupola of an earthly mausoleum, but from the heart of God and from the wings of angels as they hover, crying: "Behold, he prays!" Oh, test it! Mighty sickle for reaping this Gospel harvest, the sickle of prayer!

"Oh," says some man, "I have been going on the wrong road for 30, 40 or 50 years. I have gone through the whole catalogue of crime, and must first get myself fixed up." Ah, you will never get yourself fixed up until Christ takes you in charge. You get worse and worse until He comes to the rescue. "Not the righteous; sinners, Jesus came to all." So, you see, I take the very worst case there is. If there is a man here who feels he is all right in heart and life, I am not talking to him, for he is probably a hypocrite. I will talk to him some other time. But if there is a man who feels himself all wrong, to him I address myself. Though you be wounded in the hands and wounded in the feet and wounded in the head and wounded in the heart, and though the gangrene of eternal death be upon you, one drop of the elixir of divine life will cure your soul. Though you be soaked in evil indulgences, though your feet have gone in unclean places, though you have companioned with the abandoned and the lost, one touch of Divine grace will save your soul.

I do not say that you will not have struggles after that. Oh, no! But they will be a different kind of struggle. You go into that battle and all hell is against you and you are alone, and you fight and you fight, weaker and weaker and weaker, until at last you fall and the powers of darkness trample on your soul. But in the other case you go into the battle and you fight stronger and stronger and stronger, until the evil propensity goes down and you get the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Oh, come out of your sins? Have you not been bruised with sin long enough? Have you not carried that load long enough? Have you not fought that battle long enough?

I rattle the gates of your sepulchre to-day. I take the trumpet of the Gospel and blow the long, loud blast. Roland went into battle. Charlemagne's army had been driven back by the three armies of the Saracens, and Roland, in almost despair, took up the trumpet and blew three blasts in one of the mountain passes, and under the power of those three blasts the Saracens recoiled and fled in terror. But history says that when he had blown the third blast Roland's trumpet broke.

I take this trumpet of the Gospel and blow the first blast, "Whosoever will." I blow the second blast, "Seek ye the Lord while He may be found." I blow the third blast. "Now is the accepted time." But the trumpet does not break. It was handed down by our forefathers to us, and we will hand it down to our children, that after we are dead they may blow the trumpet, telling the world that we have a pardoning God, a loving God, a sympathetic God, and more to Him than the throne on which He sits is the joy of seeing a prodigal put his finger on the latch of his Father's house.

I invite any one the most infidel, any one the most atheistic. I invite him into the kingdom of God with just as much heartiness as those who have for 50 years been under the teaching of the Gospel and believed it all. When I was living in Philadelphia a gentleman told me of a scene in which he was a participant. In Callowhill street, in Philadelphia, there had been a powerful meeting going on for some time, and many were converted, and among others one of the prominent members of the worst clubhouse in that city. The next night the leader of that club-house, the president of it, resolved that he would endeavor to get his comrade away. He came to the door, and before he entered he heard a Christian song, and under its power his soul was agitated. He went in and asked for prayer. Before he came out he was a subject of conquering mercy. The next night another comrade went to reclaim the two who had been lost to their sinful circle. He went, and under the power of the Holy Ghost became a changed man, and the work went on until they were all saved and the infamous club-house disbanded. Oh, it is a mighty Gospel! Though you came here a child of sin you can go away a child of grace, you can go away singing:

Amazing grace, how sweet the sound

Oh, give up your sins! Most of your life is already gone. Your children are going on the same wrong road. Why do you not stop? "This day is salvation come to thy house." Why not this moment look up into the face of Christ and say:

Just as I am, without one plea
But that Thy Blood was shed for me:
And that Thou bid'st me come to Thee,
O Lamb of God, I come, I come

God is going to save you. You are going to be among the shining ones. After the toils of life are over, you are going up to the everlasting rest, you are going up to join your loved ones, departed parents and departed children. "O, my God," says some man, "how can I come to Thee? I am so far off. Who will help me, I am so weak? It seems such a great undertaking." Oh, my brother, it is a great undertaking! It is so great you can not accomplish it, but Christ can do the work. He will correct your heart, and He will correct your life. "Oh," you say, "I will stop profanity. That will not save you. "Oh," you say, "I will stop Sabbath-breaking." That will not save you. There is only one door into the Kingdom of God, and that is faith; only one ship that sails for Heaven, and that is faith. Faith the first step, the second step, the hundredth step, the thousandth step, the last step. By faith we enter the Kingdom. By faith we keep it. In faith we die. Heaven a reward of faith. The earthquake shook down the Philippian dungeon. The jailor said: "What shall I do?" Some of you would say: "Better get out of the place before the walls crush you." What did the apostle say? "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." "Ah," you say, "there's the rub." What is faith? Suppose you were thirsty and I offered you this glass of water, and you believed I meant to give it to you, and you came up and took it. You exercise faith. You believe I mean to keep my promise. Christ offers you the water of everlasting life. You take it. That is faith.

Enter into the kingdom of God. Enter now. The door of life is set wide open. I plead with you by the bloody sweat of Gethsemane and the death-groan of Golgatha, by cross and crown, by Pilate's court room and Joseph's sepulcher, by harps and chains, by kingdoms of light and realms of darkness, by the trumpet of the archangel that shall wake the dead, and by the throne of the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb, that you attend now to the things of eternity. Oh, what a sad thing it will be if, having come so near Heaven, we miss it! Oh, to have come within sight of the shining pinnacles of the city and not have entered. Oh, to have been so near we have seen the mighty throng enter and we not joining them! Angels of God, fly this way! Good news for you, tell the story among the redeemed on high! If there be one there especially longing for your salvation, let that one know it now. We put down our sorrows. Glory be to God for such a hope, for such a pardon, for such a joy, for such a Heaven, for such a Christ!

THE NOTARY'S BRIDE.

It would be hard to enumerate all the services rendered Durrieux by his friend Levignard. It may be that Durrieux realized them, but Levignard never once suspected, for the reason that when Durrieux used his friend, he neglected to tell him of it.

Durrieux lived at Robigny with his wife and her niece. When he went to Paris he stoutly declared his intention to return home the same evening, but oftener it was the next day. He insisted that Levignard had made him lose the last train; he did not hesitate to add that his companion did it out of malice. If Mme. Durrieux was unable to find the 200 francs which she knew she had placed in the drawer, her husband had loaned them to Levignard to relieve him of a temporary embarrassment. Durrieux even whispered to her that it was some scandal.

Mme. Durrieux stopped him by exclaiming: "That's enough. I forbid you to associate with that fellow."

"You do not know him," answered Durrieux. "No doubt he is a bit dissipated, but he has a heart of gold. He is sowing his wild oats, and I cannot abandon him. His father intrusted him to my care; if I do not counsel him, he will become intemperate in his habits. Fortunately, he is a little afraid of me."

To tell the truth, Durrieux, who had suddenly become rich in the unbleached cotton business, had but one desire in life, and that was to go to Paris without his wife as often as possible and squander his money. He found it convenient to cast upon the shoulders of a third person the burden of his own prodigacy. Mme. Durrieux swallowed these tales without suspicion, and the sly fellow spent the day after his revel in perfect peace, nursed by his wife, who was a most estimable creature, and by her niece, a bright young girl whom one could always interest by telling her that she would be married some day.

For two or three years Durrieux made use of his friend Levignard in this manner, when the startling news was received that Levignard was in Robigny; that he was going to settle there and take up the practice of notary.

This announcement did not please Durrieux, for he would have to furnish other excuses in the future to account for missing the last train from Paris.

"Now, then," exclaimed Mme. Durrieux, "we shall see great doings; our young ladies will have to look out for themselves. Point this rascal out to me; I am anxious to see him."

Her husband was alarmed, but casually observed: "It is not necessary to speak to him of the past. It would annoy him, and, besides, it might injure him in the community."

But Mme. Durrieux had had plenty of time to relate the stories confidentially to the pharmacist's wife, to the collector, and to the grocer, who in their turn had spread them in the neighborhood, so that the new notary came to Robigny preceded by the most questionable reputation.

Mme. Durrieux had pictured to herself a Levignard with waxed mustache and blond hair falling upon his shoulders; such a fop as would wear a long coat and sigh for a becoming uniform. Now Levignard appeared with a long beard, short black hair, dressed in a severe frock coat and wearing eyeglasses. It was a great surprise to Mme. Durrieux; nevertheless, she scanned him cautiously, for one never knows—"still water runs deep." She had opportunity to observe him closely, but she saw nothing to confirm the evil reports. In thinking it over, she concluded that he must be very clever and was concealing his game.

Everybody knows how good women are, how anxious they are to save a soul. It is a temptation they cannot resist, even if it has its perils, and they enter into it with their whole hearts. Sometimes they neglect their husbands. We do not accuse Mme. Durrieux of this. To be sure, she nourished more and more a secret resentment against her husband because he had not resisted the evil advice of his dissolute friend. On the other hand, she regarded the new notary with an indulgence more and more marked, and she bravely undertook the task of pointing out to him the path of a sedate life; but she never went beyond the limits of a conventional sermon.

She lectured Levignard without showing her usual sympathetic tenderness, and yet he was so far encouraged by her gentleness that he resolved to put an end to the lectures by asking for the hand of her niece. He had seen her about, and besides had heard that she would have a dowry, and that would be quite useful to a notary.

"Never!" said Mme. Durrieux. "Never, so long as I live! No, indeed!" And the good woman dismissed him with so much energy that a casual observer might have thought there was some spite about it.

Born of French parents, a bachelor, honorably discharged from his regiment, a graduate of law, at last a notary, Levignard was astonished at this check, and confided in her husband.

"Indeed! my wife dismissed you?"

"Yes; can you tell me why?"

"Well, you have such a deuced reputation—"

These words had no sooner escaped Durrieux's lips than he would have given the world to recall them.

"I a deuced reputation!" exclaimed Levignard. "How the devil could I get it? My habits are regular, I work 12 hours a day, I am not intemperate, I eat little, and am not conscious that I have a single vice. A deuced reputation!—then that is the reason your wife has been moralizing all this time. I insist upon seeing her and explaining—"

"Don't!" cried Durrieux; "heavens, don't do that."

"What harm would it do?"

"I don't know just what," he answered, frightened at the abyss opening before him; "but there is certainly something. Besides—besides, you cannot decently present yourself at the house after your dismissal. But trust yourself to your old friend; I will arrange the matter."

"Truly?"

"I tell you I will see to it. I see a way out, surely; but on condition that you will not step inside my house until I tell you. Do you promise me?"

"Oh, well, if that will help it along—"

"It is absolutely necessary. You promise me that you will not show your face?"

"I swear it."

They parted mutually satisfied. Levignard was comforted by Durrieux's promise; the latter was reassured, for he knew he could postpone, at least for awhile, the dangerous explanation to his wife and Levignard. He must still find the solution which he had promised, and, to tell the truth, he could think of nothing that would prove satisfactory. But he was too kind-hearted not to feel remorse with respect to his comrade, and to appease it he felt that he must fulfill his promise.

When Mme. Durrieux returned a little late from a walk, there seemed to be something unusual in the home atmosphere; her husband, with his cheeks swelled out by something that seemed to be suffocating him, turned and twisted through the salon with a disconsolate look; as for her niece she was assiduously playing the piano, making discords, which showed that this occupation was only a pretense.

"Well—what's the matter?" said Mme. Durrieux.

Her husband raised his hands to heaven, loosened his cravat as though he could scarcely breathe, and, gasping, said: "Ask your niece."

Her niece, with her hands on her head, leaned her elbows on the piano, producing about as much harmony as a moment before, her plump and graceful shoulders shaking—perhaps with sobs, perhaps with suppressed laughter; it was hard to tell.

"Well," said Durrieux, who had, at last succeeded in controlling himself, "your niece went out during your absence, and where do you think I found her?"

"How should I know? You make me uneasy; has anything happened to her?"

"I found her at her lover's office."

Mme. Durrieux rushed to her niece, seized her by the arms, and turned her about, exposing a roguish face, young and lovely, but enigmatical. For a quarter of an hour it was impossible to tell just what this pretty face expressed — confusion, remorse, or the torment a smothered laugh inflicts upon one who tries to control it.

"Do you mean to tell me you have a lover?" said Mme. Durrieux.

"You went to his office!"

"She even resorted to his house," again answered her uncle.

"You will be good enough to—"

But the child had had time to catch up her handkerchief with a deft hand and cover her face under pretext of weeping; thenceforth it was vain to try to question her.

"You little rascal!" Durrieux took advantage of this to exclaim. "She does not wish to answer, because she has nothing to say; she does not wish to tell the name of her lover, because we do not approve of him. Yes, her lover is the very one I have forbidden her. It is a lover whom I decline to sanction, and they are both aware of it. It is a lover to whom both you and I have closed our doors, and with good reason; it is the notary."

He might just as well have called him executioner; he could not have alluded to the suitor's profession in a more disparaging manner.

"A child I looked upon as my own daughter," he began again in a mild tone, "I discover at the notary's inclined to revolt against her aunt's authority as well as my own. What will become of us? She cannot stay with us after such an insult. It will be necessary for her to leave the country. But the scandal of her misconduct will reflect upon us."

"Did anyone see her?" said Mme. Derrieux, frightened at the gossip that might ensue.

"She may have been seen, or she may not; but, my dear, in our little community, everybody knows such things as that. How unfortunate that this scoundrel, Levignard, should have such a cursed reputation. I should say that they ought to marry at once, without delay. He is of a good family, and later will inherit some property; besides, he already has an established position which may become brilliant. But to give him our niece would reflect upon us, and surely I do not wish that—no, it would be better to exile the unfortunate young girl."

"What are you dreaming of? Are you crazy? A marriage would be preferable to all this scandal. Go and bring that scoundrel of a notary and let's make an end of all this."

"I will not."

"I insist."

"I repeat what I said, my dear; I—will—not. That ends it."

"You—will—not! I shall send the maid for him," and the imperious woman ran to give orders about the message.

After she had gone, both uncle and niece sank into their chairs, exhausted from their efforts to control their laughter.

"But, uncle," said the notary's future intended, "when poor Levignard finds out that he has compromised me, he will protest his innocence and my aunt will accuse us of deceiving her."

"Don't distress yourself about Levignard," returned Durrieux, "I have warned him."—From the French of Jean Destrem, in San Francisco Argonaut.

A SHORT TALK ON MEDICINE

OF GREAT INTEREST TO WOMEN

Pale Cheeks and Nerveless Hands are no Longer Admired. To be Strictly Correct you must have Rosy Cheeks and Good Health.

A FEW POINTERS FOR THE GIRL OF THE PERIOD

Pure blood is the secret of health and beauty. The features may be regular, the form perfect, but no woman can be beautiful in the full sense of the word while suffering from any of the peculiar ailments of her sex. Disease destroys the complexion, is productive of wrinkles and premature old age. Regular monthly uterine action is necessary to every woman's health, and if this function of life is checked, disease, a pale and sallow complexion, and a feeling of exhaustion, are the result. The monthly secretion must continue from puberty to the turn of life without unnatural obstruction. Any breach of this law of Nature will result in the distressing symptoms which makes the lives of seven-tenths of the women of this country miserable, almost unbearable. A few of these symptoms are severe headache, loss of appetite, pale or sallow complexion, palpitation of the heart, swollen ankles or legs, nervousness, offensive breath, etc., etc. The sufferer may exhibit one or more of these symptoms, or may have all. They simply indicate the ravages disease has made upon the system, and the more the symptoms the patient shows the greater the necessity for prompt and persistent treatment, until they have been banished and the bloom of health is restored. To accomplish this end Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the only unfailing remedy. They positively cure all suppressions and irregularities, which if neglected, inevitably entail sickness and trouble. By taking these pills for a week or ten days before the expected return of each period, the prompt appearance of "the visitor" is insured. For suppressions, the pills must be taken steadily until the reappearance takes place—generally in a month's time, sometimes less. Follow the directions on the pamphlet about each box. Nursing women will find their milk improved in quality and quantity by taking these pills, and also obtain relief from pain in the back and general dragged-out feeling. All displacements, from weakness of the uterine ligaments are speedily relieved and ultimately cured by the use of these Pills. Leucorrhœa, bearing down, weight in the pelvis, and all female weakness, find speedy relief and cure in the administration of the Pink Pills for Pale People.

The most critical period in the life of a woman is that attending the cessation of menstruation, or, as it is most generally termed, the change or turn of life. The symptoms attending this period are fainting spells or attacks of faintness or dizziness, headache, general debility, exhaustion, a feeling of melancholy, hysteria, pain in the loins or limbs, hypochondria, etc. The change is a gradual one—for better or worse—for the former if the patient is wise enough to fortify the system against the ravages of the symptoms attending the change. For this purpose no remedy ever discovered equals Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They purify the blood by acting directly upon the sexual system, lessen the severity of this critical period, and finally leaves the patient in the enjoyment of robust health. All ladies approaching this critical period should take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

PALE AND SALLOW GIRLS.

What can be more distressing than to see a girl drooping and fading in the springtime of youth? Instead of bright eyes, glowing, rosy cheeks, and an elastic step, there are dull eyes, pale, sallow, or greenish complexion, and a languidness of step that bespeaks disease and an early death if proper treatment is not promptly resorted to and persisted in until the impoverished blood is enriched, and the functions of life become regular. Upon parents rests a great responsibility at the time their daughters are budding into womanhood. If your daughter is pale, complains of weariness, is "tired out" upon the slightest exertion; if she is troubled with headache, pain in the side; if her temper is fitful and her appetite poor, she is in a condition of extreme peril, a fit subject for the development of the most dreadful of all disease—Consumption. If you notice any of these symptoms lose no time in procuring Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They will assist the patient to develop properly and regularly; they will enrich the blood and restore health's roses to the cheeks, bright eyes and a lightness of step will surely follow their use, and all danger of consumption and premature death will be averted. Wise and prudent mothers will insist upon their daughters taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills when the approach of the period of puberty, and thus avoid all chances of disease or early decay.

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR MEN—YOUNG AND OLD.

Every man who finds his mental faculties dull or failing, or his physical powers flagging, whether from overwork or worry, or as the result of indiscretions, or excesses, should promptly take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They will restore his lost energies, both physical and mental, build up the blood, restore the shattered nervous system, and ward off insanity, the too frequent outcome of excesses.

SAVED HER DAUGHTER.

From the Journal, Detroit, Mich.

Miss Lily Schnable, living with her parents at No. 75 Grand Avenue, Detroit, Mich., has a remarkable fine specimen of perfect health which blessing she owes to the efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Said Mrs. Schnable to a reporter recently: "We were very much alarmed about Lily for over a year she was so miserable, she was pale and weak, and though naturally fleshy she became very thin; she had no appetite, ambition, could not stand anything.

"She had never matured as a woman, and doctors, of whom we tried three or four, failed to help her. We took her to Harper Hospital for a time, but although temporary help was obtained she received no permanent cure. One day a friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and we secured a box. Inside four weeks she began to improve and naturally righted itself, and she is now as well and healthy as any girl, as her rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes showed."

Mrs. Schnable can never be thankful enough for the wonderful remedy which has done so much for her daughter.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are considered an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

A Visit to Molokai, the Home of the Lepers—How they Live.

Shortly after passing Diamond Head the ship began to roll, and some members of our party complained of headache and began to "turn in" as rapidly as they could.

"We are crowded for room," the president of the board of health said. "You will have to sleep on the deck."

There were less than a dozen cabins on the little vessel, and these were given to the ladies and "elderly gentlemen," while the remainder of us cheerfully consented to sleep on the deck, with nothing but the starry heavens and some of the ship's rigging above us. Though it was in the last part of November, the night was quite warm.

Not feeling a desire to turn in at once, I went forward of the captain's cabin and, taking a seat on the deck, gazed on the brilliantly lighted heavens, while my thoughts wandered to home and the loved ones far away. Wearied of sitting, gazing, and thinking, I at last went aft, whore the deck was covered with cots, and men lay snoring everywhere.

"Me gettee bed and blanket," he answered.

He darted below and in a few moments returned with a mattress, a blanket, and a pillow. There was a spare place aft the mainmast and just forward of the hatchway. It was very spare, for while my head was jammed up against the mast my feet extended over the hatchway.. Notwithstanding my cramped position, however, I fell asleep, and, had all gone well, would have slept until dawn of day. But about half-past three in the morning I became conscious of water falling on my face, and, while half sleeping and half waking, I was trying to determine what it was, the officer of the watch cried out:

"You'd better go below out of the rain."

I sprang to my feet and found the rain pouring down upon the deck almost in torrents. To snatch my collar, necktie, and cuffs, which lay on the deck at my side, and rush down the companionway in almost total darkness, was but the work of a moment. In the general hurry and confusion I could not find my hat. A sailor brought it to me, half an hour later, thoroughly soaked.

All sleep for the remainder of the night was at an end.

"Come here and sit down," said Senator Waterhouse, who had also been driven below by the rain. "Don't rub your eyes until they are red. You will have to get used to this."

I found myself in a company of jolly fellows who had already abandoned all thought of sleep.

"I have been fishing many times," said Judge Wilcox, "when we had to sit up all night in the rain."

The very mention of a fishing expedition will rouse the Hawaiian, native or naturalized. Senator Waterhouse, who knows something about big fish, at once started out with a story.

"Speaking of natives and fishing, I will tell you what I witnessed with my own eyes."

"Go on, senator," was the general demand, for when the senator gets started the boys know they can expect something good.

"While going along the coast of Oahu one day, I saw some natives on the rocks and some in the water. I asked what they were doing and was told they were going to lasso a shark, and that if I wished I might help pull it out of the water. I climbed down the precipitous cliff a short distance and discovered there was a hole in the rock in which the shark had gone and was asleep. One of the natives plunged into the water and tied a rope around the shark's tail without waking him, and we pulled him out. I tell you he was a monster."

There were some incredulous remarks at this story, which caused the senator to declare:

"If any man doubts this story let him pay the expense of the trip and I will take the whole party to the cliff and show them the hole from which the shark was pulled. If I don't I will bear all expenses."

Judge Wilcox smiled, and stroking his mustache with a "that's nothing" expression, answered:

"I don't deny the truth of that story. There is a fish pond down the coast where the sharks come in at high tide. When the tide goes out it leaves the water so shallow that Mr. Shark can't turn over. The native boys used to go to this pond, plunge in, mount the sharks, and ride them all around. The shark is not dangerous unless he can get on his back, and the water is too shallow for that, so the boys can ride them in safety. Now, if any one doubts that story, just charter the ship and I will take him to the fish pond. If I don't, I'll pay all expenses."

Shark stories were in order until the steward announced that coffee was ready for the party, this to keep them awake until breakfast. When invited to have a cup of coffee I announced that I did not drink coffee.

"Maybe you prefer beer," said one of the newspaper men.

"I never drank a glass of beer in my life," I answered.

"That is more incredible than any shark story told this morning," the senator declared. Then I offered, if he would pay the expenses of the party to the United States, to show them the country in which I had lived without drinking coffee or beer, and if I did not, I would pay the expenses of the voyage myself.

When day dawned we were at anchor off Kalanpapa. The lepers were aware of our intended visit and, soon after daylight, the shore was lined with these unfortunate people, straining their eyes to catch the first glimpse of their visitors. The band, composed of leper boys, played several airs of welcome. Bishop Ropert, Father Pamphile, and the other missionaries went ashore in the first boat, and were greeted with cheers. To get ashore we had to climb down a swinging ladder over the ship's side into a boat, both bobbing about and in opposite directions, which added the spice of danger to the expedition.

On landing we found on the shore two or three hundred lepers. Some of them were but slightly affected by the disease, and some so disfigured as to hardly resemble human beings. The disease seems to attack the extremities first. Usually it first appears in the lobes of the ears, and they begin to hang as if there was a heavy weight in each. Then it appears in the face in great lumps, and the cheeks swell. The fingers lose all feeling and wither away or drop off, until the hand is fingerless and the foot toeless. Often the head is earless and noseless. The unfortunate often loses his eyesight, the balls entirely disappearing. It may take years for the disease to accomplish its deadly work, but there is no hope for the victim when once it seizes him.

And yet it is not uncommon to see a leper on horseback galloping over the settlement, so maimed that one cannot understand how he holds the reins. Their ears often become so elongated that they interfere with their riding. A doctor, who was for three years in the settlement, said:

"I have often had them come to me and say: 'Doctor won't you cut my ears off; they are getting in my way.' "

There is a house set apart for visitors which no leper is permitted to enter. We went to this house to wait for the horses which were to convey us across the island to the Boy's Home. The lepers, to the number of several hundred, came to the fence and gazed at us so longingly, so fondly, as to almost melt one to tears. To them we were superior beings, loved friends, from whom they were forever separated.

Senator Waterhouse, who possesses a world of moral courage and a heart as tender as a woman's, was everywhere among them, not hesitating to grasp the fingerless hand, and speak words of encouragement.

"How are you, old boy? How are you today, my friend? Come, cheer up and be happy. You are happier here than you could be anywhere else," he said a hundred times that day.

To which the natives (for most of the lepers are natives) usually answered: "Pilaki, Pilaki," with a sad shake of the head.

"Pilaki" means grief, sorrow, and all that goes to weigh down the heart. I heard the awful word a thousand times that day, heard it so much that it still rings in my ears, while the sadly disfigured faces I met will, I fear, never fade from my memory. They have haunted me in my dreams ever since I left Molokai. Some of their faces were so horribly disfigured as to have no resemblance to humanity. No hideous mask has ever been made to equal what leprosy has done for the human face. I observed a boy about ten years of age whose eyelashes and eyebrows had quite fallen out. His eyelids were so paralyzed that he could raise them only the fractional part of an inch, and he had to hold his head back in order to see. Mr. Hutchings, the assistant and sheriff of the settlement, is one on whom the disease seems to have exhausted itself by the destruction of his fingers. These are gone and his hands healed, but his under lip is paralyzed so that, when he speaks, it falls down, and when he has finished a sentence he pushes it back with his fingerless hand, and holds it in place with his upper lip.

Motormen on the electric street cars in Danbury, Conn., have been supplied with veils to protect their faces from cold and driving snow.

"We cannot say that the outlook for a bonus, of sufficient magnitude, to induce the Lima Northern to enter the city is at all encouraging. The owners of the Washington mill, Churchill & Co., of Toledo, are not willing to do anything, and of course this tends to discourage others. We doubt if $10,000 can be pledged."

The Monroe Democrat thus describes the circus recently conducted by Co. A of the first:

"Ann Arbor has had a mid-winter circus. Just what Ann Arbor wanted of it, is hard to tell. The fratricidal frats have been furnishing a circus for some weeks as mounted 'ball' jugglers and feeling for each other's jugulars at the same time, while the faculty have furnished the clowns. The show was enough to make the monkey slide down the pole, the elephant pack his trunk and the camel 'hump' himself to the desert."

A society journal prints the following list of wedding anniversaries, concerning which those interested are at times apt to experience a little uncertainty: First, cotton; second, paper; third, leather; fourth, book; fifth, wooden; sixth, garnet; seventh, woolen; eighth, bric-a-brac; ninth, topaz; tenth, tin; twelfth, silk and fine linen; fifteenth, crystal; twentieth, china; twenty-fifth, silver; thirty-fifth, sapphire; fortieth, ruby; fiftieth, golden; seventy-fifth, diamond.

The Adrian Times says that some people, who have been studying the situation, think it is the idea of the Lima Northern to construct its line to that city, then to the nearest point where it would connect with the C. J. & M., and go to Jackson, and finally proceed to the lake front over the Port Huron division of the Grand Trunk to Port Huron. A traveling man of the city states a rumor is current in Jackson that Brice has secured an option on the Port Huron division.

Ann Arbor Argus.—Editor A. B. Smith has just finished his 15th year as editor and proprietor of the Milan Leader. He was there at the bornin', and says he has seen changes of proprietors in all the papers and seen many others surrender their paste pots to Adversity and their shears to Inefficient Support. Editor Smith has also seen the Milan firms in business when he began quit the fleeting stage of life with the exception of four, has witnessed the incoming of electricity, welcomed the arrival of telephone connections, helped purchase the local fire engine and seen the village incorporated. He has also probably seen every circus for nothing that has come to town in that time, has shown his editor's card to the church contribution collector every Sunday, told the subscribers that hay was not taken for subscriptions since the old gray was sold and that the back yard was so full of wood now that the neighbors were having a hard time to burn it all.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 21, '96.

All the elements of a national scandal, in connection with the proposed legislation concerning the indebtedness of the Pacific Railroads to the government, are now floating around Washington; and, while all patriotic citizens hope it will be avoided, no clear-headed observer will be surprised if it isn't. There has never been a stronger lobby in Washington than that which is representing what are known as the Huntington interests. It is the richest plum the lobbyists have had for a number of years and they are disposed to make the most of it. The object of the Huntington lobby is to get a bill extending the indebtedness of these roads—nearly $100,000,000—for one hundred years at 2 per cent interest, through Congress, and failing to do that to prevent the passage of any bill that will result in ousting the Huntington crowd from the control of the roads. It is well supplied with money, which it is prepared to spend directly for Congressmen's votes or for any sort of influence that can be made to control other votes, or the promise of opportune absence of voters in either House or Senate when the time comes to vote. These things are very well known to those who are trying to bring these roads to book, through legislation, and the Congressman who accepts a bribe will be in danger of exposure and the disgrace that must necessarily follow.

Secretary Carlisle is being criticized very harshly by many for having allotted the bonds upon which bidders failed to make the first payment at the proper time—about $5,000,000—to J. Piermont Morgan, at his bid of less than 1.11 when he could have sold them in the open market for 1.17, thus giving Mr. Morgan a profit of $300,000 which Mr. Carlisle's critics figure should have been made by the government. Senator Hill has up to this time prevented the adoption of a resolution offered by Senator Allen, providing for an investigation of this whole bond business.

The republican members of Congress from New York gave a dinner this week to formally introduce the Morton boom in Congressional circles. The dinner was a good one and the speeches up to the average, but it will take more than one dinner to make the Morton boom appear to the politicians of Congress as anything more than a shadow, notwithstanding the popularity of Gov. Morton.

That Secretary Morton is the most unpopular member of the cabinet, so far as Congress is concerned, was made certain by the harsh criticisms passed upon him in both branches of Congress, and the absence of even a single defender of him or his acts. The immediate cause of these criticisms was the action of Secretary Morton in refusing to spend the money Congress appropriated for the purchase and free distribution of seeds, but much of the enmity towards him in Congress has been caused by his constantly going out of his way to whack the silver men over the head and to exploit his single standard gold hobby, which is probably not endorsed by half a dozen men in Congress. Congress is going to have those seeds bought and distributed, or know the reason why. It is all very well to laugh, as the members of the House did when Representative Cousins, of Iowa, said this was no longer a government of the people, but a government by J. Piermont Morgan and J. Sterling Morton, but it will soon be no laughing matter, if Congress cannot assert its authority.

Some people have more than once accused Senators of being out for all the patronage they can possibly reach, and it is only just to say that the 27 Senators who voted for the amendment offered by Senator Vilas, of Wis., providing for an addition of two appointments to the West Point Military Academy from each state, and defeated it, deprived themselves of a nice plum, as it is altogether probable had the amendment become a law that each Senator would have named one of these additional cadets. Even the devil isn't as black as he is sometimes painted.

In view of the disposition of Senators to become Presidential candidates, notwithstanding the historical hoodoo which has up to now prevented any man who has served in the Senate becoming President, it may be well to call attention to the fact that there are six Senators who are constitutionally barred out of the White House. They are Gallinger, of N. H., and McMillan, of Mich., who were born in Canada; Sewel, of New Jersey, born in Ireland; Jones, of Nevada, and Mantle, of Montana, born in England, and Nelson, of Minnesota, born in Norway.

Needed Reform of the Rural School.

The census bulletin on illiteracy recently published by Hon. Washington Gardner, Secretary of State, is an educational document of very unusual interest. Some of the facts that appear in the bulletin are the following:

(1.) Of the total population of the State of Michigan in 1894 ten years old [illegible] 1-10 per cent were unable to read or write; of the native born the percent was 2 9-100, and of the foreign born 8 43-100. Expressed in another form, the three ratios are 88, 91, and 84 in 1000. The foreign born illiterates, it will be seen, were four times as numerous, relatively, as the native born.

(2.) The ratio of the foreign born persons ten years old and over in the State at large, and in the cities, unable to read or write were practically the same, viz: 8 43-100 and 8 47-100.

(3.) The per cent of native-born illiterates in the State as a whole was 2 9-10, but in the cities it was only 1 39-100. In other words, in the State there were 21 illiterates to the 1000, and in the cities 14 to the 1000. On this basis the showing against the State as compared with the cities is just 50 per cent. But we may also set the cities against the remainder of the State, or the rural districts. Now the ratios are 14 and 24 to 1000, or more than 70 per cent against the country. If, therefore, the country rate of illiteracy could be reduced to the city rate, or, what is the same thing, if the country level of intelligence, as measured by the reading and writing test, could be brought up to the city level, the number of native born citizens ten years old or more, unable to read or write, would be reduced about 8000 in number.

The last comparison is certainly not in accordance with prevailing opinion. How far it is supported by the statistics of other States, if at all, I am unable to say; but there can be no doubt that the rural districts of Michigan in respect to common school education, compare unfavorably with the cities.

There now lies before me a letter of late date, written by Hon. E. J. Clapp, of Geauga county, Ohio, a practical business man, who has represented his county in the State legislature, and who, in the latter capacity as well as at home, interests himself in the country school problem. I shall draw from this letter several interesting facts.

Mr. Clapp writes that in his part of the State there is a general feeling that "the country district school does not measure up to the educational demands of the day." Some people are opposed to the new movement, "people are always opposed to new methods to meet the changed conditions." Many towns are conveying the children to a school for instruction. Madison, Lake Co., began this movement in a small way, first conveying the children from three districts to the fourth, with results so satisfactory that the people are preparing to take in four more schools. Kingsville, Ashtabula Co., entered on the policy of consolidation three years ago, and has finally brought all the pupils in the township together in one central graded school. Huntsburg, Geauga Co., is now building a $6,000 brick schoolhouse for a central school.

A GREAT EXPENSE

(From the Battle Creek Moon.)

Our representative called at 26 Battle Creek Avenue, the residence of S. I. Robbins, and in an interview with him brought out the following facts: Mr. Robbins tells of his wife's experience in a manner that carries conviction with his words. He says: "I am sorry my wife is not at home this P. M., but no one knows better than I how she has suffered during past years. For twenty years she has been afflicted with the various forms of kidney complaint and an enlargement of the liver. She was often confined to her bed for more than two weeks at a time suffering untold agony. She has doctored constantly, and I have paid out in doctors' bills for her alone as much as $900.00, and then her relief was only such that she would be able to be around for a spell. Some time ago she felt the symptoms of another attack coming on, such as a pain in through the kidneys and back. I hardly know what induced me to get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, instead of sending for the family physician; however, I got some and she commenced their use. It was a surprise to us both to see their action; the attack was warded off, and she continued taking them with marked improvement each day of their use. She is better now than she has been in years, the pain in the back and others in the kidneys have entirely gone. Hardly a day goes by that we do not mention the great good Doan's Kidney Pills have done her. I was always opposed to patent medicines, but confess that my wife's experience with Doan's Kidney Pills has done much to change my opinions. If it were not for those pills she would not have been able to be out this afternoon.

THE HERALD FOR 1896.

Special Offers and Clubbing List.

The large numbers of maps which are being taken by our subscribers prove that they are all right and are a bargain for the price. We still continue these offers, and append our club list for reference. If you have not yet made out your list of papers for 1896, consult this list.

NUMBER ONE.

Everyone knows something about the great map publishing firm of Rand, McNally & Co. Their atlases and wall maps have gained a world-wide reputation. Their new state map of Michigan is the best one ever issued. It is 41 by 58 inches in size, full mounted with rollers, showing all organized townships, beautifully colored, and sells for $2.00. The former price was $3.00. This map can be furnished at the remarkably low price of $1.40, with a year's subscription to the HERALD included.

NUMBER TWO.

Have you seen Rand McNally & Co.'s large reversible map, with the world on one side and the United States on the reverse? This is the largest map of the United States ever printed on one piece of paper. The map of the world is on Mercator's projection and gives a brief history of every country with population of chief cities, areas, voyages of discoveries etc. This map is especially suited for school use and is just the thing for ready reference in these times of international disputes. This $5.00 map and the Herald for $2.00.

THE DETROIT TRIBUNE.

The Detroit Tribune has long been recognized as one of the greatest newspapers of the Republican party, not only in this state but throughout the west. Although the Tribune has long enjoyed this distinction, it is safe to say that within the last two years its management has greatly raised the standard of the publication as a political, literary, and general newspaper. The Tribune should be read in every household of Michigan. We have made a special arrangement with the management whereby we can furnish the weekly Tribune and HERALD one year for the normal figure of $1.30.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.

The Cosmopolitan is almost too well known to need particular mention. It is simply a marvel that a magazine of such merit can be furnished for the money. A new lithographing press has recently been added to their machinery which will make the paper more attractive than ever. For 1896, 1344 pages and 1000 illustrations for 85 cents if taken with the Herald.

M'CLURE'S MAGAZINE.

McClure's is now one of the most popular magazines in the world. Its circulation and advertising patronage are a guarantee of its worth. Its famous articles on Lincoln is the chief feature for 1896. McClure's and the Herald for $1.85.

The month of February came in like a lamb, but soon began to put on the airs of a lion and for a week has been tearing around with its tail over its back, but since returning from the Maher-Fitzsimmons mill, the weather has taken a reef in its caudle appendage, and once more assumes the disposition of a young mutton.

Talk about the pushing citizens of Britton. Two of our young men took the railroad speeder Sunday evening and went to Tecumseh to call upon certain young ladies there. When they started home Jack Frost had taken a hand and the T rails were so slippery that the speeder refused to speed, and so our Romeos walked in and trundled their obstenate steed. One of them has not been able to walk much since, but he has the satisfaction of knowing that he has the proper "push."

Few people know that all plants contain digestive psinciples. They cannot absorb their food until it is digested any more than animals can. The Mount Lebanon Shakers have learned the art of extracting and utilizing these digestive principles, and it is for this reason that their Shaker Digestive Cordial is meeting with such phenomenal success in the treatment of dyspepsia. The Shaker Digestive Cordial not only contains food already digested, but it also contains digestive principles which aid the digestion of other foods that may be eaten with it. A single 10c sample bottle will be sufficient to demonstrate its value, and we suggest that every suffering dyspeptic make a trial of it. Any druggist can supply it.

IN MEMORY OF ADDIE HOAGLAND.
Died February 17, 1846.

Cease your weeping, for your loved one,
Waiting on the other shore.
Though she's missed from old time places,
She's not lost, but gone before.

In this life she'd many trials
Of mortal birth, knew grief and pain.
All her sorrows now are ended;
Would you wish her back again?

O, be ready, friends, to meet her
In that world of love and height;
For within its sacred portals,
Hearts know no change, no stinging blight.

Let not your heart be troubled;
Christ has risen! Our dead shall rise
To dwell with him in heavenly mansions;
Redeemed by his own sacrifice.

L. M. R.

David H. Gregory was born at Bath, Steuben Co., N. Y., Feb. 9, 1818, and died at his home in Macon, Feb. 22, 1896, being 78 years and 13 days old. He was married to Julia Ann Miller, June 7, 1857. He moved to Michigan March 5, 1867, and settled in Macon where he died. His wife died March 17, 1878. To them were born ten children, seven daughters and three sons. Two sons died in infancy and one daughter preceeded the father but only five days. Of the six daughters and one son left, two daughters are living in Antrim Co., Mich., and one in Wells Co., N. Dak.; the remainder are living in Lenawee Co., Mich. There were also thirty-two grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted at the home of deceased on Tuesday, Feb. 25, at 1 o'clock p. m., by Rev. James Wright, the interment being at the cemetery on Ridge Road, in family plat. So once more there is laid to rest a peaceable citizen and good neighbor.

CARD OF THANKS.

The family of the late David Gregory desire to hereby express their sincere thanks to the friends who so kindly assisted during their recent bereavement. The flowers and services of the choir were especially appreciated.

A man's health is the rope by which he climbs to success. Yet his health is the very thing he neglects more than anything else. It is easier to keep health than it is to regain it. When a man feels himself running down, when he realizes a loss of vitality and energy, he must call a halt. The strands of his rope are parting rapidly. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has helped thousands of men in just this condition. It makes health, it makes pure, rich blood, it forces out impurities and kills germs. It doesn't make any difference what name you call your trouble by—dyspepsia—kidney disease—rheumatism consumption—skin disease, the Golden Medical Discovery will cure it absolutely. None of these diseases can retain hold on the body when it is full of rich, pure blood.

The semi-monthly meeting of the club was held at the home of Mr. P. Kehoe, Tuesday evening. This association though known as a farmers club does not devote the entire time to the discussion of agricultural topics but discusses with equal interest any subject that pertains to the advancement of the community. The meeting on Tuesday evening was especially instructive. A paper entitled "The Needs and Requirements of District Schools," was one of the features of the evening. It contained many strong points and brought forth much discussion. Among many other thoughts the writer strongly favored the adoption of uniform text books. The road question received its share of attention. It was decided that work of the right kind was the most essential means in acquiring good highways. The literary part was well prepared, and the assistance given by the friends, who are not members of the club, was appreciated. The next meeting of the club will take place on Tuesday evening, March 10, at J. W. Gillespie's.

KELLOGG.

Died, at the residence of her brother, the Hon. B. L. Baxter, in Tecumseh, on Wednesday, Feb. 19, 1896, in the 78th year of her age, Mary Jane, widow of the late George Kellogg, of Jackson, Mich.

The following tribute to her memory, taken from the Jackson Daily Citizen of Feb. 22, graphically, yet most tenderly, expresses the appreciation of her worth and the high estimation in which she was held in the city of her long continued residence:

Few of the many friends of Mrs. Mary Kellogg have realized that her life was nearing its end, so that when last Wednesday morning, just at break of day, she quietly sank to rest, the news came with a shock even to her own loved ones. Ever cheerful and ready to find the bright side of even the darkest days, she so often smiled in her illness that the approach of death was not discerned until "God touched her with His finger and she slept."

Seldom is it given to man to embody so beautiful a characteristic as was ever pre-eminent in the life of Mrs. Mary Kellogg. The spirit of cheerfulness seemed to have endowed her at birth with its own special gift. Perpetual sunshine radiated from her life, and only those who knew her best realized how never failing was this constant giving out of her bright spirit. Surely, if success in life can be measured by the amount of happiness we dispense, her life has been crowned with the greatest success.

"Not what we give but what we share,

The loving, gentle life is ended, but the inspiration of her beautiful living will never end. It will grow and blossom with new life as the years go on. Peace be unto thee, gentle friend. As thou has given freely in the past, so a loving God will give again to thee. Death to thee is life, the gateway to eternal joy.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. King and family and Mrs. Little desire to return sincere thanks to the friends and neighbors, who so kindly assited them in their late bereavement.

A Modern Mother

Has found that her little ones are improved more by the pleasant laxative, Syrup of Figs, when in need of the laxative effect of a gentle remedy than by any other, and that it is more acceptable to them. Children enjoy it and it benefits them. The true remedy, Syrup of Figs, is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

Oil barges are now being fitted with electric lights that are vapor proof, so that even when naptha is carried there is no danger of fire or explosion.

PLANTS AND A MEAT DIET.

Darwin Makes a Daring Statement and Supports It by Experiment.

It has been proven time and again that the so-called "cannibal plants," of which the Venus fly trap is the type, are much more healthy when allowed their insect food than they are when reared under netting or in any other manner which excludes them from their regular meat diet. The above is an oddity of itself, says the St. Louis Republic, especially when we consider the fact that there is a certain school of botanists which teaches that cannibal plants make no use whatever of the insect prey captured by them, but it is nothing compared with the bold assertion made by Francis Darwin. That noted scientific gentleman bravely meets the "vegetarian botanists" with the assertion that all kinds and classes of plants, whether known as "meat-eaters" or not, bear more of the heavier fruits and seeds when fed on meat than those that are not allowed a flesh diet. He grew two lots, comprising various varieties of the different common plants. One lot was regularly fed (through their roots, of course) with pure juices compressed from meat, the other with water and the various fertilizers. The final figures on this odd experiment proved that the plants which were fed pure meat juice bore 168 fruits of the different kinds, while the unfed plants of the same number and original condition bore but 74. Also that the pampered plants bore 240 seeds to every 100 borne by the plants that were not given a chance to gratify cannibalistic tastes. This is certainly a discovery worthy of much careful study and extensive experiment.

THE DEVIL'S PUMP.

Odd Combinations of Natural and Artificial Curiosities.

One of the greatest combinations of natural and artificial curiosities on the coast of California is called the Devil's Pump. The pholas, or shell miners, a species of mollusk which excavates immense caverns in the very hardest stone, have tunneled the entire coast in the vicinity of the pump. Water rushes into these caverns with each succeeding tide flow and, in this particular case, finds vent through a cylindrical opening some distance from the water's edge. It is estimated that this hole, which connects with the sea cavern, is 75 to 100 feet in depth. Every time the tide rushes into the cavern beneath the "pump" throws water to the height of a full 100 feet above the mouth of the opening. The Indians formerly called it by a name which signified "fairy water gun," but the irreverent white men have given it the title of the "Devil's Pump," and by that name it will probably be known by future generations.

There is a similar curiosity near Horn Head, County Donegal, Ireland, where a hole in the rocks is called "McSwiney's Gun," says the St. Louis Republic. Like the California oddity, it is on the seacoast and has connection with a submarine cavern. When the north wind blows and the sea is at "half flood" the wind and waves enter the cavern and send up immense columns of water through the "gun." Travelers say that each charge of water sent from the "gun" is accompanied by an explosion that can be heard for miles.

WATCH THE THUMBS.

They Are Telltale Signs of Healthy or Sick Nerves.

"When I went to a nerve specialist first," said a man who was once an invalid to a Boston Gazette reporter, "he told me that one way to judge of the condition of a person's nerves was to watch his thumbs. Ever since that time I have found the greatest fascination in looking at people's thumbs. The doctor said that if they moved involuntarily outward it was a sign that the nerves of that man or woman were not in the best condition. I find myself now line sweeping the line opposite me in the car, and if the doctor's test is a good one, there is a surprising number of people in this town whose nerves need looking after. There are few people among the women who do not involuntarily move the thumbs outward at intervals of every few minutes, and when your attention have been once attracted to it, the process of watching their gloved hands grows very interesting. I have found the habit much less frequent among men, but take the average number of women in a street car, and it will be a surprise to you to see how many of them indulge unconsciously in this little habit. I only hope it does not mean anything as serious as it might indicate if that nerve specialist's diagnosis was a good one.

The Judge's Musical Instrument.

A new typewriter story comes from India. It appears that one of the English judges in India was an expert on the machine, and it occurred to him to use it for the making of judicial notes. The machine was conveyed into court, when a certain novelty was imparted to the proceedings by the click of the keys and the tinkle of the bell which indicated that a line had been completed. The prisoner was found guilty and sentenced. Promptly he appealed, on the ground that, instead of listening to the evidence, the judge had whiled away his time by playing on a musical instrument. This was a technicality as well as a typewriter, and quite good enough reason for a bad man to get a new trial.

The Great Lawyer Coke.

Coke, who is frequently quoted as a high legal authority, was a lawyer born in the year 1550, and in 1592 was made attorney general, when his prosecution of Raleigh and Essex, and his forensic power afterward, on the occasion of the gunpowder plot, raised him into favor. He was elevated to the bench, and then sent to the Tower, but afterward framed the petition of rights.

DID NOT HOLD HIS PEACE.

As a Result the Wedding Proceeded with Another Groom.

"I attended a mountain wedding in McDowell county, W. Va.," said a writer in the Washington Star. "Everything went along smoothly at first. The cabin was brilliantly lighted with candles and one of the best fiddlers in the country was present to furnish music for the dance to follow the wedding ceremony. Nothing occurred to mar the proceedings until the minister came to the point where he invited anyone who had anything to say why the couple should not enter the bonds of matrimony to speak or thereafter hold his peace, when a rough-looking mountaineer arose and said:

"'Anything ter say, parson? Wall, I reckon I hev. I hev allus intended ter marry that gal myself, an' thet feller knowed it, so he jess kep' outen my way. I sent 'im word to prepare for a lickin', an' he lef' the country, but kep' a-writin ter the gal. Now, I'm here ter make my word good, an' 'fore this hyar event goes any farder, the taller-faced coward has me ter fight.'

"In vain the preacher tried to restore order. A ring was soon squared in the center of the room and the men went at it. In about ten minutes the groom announced that he had enough, and the victor, taking the arm of the blushing bride, deliberately changed the groom's name in the marriage license to his own, while the vanquished lover made his escape. Everybody appeared to be satisfied, and the marriage took place as though nothing had occurred to mar the solemnity of the occasion."

SAVED HER WHEN A BABY.

And Thirty Years After He Met and Married Her.

A romantic marriage occurred at Atlanta a few days ago, the parties to it being Mr. H. F. Bailey, of Jackson, Miss., and Miss Hodges, of Virginia. Mr. Bailey is somewhat past 50 years of age and the bride is about 30, says an exchange.

The couple first met during the war when Miss Hodges was a baby. It happened when the northern soldiers approached Jackson, Miss. The parents of Miss Hodges resided there at the time, and when the grand rush to avoid the Yankees was made Mr. Bailey, then a confederate soldier, secured a wagon and moved the Hodges family. In the hurry and excitement the little girl was forgotten, and she was not missed until the family had gone several miles.

Mr. Bailey volunteered to go back and find her, which he did. The child was found in the road near her home crying. Mr. Bailey carried her to her parents.

Soon after that Mr Hodges moved with his family to Virginia, and Mr. Bailey saw them no more for 30 years.

Last year, says the Chicago News, his wife died, and it occurred to him to look up his old friends and see what had become of the little girl whom he had saved from the invaders in the long ago. He went to Virginia and found her teaching school. They corresponded and agreed to meet at Atta during the fair and be married.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Pheobe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St. San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result every thing else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Baker & Hall's drug store. When it comes to blow, Ypsilanti is not in it with Ann Arbor, as the following from the Ypsilantian will testify: A few days ago our enterprising grocery man, M. J. Lewis, went to Ann Arbor to collect payment of a bill from Henry Robbins, a colored barber. In the conversation between the two, Mr. Lewis used some language which was not agreeable to the barber's sense of propriety, and he responded by giving Mr. Lewis a sound blowing up,—part of the blow striking him in the face. Robbins was arrested and brought before Justice Childs for a hearing, and Tuesday the case was adjourned till Feb. 19.

Apropos of Dr. Jameson's raid, the newspapers lately have been filled with dispatches from the Transvaal, but it is safe to say that few people know anything about its inhabitants. An article in the March Forum, by Captian T. R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore, Md., announce a new book, "Story of Turkey and Armenia." This book will contain a full and graphic account of the recent Armenian massacres, which have aroused the civilized world. A number of articles have been written by men of international reputation for this book, and it will be beautifully illustrated with nearly one hundred engravings, and will be sold by subscription.

Did you eat chicken pie with the W. R. C. or didn't you? Some did and some didn't. George and Martha were there. It was a regular George Washington supper and reminded one of Valley Forge. Provisions were a little low at the last end. The ladies of the W. R. C. have too famous a reputation as architects of chicken pie. Their friends were simply too many for them. However, they are willing to try again and will come prepared to make up for what they lost before.

A well known and wealthy farmer of Cambridge has been accused of allowing his stock to suffer and die this winter, from lack of proper food and care. The case is being investigated and it is to be hoped that, if the report be true, the miserable farmer will get what he deserves. Hundreds of farmers are poor and short of feed but with good care and economical feeding they are bringing their stock through the winter in good shape. When a man of means lets his stock starve, nothing is bad enough for him.

Most people are interested in the mysteries of stage scenery, of which a descriptive account by W. J. Henderson, fully illustrated, can be found in Harper's Round Table for February, 18th. In the same number an article by J. Parmly Paret gives a satisfactory idea of the restoration of the once famous elephant, Tip. A series of pictures accompanying the article shows how the frame was built up on which Tip's skin was finally placed. "The Little Corporal," by Juliana Conover, and "The Skating Brigade," by Elizabeth S. Hickok, are two stories that lend interest to this excellent number.

The sensational rural comedy drama, "Joshua Simpkins," will be produced at Sutton's Opera House, March 4. The play contains an interesting and intelligible plot, but it is not allowed to interfere with the fun, which is said to be in abundance. During the run of the play some startling scenes and situations are seen, principal of which may be said to be the country saw mill, in the third act, shown in complete operation cutting up real timber. The saw used is the genuine article, same as used in large country saw mills. An excellent band and orchestra accompany this attraction. The band will parade at noon, when some good music may be looked for.

Mr. Kirk Monroe, who is so well known as the author of tales of adventure for boys, will begin the publication of another of his Western stories, entitled "Rick Dale," in the number of Harper's Round Table to be issued next week. The story follows the adventures of a young Californian, the son of a millionaire, who, until his fourteenth or fifteenth year, has had no experience among boys of his own age, and knows nothing of the value of money or of the practical life of the average American boy. At the opening of the story he is seized with a longing to see something of life on his own account, and instead of going to Japan with a tutor, allows the steamer to sail without him; and then begins a series of adventures with smugglers on Puget Sound, in log camps in Washington, and with mountain-climbing expeditions which, before the end of the book is reached, give him more practical information than most boys of his age ever acquire, and develop a character within him that surprises his father more than anyone else. The story will run through the spring in Harper's Round Table, and is one of the best that Mr. Monroe has yet written.

The Fencing Master will be presented by the Whitney Opera Co., at Croswell's opera house, Adrian, Thursday night, March 5. The Lake Shore train will be held to give the people on the branch an opportunity to see the play.

The W. C. T. U. will meet with Mrs. Tilton during the month of March. Let the members bear in mind that on the second Friday in March occurs the election of officers for the ensuing year. It is earnestly desired that every member be present.

We publish this week a large batch of council proceedings which include reports and the financial statement. This is of unusual interest to taxpayers. It shows that the Brownville bridge cost $3,247.20 of which $800 was paid by the township. It also gives facts and figures in regard to the water bonds.

News was received here Wednesday of the death of Mrs. Mary W. Osborn, which occurred early on the morning of that day. The deceased was the widow of John W. Osborn and mother of J. H. Osborn, of this place, and was formerly well known, together with her husband, as among the pioneer residents of Tecumseh. Death occurred at Elkhart, where she had made her home for several years with her daughter, Mrs. F. W. Hart. Mrs. Osborn was in her 87th year. The remains will be brought here tomorrow, and the funeral held at the home of J. H. Osborn Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The exercises at the East and West branch schools were well attended last Friday and the visitors were as well pleased.

The class in Civil Government are encouraged in the matter of penmanship. They had the opportunity to look at the autographs of a large number of Congressmen last Wednesday, the majority of which were perfectly illegible.

The Joshua Simpkins Street Parade.

The Joshua Simpkins Co., which appears at Sutton's Opera House, Wednesday, March 4, will make their famous street parade about noon of the day of the performance. This company carry two elegant bands, military and country bands, both of which will appear in the parade. After parading the different prominent streets both bands will assemble in front of the Lilley House about 1 o'clock, where the country band assisted by the military band will render the latest descriptive musical number entitled "Fourth of July on the Farm," in which many clever imitations are introduced. Among which are the singing of birds, horses trotting, the arrival of the express train, blowing of the whistle, applying of the air brakes, etc. The whole affair winding up with a jolly country dance by Joshua and the boys. Don't miss it for it is as funny as a circus.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, then laxatives or other remedies are not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, then one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Blessings of Christ's Love—A Plea for a General Awakening in Religion—Striking Similies and Metaphors.

Through a supernatural lens, or what I might call a prophescope, dying Jacob looks down through the corridors of the centuries until he sees Christ the center of all popular attraction and the greatest being in all the world, so everywhere acknowledged. It was not alway so. The world tried hard to put Him down and to put Him out. In the year 1200, while excavating for antiquities 33 miles northeast of Rome, a copper-plate tablet was found containing the death warrant of the Lord Jesus Christ, reading in this wise:

"In the year 17 of the empire of Tiberius Cæsar, and on the 25th of March, I, Pontius Pilate, governor of the Practore, condemn Jesus of Nazareth to die between two thieves, Quintus Cornelius to lead him forth to the place of execution."

The death warrant was signed by several names. First, by Daniel, rabbi Pharisee; secondly, by Johannes, rabbi; thirdly, by Raphael; fourthly, by Capet, a private citizen. The capital punishment was executed according to law. The name of the thief crucified on the right hand side of Christ was Dismas; the name of the thief crucified on the left-hand side of Christ was Gestus. Pontius Pilate, describing the tragedy, says the whole world lighted candles from noon until night. Thirty-three years of maltreatment. They ascribe His birth to bastardy and His death to execuciation. A wall of the city, built about those times and recently exposed by archaeologists, shows a caricature of Jesus Christ, evidencing the contempt in which He was held by many in His day—that caricature on the wall representing a cross and a donkey nailed to it, and under it the inscription: "This is the Christ whom the people worship."

But I rejoice that that day is gone by. Our Christ is coming out from under the world's abuse. The most popular name on earth to-day is the name of Christ. Where He had one friend, Christ has a thousand friends. The scoffers have become the worshipers. Of the 20 most celebrated infidels in Great Britain in our day, 16 have come back to Christ, trying to undo the blatant mischief of their lives—16 out of the 20. Every man who writes a letter or signs a document, wittingly or unwittingly, honors Jesus Christ. We date everything as B. C. or A. D.—B. C., before Christ; A. D., Anno Domini, in the year of our Lord. All the ages of history on the pivot of the upright beam of the cross of the Son of God. B. C., A. D. I do not care what you call Him—whether commeror, of king, or morning star, or sun of righteousness, or balm of Gilead, or Lebanon cedar, or brother, or friend, or take the name used in the verse from which I take my text, and call him Shiloh, which means his son, or the tranquilator, or the peacemaker. Shiloh. I only want to tell you that "unto Him shall the gathering of the people be."

In the first place, the people are gathered around Christ for pardon. No sensible man or healthfully ambitious man is satisfied with his past life. A fool may think he is all right. A sensible man knows he is not. I do not care who the thoughtful man is, the review of his lifetime behavior before God and man gives to him no especial satisfaction. "Oh," he says, "there have been so many things I have done I ought not to have done, there have been so many things I have said I ought never to have said, there have been so many things I have written I ought never to have written, there have been so many things I have thought I never ought to have thought, I must somehow get things readjusted. I must somehow have the past reconstructed; there are days and months and years which cry out against me in horrible vociferation." Ah! my brother, Christ adjusts the past by obliterating it. He does not erase the record of our misdoing with a dash of ink from a register's pen, but lifting His right hand, crushed, red at the palm, He puts it against His bleeding brow, and then against His pierced side, and with the crimson accumulation of all those wounds He rubs out the accusatory chapter. He blots out our iniquities. Oh! never be anxious about the future; better be anxious about the past. I put it not at the end of my sermon, I put it at the front; Mercy and pardon through Shiloh, the sin-pardoning Christ. "Unto Him shall the gathering of the people be." "Oh!" says some man, "I have for 40 years been as bad as I could be, and is there any mercy for me?" Mercy for you. "Oh!" say's someone here, "I had a grand ancestry, the holiest of fathers, and the tenderest of mothers, and for my pertidy there is no excuse. Do you think there is any mercy for me?" Mercy for you. "But," says another man, "I fear I have committed what they call the unpardonable sin, and the Bible says if a man commit that sin, he is neither to be forgiven in this world nor the world to come. Do you think there is any mercy for me?" The fact that you have any solicitude about the matter at all proves positively that you have not committed the unpardonable sin. Mercy for you? O! the grace of God which bringeth salvation!

But, I remark again, the people will gather around Christ as a sympathizer. Oh! we all want sympathy. I hear people talk as though they were independent of it. None of us could live without sympathy. When parts of our family are away, how lonely the house seems until they all get home! But, alas! for those who never come home. Sometimes it seems as if it must be impossible. What, will their feet never again come over the threshold? Will they never again sit with us at the table? Will they never again kneel with us at the family prayer? Shall we never again look into their sunny faces? Shall we never again on earth take counsel with them for our work? Alas! me, who can stand under these griefs? Oh! Christ, Thou canst do more for a bereft soul than any else. It is He who stands beside us to tell of the resurrection. It is He that came to bid peace. It is He that comes to us and breathes into us the spirit of submission until we can look up from the wreck and ruin of our brightest expectations and say: "Father, not my will, but Thine be done." Oh, ye who are bereft, ye anguish-bitten, come into this refuge. The call of those who came for relief to Christ is larger and larger. Unto this Shiloh of omnipotent sympathy the gathering of the people shall be. Oh, that Christ would stand by all these empty cradles, and all these desolated homesteads, and all these broken hearts, and persuade us it is well.

The world can not offer you any help at such a time. Suppose the world comes and offers you money. You would rather live on a crust in a cellar and have your departed loved ones with you than live in palatial surroundings and they away. Suppose the world offers you its honors to console you. What is the presidency to Abraham Lincoln when little Willie lies dead in the White House? Perhaps the world comes and says: "Time will cure it all." Ah, there are griefs that have raged on for 30 years and are raging yet. And yet hundreds have been comforted, thousands have been comforted, millions have been comforted, and Christ had done the work. Oh, what you want is sympathy. The world's heart of sympathy beats very irregularly. Plenty of sympathy when we do not want it, and often when we are in appalling need of it, no sympathy. There are multitudes of people dying for sympathy—sympathy in their work, sympathy in their fatigues, sympathy in their bereavements, sympathy in their financial losses, sympathy in their physical ailments, sympathy in their spiritual anxieties, sympathy in the time of declining years—wide, deep, high, everlasting, almighty sympathy. We must have it, and Christ gives it. This is the cord with which He is going to draw all nations to Him.

At the story of punishment a man's eye flashes and his teeth set and his fist clinches, and he prepares to do battle, even though it be against the heavens; yet what heart so hard but will succumb to the story of compassion! Even a man's sympathy is pleasant and helpful. When we have been in some hour of weakness, to have a brawny man stand beside us and promise to see us through, what courage it gives to our heart and what strength it gives to our arm. Still mightier is a woman's sympathy. Let him tell the story who, when all his fortunes were gone and all the world was against him, came home and found in that home a wife who could write on the top of the empty flour barrel: "The Lord will provide;" or write on the empty wardrobe: "Consider the lilies of the field; if God so clothed the grass of the field, will He not clothe us and ours?" Or let that young man tell the story who has gone the whole round of dissipation. The shadow of the penitentiary is upon him, and even his father says: "Be off! Never come home again!" The young man finds still his mother's arm outstretched for him, and how she will stand at the wicket of the prison to whisper consolation, or get down on her knees before the governor, begging for pardon, hoping on for her wayward boy after all others are hopeless. Or let her tell the story who, under villainous allurement and impatient of parental restraint has wandered off from a home of which she was the idol into the murky and thunderous midnight of abandonment, away from God, and further away, until some time she is tossed on the beach of that early home a mere splinter of a wreck. Who will pity her now? Who will gather these dishonored locks into her lap? Who will wash off the blood from the gashed forehead? Who will tell her of that Christ who came to save the lost? Who will put that weary head upon the clean white pillow and watch by night until the hoarse voice of the sufferer becomes the whisper, and the whisper becomes only a faint motion of the lips, and the faint motion of the lips is exchanged for a silent look, and the cut feet are still, and the weary eyes are still, and the frenzied heart is still, and all is still? Who will have compassion on her when no others have compassion? Mother! Mother!

Oh! there is something beautiful in sympathy—in manly sympathy, wifely sympathy, motherly sympathy; yea, and neighborly sympathy. Why was it that a city was aroused with excitement when a little child was kidnapped from one of the streets? Why were whole columns of the newspapers filled with the story of a litle child? Because we are all one in sympathy, and every parent said: "How if it had been my Lizzie? How if it had been my Mary? How if it had been my Maud? How if it had been my child? How if there had been one unoccupied pillow in our trundle bed tonight? How if my little one—bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh—were to-night carried captive into some den of vagabonds, never to come back to me? How if it had been my sorrow looking out of the window, watching and waiting—that sorrow worse than death?" Then when they found her why did we declare the news all through the households, and everybody that knew how to pray said: "Thank God?" Because we are all one, bound by one great golden chain of sympathy. Oh! yes, but I have to tell you that if you will aggregate all neighborly, manly, wifely, motherly sympathy, it will be found only a poor starving thing compared to the sympathy of our great Shiloh, who has held in His lap the sorrows of the ages, and who is ready to lay on His holy heart the woes of all who will come to Him. Oh! what a God, what a Saviour we have!

But in larger vision see the nations in some kind of trouble ever since the world was derailed and hurled down the embankments. The demon of sin came to this world, but other demons have gone through other worlds. The demon of conflagrat on, the demon of volcanic disturbance, the demon of destruction.

I have thought that this particular age in which we live may be given up to discoveries and inventions by which through quick and instantaneous communication all cities and all countries and all lands will be brought together, and then in another period, perhaps, these inventions which have been used for worldly purposes will be brought out for Gospel invitation, and some great prophet of the Lord will come and snatch the mysterious, sublime and miraculous telephone from the hand of commerce, and all hands and kingdoms connected by a wondrous wire, this prophet of the Lord may, through telephone communication, in an instant announce to all nations pardon and sympathy and life through Jesus Christ, and then, putting the wondrous tube to the ear of the Lord's prophet, the response shall come back: "I believe in God, the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and earth, and in Jesus Christ, His only, begotten Son." You and I may not live to see the day; I think those of us who are over forty years of age can scarcely expect to see the day. I expect before that time our bodies will be sound asleep in the hammocks of the old Gospel ship as it goes sailing on. But Christ will wake us up in time to see the achievement. We who have sweated in the hot harvest-fields will be at the door of the garner when the sheaves come in. The work for which in this world we toiled and wept, and struggled and wore ourselves out shall not come to consummation and we be oblivious of the achievement. We will be allowed to come out and shake hands with the visitors. We who fought in the earlier battles will have just as much right to rejoice as those who reddened their feet in the last Armageddon. Ah! yea, those who could only give a cupful of cold water in the name of a disciple, those who could only scrape a handful of lint for a wounded soldier, those who could only administer to old age in its decrepitude, those who could only coax a poor waif of the street to go back home to her God, those who could only lift a little child in the arms of Christ, will have as much right to take part in the ovation to the Lord Jesus Christ as a Chrysostom. It will be your victory and mine, as well as Christ's. He the conqueror, we shouting in His train, Christ the victor will pick out the humblest of His disciples in the crowd, and, turning half around on the white horse of victory, He shall point her out for approval by the multitude as He says: "She did what she could." Then, putting His hand on the head of some man who, by his industry, made one talent do the work of ten, He will say: "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over ten cities." Two different theories about the fulfillment of this promise.

There are people who think Christ will come in person and sit on a throne. Perhaps He may. I should like to see the scarred feet going up the stairs of a palace in which all glories of the Alhambra, and the Taj Mahal, and the St. Mark's, and the winter palace are gathered. I should like to see the world pay Christ in love for what it did to Him in maltreatment. I would like to be one of the grooms of the chargers, holding the stirrup as the King mounts. O! what a glorious time it would be on earth if Christ would break through the heavens, and right here where He has suffered and died have this prophecy fulfilled: "Unto Him shall the gathering of the people be." But failing in that, I bargain to meet you at the ponderous gate of Heaven on the day when our Lord shall come back. Garlands of all nations on His brow—of the bronzed nations of the south and the palid nations of the north—Europe, Asia, Africa, North and South America, and the other continents that may arise meantime from the sea, to take the places of their sunken predecessors; Arch of Trajan, Arch of Titus, Arch of Triumph in the Champs Elysees, all too poor to welcome the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, and Conqueror of conquerors in His august arrival. Turn out all Heaven to meet Him. Hang all along the route the flags of earthly dominion, whether decorated with crescent, or star, or eagle, or lion, or coronet. Hang out Heaven's brightest banner, with its one star of Bethlehem and blood-striped of the cross. I hear the procession now. Hark! the tramp of the feet, the rumbling of the wheels, the clattering of the hoofs, and the shouts of the riders. Ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands. Put up in Heaven's library, right beside the completed volume of the world's ruin, the completed volume of Shiloh's triumph. The old promise struggling through the ages fulfilled at last: "Unto Him shall the gathering of the people be."

And scenes of bliss forever new,
Rise in succession to their view.

HAD HIM FAST.

A Yankee's Remark at the Tomb of Lord Nelson.

The English people will never understand the humorous temper of the American, which makes him ask such questions as that recorded by Mark Twain as having been asked by a friend of his in the British museum. A guide had exhibited an Egyptian mummy, and discoursed long upon the antiquity of it, and the Egyptian process of embalming, and so forth; and at last the American asked: "Is he dead?"

It was only recently, according to a letter in an exchange, that in St. Paul's cathedral a London guide held forth thus to an American gentleman:

"That, sir, is the tomb of the greatest naval 'ero Europe or the whole world ever knew!"

"Yes?"

"It is, sir, the tomb of Lord Nelson. This marble sarcophiggus weighs 42 tons. Hinside that is a steel receptacle weighing 12 tons, and hinside that is a leaden casket, 'ermetically sealed, weighing two tons. Hinside that is a ma'ogany coffin 'olding the ashes of the great 'ero."

"Well," said the Yankee, after reflecting a moment, "I guess you've got him. If he ever gets out of that, telegraph me at my expense."

Generalization.

Saloons.

I believe that every right-minded man and woman will say that the saloon is a curse, and that the American people will not rest until the great evil is eradicated.—Rev. Dr. Dalton, Congregationalist, Portland, Me.

Sympa—Bah! A woman doesn't deserve any sympathy, when the knowing better is so easy and the doing better is so cheap. Think of inhaling the steam and odors from a tub of dirty clothing, perhaps from the sick room, perhaps much soiled from honest labor. Think of the weak lungs, and throat, the germs of disease, etc., etc. It's all so unnecessary and so ineffective. The clothes are not as clean (surely not as pure) as they ought to be, when the work is done. Boil your clothes in Pearline and water—directions on each package—every grocer has it

Complete Recovery by the Use of

"Some years ago, as a result of too close attention to business, my health failed. I became weak, nervous, was unable to look after my interests, and manifested all the symptoms of a decline. I took three bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, began to improve at once, and gradually increased my weight from one hundred and twenty-five to two hundred pounds. Since then, I and my family have used this medicine when needed, and we are all in the best of health, a fact which we attribute to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I believe my children would have been fatherless to-day had it not been for Ayer's Sarsaparilla, of which preparation I cannot say too much."—H. O. Hyssox, Postmaster and Planter, Kinard's, S. C.

Centuries ago, people used to fear what they called the pestilence. "Black Death" was the most terrible thing in the world to them. They feared it as people now fear the Cholera and Yellow Fever. And yet there is a more terrible thing than any of these. There is a thing that causes more misery and more deaths than any of these. It is the commonest trouble human beings suffer from. It is so common that nine-tenths of all the sickness in the world is traceable to it. It is merely a simple, common thing—constipation. There is no telling what it may lead to, but it is sure to lead to something bad. Its immediate effects are unpleasant in the extreme. It makes people listless, gives them headaches, makes the digestion poor, causes dizziness, loss of appetite, loss of sleep, foul breath and distress after eating. And this merely because Nature has been imposed upon, and has been refused the little help she needed.

This little help is furnished by Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One pill is a mild laxative and two a mild cathartic. There are two remarkable things about the Pellets." One is that they never gripe; the other that they cure permanently. There is no other medicine that does cure permanently. You can take any other medicine you like, as long as you like, and when you stop, your trouble will come back quickly, and the chances are the trouble will be worse than it was before. This is true of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Just take them until you get yourself into perfect working order, and then you stop. You don't have to take any more "Pellets" unless after a while you do something that deranges your digestive system again. We are not guessing about these facts, and we don't ask you to take our unsupported word for it. Thousands of people have found out they are true, and have testified to them. Let the druggist who says that something else is "just as good" sell that something else to somebody else. Don't let him trifle with your health for the sake of a little more profit to himself.

SOUND OF THE SUNBEAM.

One of the most wonderful discoveries in science that have been made within the last year or two is the fact that a beam of light produces sound. A beam of sunlight is thrown through a lens on a glass vessel that contains lampblack, colored silk or worsted or other substances, says a writer in Pearson's Weekly. A disk having slits or openings cut in it is made to revolve swiftly in this beam of light so as to cut it up, thus making alternate flashes of light and shadow.

On putting the ear to the glass vessel strange sounds are heard so long as the flashing beam is falling on the vessel. Recently a more wonderful discovery has been made. A beam of sunlight is caused to pass through a prism so as to produce what is called the solar spectrum, or rainbow. The disk is turned and the colored light of the rainbow is made to break through it.

Now place the ear to the vessel containing the silk, wool or other material. As the colored lights of the spectrum fall upon it sounds will be given by different parts of the spectrum and there will be silence in other parts.

For instance, if the vessel contains red worsted and the green light flashes upon it loud sounds will be given. Only feeble sounds will be heard if the red and blue parts of the rainbow fall upon the vessel and other colors make no sound at all. Green silk gives sounds best in red light.

Every kind of material gives more or less sound in different colors and utters no sound in others.

BIRD CATCHING.

There is something almost supernatural about the dexterity of the natives of India. A bird is seen perched on some overhanging bough. Very well, then. The native, with his catlike tread, creeps underneath and takes up his position, motionless, breathless, a living statue crouching down among the grass. In his hands are a bundle of reeds, one of which is tipped with bird lime. To this he adds another at the lower end, and another and another. Slowly the rods grow, so slowly that the unsuspecting victim does not notice that every second it is creeping nearer and nearer. Length after length is joined, until the bird sees for the first time a tall reed quivering slightly in the breeze. There is nothing terrifying in this. The next instant the reed flutters against the gay plumage of the victim and the waiting Indian springs to his feet with a cry of exultation. As a rule, however, the bird is soon released again. The native carries his treasure into the town, and finds out one by whose religion the lives of birds are sacred. He then demands the little creature's ransom with a threat that unless immediately paid the bird shall be killed. The bargain concluded, he lets the frightened creature go, pockets the money and sets to work to capture it again.

PRODIGAL WITH HIS WEALTH.

Russian Spendthrift Who Squanders Millions Every Year.

Le Petit Sucrier has found a successor in St. Petersburg. He is Max II., his age is 22, his pocket money 2,000,000 rubles, and the source of his revenue is ancestral trade. The special form of extravagance which he has made popular among the golden youth who so speedily molt their golden plumage is the beggars' supper. It is a banquet of extremes, says the Pall Mall Gazette, a gathering of the fine flower of the demi-monde and the most ragged and ravenous beggars who can be picked up in the streets of St. Petersburg. He lately paid 1,000 rubles to a well-known gambling establishment for the exclusive use of their salons on one particular night. He then sallied out into the streets and returned with his beggars' opera. Then came tradesmen, bringing the richest dishes; musicians, waiters, singers, the bands of Comus and a jury of 12 fair frailties, who were to decide what reveler had been the wildest and wittiest in the evening's revel. The mendicants received gold and the ladies diamonds, and the Christmas tree was plundered of its pearl and ruby blossoms. The beggars and nymphs hailed Max II. as one of the wonders of the world, applauded with both hands and strewed palms on his returning path. Meanwhile, the family of this notable boyar are taking alarm and casting about vainly for a remedy. A gold cure has been found for the disease of drink, but who will give a cure for the disease of gold?

ABOUT SPONGES.

The color, size and shape of the sponges are as varied as their distribution; violets, reds, greens are frequent colors, due, perhaps, in some cases to mimicry, or protective resemblance. In shape and size, says Good Words, some are flattened, globular masses of small size, others are great tree-like growths, several feet round; others wide, deep cups, and others little lacework tubes of the finest spun glass. Some are tough and horny, and live in shallow, and, therefore, rough water, and need a strong skeletal framework; others are delicate and brittle, and only flourish in the quiet depths of the sea. The horny sponge, as the sponges of commerce are called, from their tough, horny skeleton, which we know so well flourish in the greatest abundance in water from 30 to 40 fathoms in depth.

The delicate silicious sponges, however, which would be utterly smashed to pieces in this rough water, are only found far below this. Along the coasts of Portugal and Brazil beautiful specimens were found by the Challenger, flourishing in great abundance at the depth of 1,00 fathoms, and from that down to 2,000 fathoms, or between two and three miles beneath the sea level, they were found lying upon or embedded in the soft mud which covers the bottom of the sea. The greatest number of sponges, however, grow in water from 500 to 1,000 fathoms in depth.

MODERN NAVAL GUNS.

Some time ago the English government experimented with a 13-inch gun on a ship of the Royal Sovereign class. At the first firing of the gun the entire upper deck was lifted from its position and sprung along its entire center, so great was the shock. The United States battleship Indiana has been specially equipped to provide against any such disaster and her decks have been constructed in such a manner that naval experts agree that no such damage can befall her when the 13-inch guns send out their flaming message.

Naval experts are agreed, however, says the Philadelphia Times, that when she is in action and the four 13-inch guns are performing their deadly work the explosions will shatter every piece of woodwork and glass in every portion of the vessel. That is expected and prepared for, and for that reason the battleship Indiana is composed almost entirely of iron and steel. She has been aptly described as an enormous floating steel fort with a ship built around it for purposes of navigation. Fully one-half of her could be shot away and she would still float and retain her unequaled fighting power.

These facts and figures should bring us to a realization of what a serious thing war is in these modern times.

Slight But National Change.

A hotel in Switzerland bore on one of its walls the time-honored inscription: "Hospes, salve!" (Welcome, stranger!) After rebuilding, the above legend had to be restored, but the painter, who must have had some experience as a traveler, made a very slight alteration in one of the words, and the inscription now reads: "Hospes, solve!" (Pay, stranger!)

A SOCIETY ITEM.

It was at the Emerald ball, and the young society reporter sharpened her wits and her pencils, that full and satisfactory description of each costume might be presented. Surrounding her were those most desirous of seeing their names and gowns in print, and in the crowd stood a shop girl, gowned in flimsy pink cheesecloth of indescribable cut.

When her turn came for inspection, says the New York Times, it was with a hopeless eye that the reporter surveyed the toilet. The artful question, however, was asked as usual:

"And your name and gown?"

"Miss Matilda Jenkins, attired in pink crepon and diamonds," was the studied and prompt reply.

"Pink crepon," wrote the newspaper woman, delighted with the new and elegant name for cheesecloth, but her pencil refused to add "and diamonds" until her quick eyes had discovered on the girl's collar a tiny rhinestone as big as a pinhead. Then "and diamonds" went down in the notebook as proudly as if announcing tiaras and stomachers of purest luster.

The next day all the girls behind a notion counter exclaimed enviously over a well-worn newspaper clipping, which read: "Miss Matilda Jenkins, attired in pink crepon and diamonds," and when the society reporter glanced over the printed words she felt never a pang as to the accuracy of the information she had given to the public.

THEIR TURN TO RUN.

The Experience of Two Bear Hunters in the Mountains of Oregon.

A bear hunt which terminated in a manner at once disappointing and surprising, is described by the Portland Oregonian. It occurred in the mountains of Oregon, whither two gentlemen had betaken themselves for a vacation trip.

Several days were spent in trout fishing. Then one of the men expressed a strong desire for a day's shooting for larger game. They set out the next morning bright and early, and after hours of fruitless tramping were about returning to camp, when suddenly they saw straight before them a brown bear sitting on his haunches, under a blueberry bush, and gorging himself with the berries.

Both hunters fired, and the bear, with an ugly growl, disappeared. The men hastened after him, but were unable to overtake him. For half an hour or more they followed the trail. Then all at once they came to a clearing. In the clearing was a cabin, and on the porch of the cabin sat the brown bear with one of his forelegs in a sling!

The hunters were greatly taken aback, as may well be supposed, but were still more surprised when they saw a man hastening toward them with a gun. They turned and ran, the man after them. They got away in safety, and learned afterward that the bear was a family pet, the owner of which was naturally angry at finding it ill-treated."

A LAND WITHOUT ANIMALS.

Strangers in Japan Are Forcibly Struck with This Lack.

Japan is a land without the domestic animals. It is this lack which strikes the stranger so forcibly in looking upon Japanese landscapes. There are no cows—the Japanese neither drink milk nor eat meat. There are but few horses, and these are imported mainly for the use of the foreigners. The fruit cars in the city streets are pulled and pushed by coolies, and the pleasure carriages are drawn by men. There are but few dogs, and these are neither used for watch dogs, beasts of burden nor in hunting, except by foreigners.

There are no sheep in Japan, and wool is not used in clothing, silk and cotton being the staples. There are no pigs—pork is an unknown article of diet, and lard is not used in cooking. There are no goats or mules or donkeys. Wild animals there are, however, and, in particular, bears of enormous size. One of these, seen stuffed in a museum, is described as "big as an ox." Beside another stuffed museum bear is preserved in alcohol the mangled body of a child the bear had eaten just before being killed.

War, of course, is acquainting the Japanese with the use of animals. The army has cavalry horses and others to drag the field guns. The empress, also, in obvious imitation of European royalties, is an expert horsewoman, and saddle horses are kept for her use.

IN THE FAR WEST.

How Freighters Kept the Whisky's Weight and Quality Unimpaired.

A man at one of the hotels the other night told an interesting story of how the freighters of the far west used to supply themselves with whisky, says the Louisville Courier-Journal. He said that some years ago when all freight was hauled in wagons, he happened to make a trip of several hundred miles with a train of wagons carrying merchandise to remote stations. Nearly every wagon contained one or more barrels of whisky.

"The first night out I noticed," said he, "great activity around the whisky barrels. The wagons each had a hatchet and a gimlet. They would knock up a hoop, bore a hole, draw all the whisky they wanted, then put about as much fine gravel in the barrel as they had drawn out whisky, drive a plug in the hole and put the hoop back in place.

"I learned afterward that the barrels were weighed and the whisky tested before it was turned over to the freighters, and that when it arrived at its destination it was again weighed and tested. The gravel supplied the weight and bulk and the quantity remained the same, and this is why it was used instead of water to supply the place of what had been taken out."

A Visit to Baldwin Home—A Midnight Visit to Haleakala, the "House of the Sun."

At last horses were brought for our party to cross over to the Baldwin Home. Then came a momentary hitch in the arrangement caused by Miss Kate Field, who was unaccustomed to the Hawaiian style of riding. But she had to yield to the inevitable. She was determined to see the Baldwin Home; it was too far to walk, and there was not a side-saddle on the entire island; so, by the kindness of Miss Reynolds, she was soon attired in divided skirts, and by the combined efforts of Senator Waterhouse and myself safely mounted on a sad-eyed, dapple gray horse, into whose good graces she soon began to ingratiate herself by patting his neck and appealing to his honor not to go faster than a walk.

The Baldwin Home for boys, which is under Catholic management, contains a score of houses, play room, school rooms, hospitals, and living houses, all neatly and cleanly furnished. Here we met Brother Joseph Dutton, as he is known, a man who for fifteen years has devoted his life to the care of the lepers. He is a plain, unassuming Christian man, who, in his brave, humble way, is more nearly following in the footsteps of his Master than any other person it has been my lot to meet. To one visiting his plain little room, devoid of even the smallest luxury, uncarpeted and unpainted, and realizing that he is constantly in greater danger than if facing cannon, it seems as tho' he were in the presence of a superior being.

He took us to the different apartments of the lepers, all clean, neat, whitewashed, plain and comfortable. All the while he was explaining to us that such a ward was where the cases were not so bad, the next was where they were lower and weaker, here the unfortunate beings were able to crawl out on the porch, and sit and gaze on the sea, sky, and earth once more.

"Here is where they are brought when in the last stages," he explained, as we entered a house which, despite its cleanliness and bare whitewashed walls, gave forth a sickening odor. "These poor people won't last long."

Four or five fingerless and toeless wretches whose horribly disfigured features made them frightful to behold, were on the front porch.

"These," said Brother Joseph, "are still able to come out." Then as we entered the hospital he added: "These can not live long. Those three are dying, this one is almost gone." Pointing to a vacant cot he added: "One died last night; we just took him out and will bury him tomorrow. That poor fellow is nearly dead."

I went over to the dying leper. He still breathed, tho' unconscious. He lay on his side with his head over the side of his cot. His hand and feet were gone, his eyes were out, his ears and nose gone, and in fact he was only a horribly mutilated trunk with little resemblance to a human being. Sickened at the sight and deathly odor of leprosy, I staggered to the door and was soon again in fresh air.

We called at the house where Sisters Cassentia and Vinsentia lived, those holy, angelic women who are devoting their lives to caring for the lepers. They wash and dress their sores, make their beds, wash their clothing, and keep them neat and clean. Tho' they have lived among them for years, they have been wonderfully preserved.

Too much praise cannot be given the Hawaiian government for its care of these unfortunate people. The eleven hundred twenty lepers on Molokai cost the government nearly ten thousand dollars per month. By this lavish expenditure of money and with the aid of the Catholic missionaries, the lives of these poor people are as pleasant and easy as it is possible to make them.

From Honolulu to Maui is but a short voyage. The little inter-island steamship, Claudine, belonging to the Wilder Steamship Company, left Honolulu on Tuesday, December 3, 1895, carrying myself among other passengers, and at six o'clock the next day dropped anchor in the harbor of Kakului.

The first glance of Kakului is by no means inspiring. A collection of low houses along a beach washed by the surf, a railway train, consisting of one passenger and one flat car, in waiting, and a dozen or more Chinese huts were all that was visible. There was not a sign of a hotel or place where a weary traveler might rest. A French lady, Madam Waldfogel, who lived in Pala, her husband, a Swiss, being a merchant there, went ashore in the same boat with me.

"You are a stranger here?" she asked.

"Yes, madam. Can you tell me if I can find a hotel in Kakului?"

"No. There is none."

"No restaurant?"

A Chinaman keeps a miserable restaurant there, but don't go to his place. I live in Pala. You had better come with me."

I thanked her very kindly, and at once accepted her very welcome invitation. Our boat load consisted of this lady, myself, one native woman and child, two white men from Honolulu, and a dozen or more Kanakas.

"Are you going up to Haleakala?" asked one of the young gentlemen from Honolulu.

I answered that I was.

"We are going up today and would be glad to have your company."

As it made but little difference to me when I went up to the great extinct volcano, I consented to make the trip at once. My friend, Mr. J. S. Colville, at Pala, would send for me, and provide me with a guide and horses for the ascent.

We landed, and while I was placing my valise and umbrella on the flat car Madam Waldfogel went into the station and telephoned to her husband that she was coming home with a stranger to breakfast.

After a ride of six or seven miles, passing through Spreckiesville, we reached Pala. The kind and hospitable Swiss gentleman, Waldfogel, met us at the depot in Pala, and seemed as pleased to meet me as if I had been on old acquaintance. He insisted on carrying my baggage to his store, telephoned my arrival to Mr. Colville, the manager of the Pala plantation, and urged me to go to the house and have breakfast with himself and wife.

The Chinese servants had prepared an excellent breakfast, which we had nearly finished when I was told that my friend Mr. Colville had arrived and waited at the gate. He had come over from the plantation on horseback, with a Japanese boy and a horse and brake to convey me and my luggage to his house. He asked if I wanted to make the ascent that day, and being informed I did, said I had better stop at the office and arrange an hour for starting with the young men from Honolulu, whose names were Harry and Ed. Benner.

We met at the planter's office and arranged to start as soon after twelve as possible. The Honolulu gentlemen were to procure horses at the home of Mr. Baldwin and meet us at a place about five miles along the road.

Before starting Mr. Colville showed me about the plantation, and explained the system of irrigation. I saw hundreds of busy Japs and Chinamen at work in his fields. The system by which the water is taken up and down hill and every stalk of cane supplied, requires very skillful engineering. Mr. Colville was for three years manager of both the Pala and Haiku plantations. Under his skillful supervision the Pala plantation has been made the second best paying plantation on the islands.

As we were to start at twelve sharp, a lunch was made ready at half past eleven, and Mrs. Colville prepared some sandwiches and cakes for myself and guide while on the mountain. This guide was a young Portugese named Manuel Davera, a faithful and capable fellow.

We mounted our steeds and galloped down a long, broad road, as smooth and hard as a turnpike. On either side were vast cane fields with men, women, and children at work in them.

The place at which we were to meet the Benners from Honolulu was a cross roads store kept by a Chinaman. Here we tied our horses and went to the porch where I perched myself, to wait, on a dry goods box, meanwhile watching a Chinaman tailor manipulate a sewing machine.

Presently a white man came to the store from the telephone and said that the Benners were detained, and for us to wait for them. I sat on my goods box, kicked my heels against it, the Chinese tailor made his machine hum, and Manuel, who sat on the step with an anxious, despairing look, rolled a cigaret and smoked in silence. A herd of horses were driven along the dusty thoroughfare, which was followed a few moments later by a herd of cattle. A horseman was discovered galloping around a bend in the road. I started up hoping it was one of the Benners, and expected the other to come out of the lane in a moment, but the rider proved to be a school miss riding a la Hawaiian in divided skirts. Manuel sighed, said we would be late, rolled another cigaret, and watched the road impatiently.

At the elevation we now were the wind was blowing an autumn gale, and the leaves rustled somewhat as they do in New England in September.

Time passed. School was out and the children had gone home, when a carriage, drawn by a span of black horses, came from the lane and drove up to the store. My Honolulu friends were in the rear seat, and I hastened to greet them. They apologized for the delay they had occasioned, and as soon as possible we were on our way galloping along a road which grew steeper at every step.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

Husbandry, Political Economy and Sociology Reviewed.

The farmer is the salt of the earth, and especially of that part known in the geography as the United States, and if this country, as seems to be the case, is loosing a few grains of its salt, the place to look for the leak is in the condition of our agricultural class. The farmers themselves realize this, which fact was evidenced by the character of the proceedings of the institute held here last Friday. There was a time when the topics and discussions of a gathering of this kind would have been confined to the consideration of purely agricultural questions. The nucleus of thought would have been that famous and symbolic vegetable, the pumpkin, and the dissertations would have been bounded on one side by cut worms and on the other by the worm of a rail fence. But things have changed and the worm has turned. Our farmers have come to a realization of the fact that they are the only ones to look after their own interests, and as a class are taking a much more lively interest in public and political affairs than was true of them in former times. Every tiller of the soil has well grounded opinions of his own in regard to finance, taxation, and matters of public policy. Hence the meeting of last Friday was given up largely to papers which treated of the various subjects of public policy and their relation to the farmer, and resembled as much the doings of a club organized for the purpose of discussing the phases of political economy as one for the propogation of modern theories of agriculture. In fact, it might be said that the various clubs of this vicinity which united for this institute are well organized societies whose meetings furnish a practical school for the study of every subject in which their members are interested. They are becoming the primaries of political thought and discussion among the agricultural population. They are to the rural districts what the reform clubs and independent political organizations are to our great cities, and their promoters and members are to be congratulated on the opportunities which they offer in this direction.

The program was carried out as announced in last week's Herald. The discussions which followed the papers on finance brought out considerable interesting debate on this absorbing topic, in which Willard Stearns, of the Adrian Press, and L. D. Watkins, of Manchester, participated. We print below a brief synopsis of the proceedings, furnished by Misses Leva Gillespie and Winnie Richard:

MORNING SESSION.

The Northern Lenawee Farmers' Institute met at the Armory in accordance with previous notice. The meeting was called to order by the president, A. Richard, and opened with prayer by Rev. C. M. Brown. A quartette of young girls favored the audience with some excellent music, after which a cordial welcome was extended to the Institute by the village president, J. H. Smith. He spoke of the various organizations of the farmers throughout the country, and said that he was glad that Tecumseh was favored by an Institute composed of the various clubs of this vicinity. He thought the farmers and their families fully competent to conduct a gathering of this kind, and that the discussion of the prevailing topics of the day must result in a great amount of good. He spoke of the intimate relation between the farmer and the merchant, and thought that the taxpayers should discuss questions relating to political economy, and the general weal of the Republic.

In the happy response given by President Richard, he spoke of the great benefits derived from such organizations. The farmers meet to discuss the great questions of interest to our country at large. He spoke of the institute as a gathering of friends and acquaintances, and said that the interests of the country and the village could not be separated—they had grown up together. The farmers recognized the village as the center of the farming interests and each felt an interest in the welfare of the other.

Dr. Waldron read an instructive paper on the topic "Tuberculosis." He explained the various stages of the disease as well as the many means by which it is transmitted and increased. The fact that the stock-raiser and the consumer are both interested in the prevention of the spread of this scourge made the paper very interesting and practical. He recommended the test by inoculation with the Koch Lymph rather than the physical test. He spoke of the present state law in regard to the prevention of the disease as being unwieldy and expensive. Many questions were asked, which were promptly and satisfactorily answered.

Next followed a declamation by Herbert Munger, entitled "The Sermon and the Sawmen."

The paper read by Miss Bertha Taylor, entitled "Whittier," was a very fine production. Her ideas of Whittier were well expressed and in a very interesting and impressive manner.

Mr. Laing's paper on "Fruit Culture" showed study and investigation of the methods of raising both large and small fruits, also a thorough knowledge of fruits to be raised.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

When the time arrived for the opening of the afternoon session the hall was filled to overflowing.

The paper, "Looking Forward," by L. C. Chase, of Raisin, and "The Present System of Finance" by Geo. S. Rawson, of Clinton, presented both sides of the finance question, in which people at the present time are so much interested. The former advocated Bimetalism and Free Coinage of silver, and the latter the Gold Standard. A spirited discussion followed. Between the reading of these papers Mrs. Will Waldron sang a pleasing solo. Following the discussion a song by Charles B. Hurry, entitled "Hayseeds in His Hair," seemed to serve as an intimation that some day the "hayseeds" will be heard on the finance question.

O. B. Finch portrayed in vivid colors "The Trials and Tribulations of Farm Life." He enumerated the many things with which the farmer has to contend.

Mrs. A. VanValkenburg presented the "Bright Side of Farm Life." Her paper cleared away many of the dark clouds, and gave a more cheerful view of farm life, by enumerating the good and noble things connected with it.

A very fine recitation by Bertha Van Valkenburg closed the exercises for the afternoon.

EVENING SESSION.

Carl Wisner's oration contained many things worthy of notice, especially his showing in regard to that august body called the U. S. Senate.

Hon. J. D. Shull held the audience spell bound with his paper. He treated the great financial question of the day in an able manner. He dealt in facts rather than theories and drew conclusions that can not be questioned.

The paper read by Miss Fern DePuy, entitled "Present Day Tendencies," was excellent and ought to be published in full. Justice can not be done to it in a few brief notes.

Miss Lovina Schreder's recitation, "Pat's Lone Letter," was genuine fun, and sandwiched in well with the more solid productions before and after.

Miss Clara Waldron in her paper advocated a reform in literature, and especially urged upon patents and teachers the importance of providing good books and papers for the children.

The single tax idea found an earnest advocate in Don Bowen. He claimed that the adoption of that system would do away with all the wrongs that existed in any community and make everybody in this broad land of ours prosperous and happy.

The Franklin Orchestra, Rev. Andrus, Sam McClure and others added much to the enjoyment of the day by fine selections of instrumental music.

The institute was a success and everyone went away satisfied with the day off in Tecumseh.

ONSTED.

Candidates for Village Election Ripening—New Church Talked Of.

Regular O. E. S. meeting tonight.

La grippe is quite prevalent just now.

Covenant services were held last Saturday at the F. W. church.

'Tis about caucus time and a goodly crop of spring candidates are now ripening.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Randelph, of Addison, were Onsted visitors a few days ago

The members of the O. E. S. sprung a surprise on Mr. and Mrs. Marsh the other evening.

Arthur Barrows and wife, of Hillsdale Co., were callers among relatives in this vicinity recently.

An increase of trade has caused Chas. Jessup to rent larger rooms in the Freer block for his harness business.

'Tis rumored that the Lima Northern Railroad is pointed this way, and of course Onsted is its objective point.

Geo. Shuler has sold his store building, now occupied by W. E. Muck, to that gentleman and C. E. Desermie.

An eighth grade examination took place here last Saturday, and ten pupils were present from this and neighboring schools.

F. Lewis disposed of his personal effects by auction last Friday afternoon and, as soon as he rents his farm, will move into town where he will work for the Page fence company.

The readers of the Adrian Press are getting that tired feeling by reading that silly stuff that appears quite often in that paper, headed "Victorsville," etc. Better put in some spring poetry or leave that space blank.

The no-creed believers are trying to raise money for the purpose of erecting here in the spring a People's or Unity church building and sheds, where people of all denominations can attend church, the building to be free to all. A worthy project, help it along.

WON BY WHISTLING.

Hartley, or rather his wife, had been giving a musical "At Home," and a performance of sifflеurs had proved the hit of the evening's entertainment.

An hour or so later, the "crowd" having dispersed, Birdy Jackson, Hartley and I were idly discussing the events of the affair in the smoking-room. Jackson and I were stopping over night with our host, being old chums of his, and living some distance out of town.

"No idea you could give us such a ripping performance, Birdy," remarked Hartley; "and when your wife joined in I was perfectly astounded."

Jackson laughed softly.

"No, she doesn't do it at all badly," he admitted. "You know, Dick, there's a bit of romance attached to that whistle of hers; in fact, it was the means of bringing our matrimonial desires to an abrupt point at an extremely critical period in our courtship."

Hartley gave me a gentle kick.

"Then your union had a spice of romance about it?" he said.

"Rather! Unique in the annals of love-making, I should say. But folks are so confounded incredulous nowadays, I've never attempted to tell the yarn but once, and then I swore I'd never do it again."

But he had to on this occasion, and soon began to interest us as follows:

"First of all, you must know, Mr. King"—addressing me—"I'm called Birdy on account of having practiced from earliest infancy a cheap form of musical recreation. Though cuffed as a boy, severely reprimanded for warbling in slack business hours and soundly execrated by the neighbors, I nevertheless persevered.

"A year this last summer I came in for a sum of money, which rendered me a practically wealthy and independent man, and to celebrate my good fortune I threw up my business berth and went into Yorkshire to spend a few weeks with a professional bachelor friend and to idle generally.

"While there I was introduced to a Col. Alton and his daughter Evelyn, aged 22, who lived at the Chase, and were intimate friends of my chum. Nice girl she was; plenty of 'go' without being the least 'fast.' In less than a fortnight I was over head and ears in love with her. The subsequent afternoons at the Chase were too hot for tennis." Col. Alton spent them snoozing in his study. Evelyn's elderly companion and her father's housekeeper—for Mrs. Alton had been dead some years—nodded in the shade of her favorite elm, and my friend had invariably to leave for an important case before the tea came out. Very nice of him, I thought.

"Thus thrown together Evelyn and I monopolized the arbor, and I used to amuse her by trilling selections from the operas, (comic and serious), and she would occasionally join in as a kind of fillip to my performances. Though a woman in every respect, she could whistle. In most of the well-known tunes up to date or pathetically aged, she excelled, owing to the fact that during the winter months for some years past she had always officiated at the piano for the village popular concerts, when the vocal and instrumental items were naturally of an amusing and light order—at times scarcely high-class, perhaps.

"Then came the time when the colonel had to be approached. The old man gave me a prompt and curt refusal. He had other views for his child. I tried remonstrance, then dogged persistency, but with no avail. Evelyn stood out like a brick. This burst of independence resulted in her immediate banishment to regions unknown to me, under the surveillance of a relative of mature age and experience, and all communication between us strenuously denied and forestalled. All chances of elopement, even, were reduced to nil.

"A few days later I left my friend's for Bournemouth, there to recruit my shattered health and think things over quietly. I was crushed for the time being. As I alighted from my cab at the entrance to the North Cliff, where I had taken rooms, an elderly lady came down the steps. Her face seemed somewhat familiar to me, though I could not at the time recall to mind when and where I had seen it before. When she started as she saw me, and somewhat hurriedly reentered the hotel, I was further mystified. A thought struck me as I was signing my name in the hotel register of visitors some time later. Two pages back I found an entry: 'Miss Alton and Miss E. Alton.' I tumbled to it in a second, then. The elderly lady I had encountered was, undoubtedly, Col. Alton's sister, who had been staying at the Chase and left two days after my arrival in the village, and before I knew anything of Evelyn I had once passed her walking with the colonel, and she must have recognized me again.

"I remarked on the entry to the clerk in a casual way, and he volunteered the information that Miss Alton had, but a few moments previously, given notice of her intention to vacate their apartments the next morning. This staggered me. Then Miss Alton certainly did not know all, and decided on flight as the only safe remedy under the circumstances.

"Not a glimpse could I catch of Evelyn. After dinner, from a search on the pier I returned to the North Cliff, and sat disconsolately smoking out on the balcony of my room in the growing dusk. Almost unconsciously I lapsed into melody, and appropriately commenced to warble softly: 'Alice, Where Art Thou?' A slight movement on the balcony above mine, and one window to the left, caused me to glance up. A figure in white met my gaze, with one of its hands, as if demanding silence, pointing warningly to the window behind her. Yes, it was Evelyn, but her attendant dragon of an aunt was evidently close at hand. Verbal communication, as well as writing, was out of the question. It was already too dark for the deaf and dumb manipulation, even provided [illegible] knew its working

An idea suddenly flashed upon me. Why not try? No sooner thought of than done. Softly I whispered the last lines of 'Whisper and I Shall Hear' refrain. A slight shake of the head, and then a rendering of 'Good-by, Sweetheart, 'Good-by,' floated down. Then they were really going away.

"'Evelyn, I don't think it's quite proper for you to be standing there,' came a voice from within, and which, by straining my ears, I could just overhear. My heart beat wildly, and the girl turned to address her aunt without leaving the balcony.

"'It's almost dark now, and I can't stay cooped up all the evening—our last one, too. What does papa want us back in such a hurry for?'

"'Because he wishes it, my dear; that's all the reason I can give you. You really must help me to finish the packing in a few minutes.'

Then her aunt had revealed nothing, and believed her yet to be in ignorance of my presence at the hotel. Lucky, but the case was a desperate one. Evelyn returned to her former position and leaned over again.

"'Where Are You Going To, My Pretty Maid?' I began. There was a momentary pause, and then the answer came in a line of 'Home, Sweet Home.'

"'I do wish you would drop that vulgar habit of whistling,' again came the voice inside the window.

"'But, auntie, there's no piano to ring to,' was the somewhat lame excuse. 'I must do something, and I can't possibly shock anyone up here.'

Then there was silence once more.

'Back to Yorkshire again—No chance there. Anyway, she still cared for me, and I must put her affections to a severe test. It was our only chance of securing happiness.

"'Oh, Naunie, Wilt Thou Gang Wi' Me?' I piped.

"'Where Are You Going To?' was again utilized in reply.

"I was stumped for the minute, but a bar or two of 'Big Ben,' a favorite song of mine, came as a hazardous rescue. She understood, bless her! but a lengthy pause intervened before her answer. Love and duty had a hard struggle. Then: 'No, Sir; No, Sir; No, Sir; No!' was repeated four times in succession. She refused, then! But why so emphatically? What a silly idiot I was! The fourth time the girl in the song said 'No' she meant 'Yes.' I breathed again.

'But about our departure. The morning York train via Bath left at 9:45. The earliest Waterloo was 7.45, and we should be easily tracked and our intentions frustrated in consequence, if we left at such a time. I consulted my watch. It was 9:15. The night train up left at 10:20. Oh, Why Should We Wait Till To-morrow?' went up without delay. 'All's Well' from above soon settled that question satisfactorily, but was followed immediately by a few bars of 'Bradshaw's Guide' ditty. I knew what she wanted, so, after a slight hesitation, I warbled: 'Come Into the Garden, Maud,' and chirped ten times. 'Hope on, dear loved one, we shall meet again, from 'Dream Faces,' proved that I was clearly understood, and then she turned to address Miss Alton in louder tones than before.

"I declare you're nearly asleep, auntie. I'm tired, and have a headache, too. We've a long journey before us, so I think I'll go to my room now. Don't disturb, there's a dear; the packing won't take long in the morning. You'd better do the same.'

"'A good idea, Evy; so we will,' she answered.

"I crept back, and a minute or two later 'Good nights' were exchanged; and the subsequent slam of a door notified that Evelyn had left for her apartments.

"By 9:45 I had settled up and left instructions that my heavy baggage, fortunately not unpacked, would be called or sent for in the course of a week or less, dangling an old telegram form in my hand as I did so, to give color to my hasty departure. At ten prompt I picked up Evelyn under the pines in the hotel gardens, and, with a dressing bag and a small Gladstone between us, walked it to the station and eventually reached London safely, early in the morning. I put her in one hotel, where I knew she would be safe, with strict injunctions not to venture out till I had fixed everything up for the ceremony, and went myself to another. The long and short of it was that before we were anything like tracked the deed had been done by special license and the colonel defeated for once in his life.

"Come round, did he? Yes, when he afterward discovered that the man intended for his daughter had already been engaged for two years, and got married shortly after we did! Even I could have told the old fellow that, had he been more communicative and explicit in the first instance, for my rival turned out to be none other than the friend I was visiting. He actually admits now he couldn't have wished her a better match, but, anyhow, he—"

He rose quietly from his seat and gently opened the smoking-room door.

"Listen," he said; "if you can't quite swallow the yarn, you will not fail to take this in."

Then he went through "Oh, Come, My Lady Fair," from the "Gaiety Girl" song. Scarcely had he concluded than away from another quarter of the house came the answering chorus of "I'm coming," from the negro melody, "Poor Old Joe." Half a minute later in strolled Mrs. Jackson and Hartley's wife.

Birdy winked knowingly at us.

"I've just been telling them how you were practically wooed, and won by whistling, my dear," he remarked to his wife, "and they want another tune before we turn in."

Evelyn blushed. "No, sir," etc., she warbled three times.

Why Your Back is Lame—Why it Aches and Pains, and How to Cure It.

Do you know what it is to have a back that is never free from aches and constant pain, a lame back, a sore back, an aching back, in fact, a back that makes your life a burden? What have you done for it? And does it still keep you from the happiness that perfect health brings to all? We know full well if such is your condition a cure for it will be a blessing you no doubt desire. Plasters won't do it, but may assist in bringing strength. Liniment won't do it; for, while it may give temporary relief, it does not reach the cause. The cause, there's the point; there's where to make the attack. Most backaches come from disordered kidneys, therefore you must correct their action if you would be cured. Read the following from D. D. Cook, whose address is No. 18 Michigan Street, Grand Rapids. He says:—

"I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and wish to say it is a truly great medicine. Thirty years ago I had nervous prostration while in the army, where I served for over four years. I think it was during this service that the seeds were sown which have caused all my trouble. Severe bilious attacks bothered me, and at such times my kidneys were worse. It is almost impossible to describe the pain which so often lamed me. I have been so lame that to stand up after I had been sitting down required a great exertion. Walking was at times an impossibility, even at night I did not rest, being forced to get up during the night. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and wondered if they could make an almost lame man well. I got some, and soon after taking them began to feel their good effects. I used them for some time, my lameness all left me and I have not felt it since. Doan's Kidney Pills have done me an inestimable amount of good."

The late Congressman William H. Crain, of Texas, was one of the best classical scholars ever sent to Congress. It is said that he knew the Iliad and the great Greek tragedies almost by heart.

The man who stands idly by and sees the life fading out of his wife's face, sees her health going, sees her becoming old and faded and wrinkled when she should still be in the perfect enjoyment of vigorous, useful health, is either less than a man or else does not know of the one remedy which will bring her back to health and strength. Perhaps her husband cannot persuade her to go to her doctor, because she naturally dreads the inevitable "examinations" and "local treatments." He can persuade her, if she needs persuasion, to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This truly wonderful medicine has cured hundreds of women after the best physicians have failed. It has been in constant use and tested every day for thirty years. It isn't an experiment, there are no chances about it. It is a certain cure for all derangements, weaknesses, irregularities and displacements of internal organs peculiar to women. 1w

Its a cruel advantage for an older brother to take of a younger, just because he bears a strong family resemblance, to go home with a younger brother's girl and absorb all the sweet little confidences. Girls who are availing themselves of the benefits of leap year should select their escorts, where it is light enough to avoid mistakes. We can't afford to take such chances.

We believe that our village is on the eve of a boom. Straws indicate the direction of the wind. The hard times have been felt here, but indications are that the worst is over and that we are entering upon an era of prosperity. Within a few days the rooms on the east side of the railroad will all be occupied. The site for a drug store is still open, and a good drug store is one of our needs.

OBITUARY.

The deceased, Thomas Stewart, was born in Antrim Co., Ireland, and emigrated to this country in 1852. In early youth he united with the Presbyterian church, and died at his home in York, Mich., March 2, 1896, aged 75 years. He was an early pioneer of the wilds of Michigan, in which state he has resided most of his life. He leaves one sister and a brother to mourn his departure with other relatives and friends. The funeral was properly conducted from DeSpelder Macon church, March 3, by Rev. Jas. Wright.

John Cheever was born in Champion township, Jefferson Co., N. Y., Jan. 9, 1826. His death occurred at his late home in Britton, Mich., Feb. 29, 1896, after more than three years of a gradual wasting away of the system from that dreadful disease, consumption, aged 70 years, one month and 20 days. He came with his parents to Ridgeway in the fall of 1837 and has resided in the town ever since, excepting one year in Macon township. Only two brothers survive of that family. In 1850 he made a public profession of his faith in Christ and united with the First Christian church of Ridgeway (now Britton), retaining his faith until death. March 8, 1851, he married Catherine Coryell, and to them were born twelve children, eight sons and four daughters. The mother and three sons and three daughters are left to mourn a companion and father. For many years John Cheever held the office of trustee in the church of his membership, and was one of the building committee when the new church was erected one-half mile east of Britton and which was removed later to Britton. By his own arrangement, his funeral was conducted at his late home in Britton, by an ex-pastor, Rev. Jas. Wright, assisted by Rev. C. I. Deyo, present pastor. Peace be to his resting dust.

We know of but one community in the world where dyspepsia is practically unknown, and that is the Shakers of Mount Lebanon, N. Y. These good people have been studying the subject of digestion for more than a hundred years, and that they understand it pretty thoroughly, is evidenced in the foregoing fact. Their Digestive Cordial is the safest and best remedy in cases of indigestion that we know of. A trial bottle can be had through your druggist for the trifling sum of 10 cents.

The Shaker Digestive Cordial supplies the system with food already digested, and at the same time aids the digestion of other foods. It will almost instantly relieve the ordinary symptoms of indigestion, and no sufferer need to be told what these are.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28, '96.

Senator Allen, of Neb., did a very unusual thing when he presented the ultimatum of the populist Senators to the republicans on the tariff bill. He said that if the republicans would agree to vote for an amendment to the bill providing for the free coinage of silver the populist Senators would furnish the votes needed to put the amended bill through the Senate. Of course Senator Allen knew that his proposal would not be accepted, and he probably made it only for the purpose of taunting the republicans who were already in a bad humor because of the refusal of free silver republicans to support the tariff bill.

Senator Carter's explanation of why he and four other silver republicans refused to vote for the House tariff bill was far more satisfactory to the populist and silver Senators on both sides of the chamber than it was to the other Senators. He was especially bitter in what he said of President Cleveland and what he called his republican supporters in the Senate.

The talk on Cuban affairs in Congress has brought a powerful Spanish lobby to Washington, for the purpose of trying either to head off any action or to make the action taken meaningless so far as it will commit this government in favor of the Cubans. Spain is said to be hard up, but it seems to have money enough to hire an army of spies scattered throughout the United States to watch everybody suspected of strongly sympathizing with the Cubans, and to maintain a lobby in Washington which is spending money freely to influence the opinion of Congressmen. The friends of Cuba, in Congress, are expressing the opinion that members of the administration are much more zealous in placing U. S. officials under the orders of the Spanish minister, to capture alleged filibustering parties bound for Cuba, than is actually necessary to strictly maintain the neutrality laws.

"He laughs best who laughs last," is ancient, but it is none the less applicable to the present situation in the Senate. The republicans have been doing considerable laughing at the democrats because of the financial differences between the Cleveland wing and the silver wing of the party, but the democrats had their laugh when the open split between the gold republicans and the silver republicans took place on the floor of the Senate this week, showing that it was but another instance of "the pot calling the kettle black" for either of the old parties to laugh at the other on account of financial differences. However, it was nuts for some of the democrats to hear Senator Morrill, apparently following the advice lately given by Secretary Carlisle, by trying to read the silver men out of the republican party, and Senator Teller replying, that although the silver men could get along without the party better than the party could get along without them, they did not intend to allow themselves to be read out because they declined to change their financial views to accord with those held by the Cleveland democracy and the Morrill republicanism of the country. He said the silver men would stay in the republican party until they got ready to get out.

The A. P. A. won a decided victory this week when the House amended the Indian appropriation bill by providing that none of the money therein appropriated should go to Catholic Indian schools. It is a question whether the Senate will strike out that amendment.

The Senate has already shown, by confirming the nomination of Gen. Coppinger, that a large majority of its members are opposed to the A. P. A., but sudden changes are not unknown in that body.

The limited chances that a bill favorable to the building of the Nicaragua canal with government assistance, either direct or by guarantee of the canal company's bonds, had to get through Congress at this session have been materially lessened by a determined crusade against the canal under any conditions, on the ground that it would, if constructed, be more of a menance to the peace of the United States than a benefit commercially. The friends of the canal still express confidence that a favorable bill will pass the House and the Senate, but that is just what they are here to say. This new crusade may or may not have any more substantial backing than the desire of the owner of the New York Herald to get notoriety for his paper, but it will all the same influence nine men out of every ten who were in doubt to declare against the canal. To that extent the crusade will be a factor in the situation.

Ambassador Bayard may as well brace himself to receive that House resolution of censure, for having spoken slightingly of Americans and American affairs, as he will get it very soon. The resolution has been reported to the House, and it is going to be adopted, sure pop.

SERIOUS AND SIMPLE SUBJECTS.

Snap Shots of the Shrievalty Secured With the Scissors.

There are very favorable prospects for an electric car line between Ann Arbor and Detroit. This will be a great advantage to the University city in giving them a competitor of the Michigan Central.

The Hon. Ben Butterworth was secured by the Laws of the University to give their annual oration on Washington's birthday. Mr. Butterworth gave excellent satisfaction and the boys were well pleased.

Rev. E. W. White, chaplain of the First Inf., M. N. G., has accepted an invitation to deliver the memorial day address at Adrian. Chaplain White lives in Milwaukee at present, but attends most punctually to his duties to the First, and is known and beloved by nearly every man in the regiment.

Monroe Democrat: The new Ypsilanti postmaster will renovate the postoffice from end to end. The endorsements of republican flies will be removed, the walls painted and decorated, Harrison's picture removed, together with the "snipes" and "old soldiers" of the last presidential campaign, and the Bogardus kicker sprung on the defiler who dares to plug the goddess of liberty in the eye with a tobacco quid.

Adrian Press: The editor of the Addison Courier, who is a jeweler also, has a blacksmith's anvil, vise and outfit, also rims for a wood turning lathe, and since he has purchased new tools for repairing watches, he will sell the whole outfit. Might get something for 'em at the Telegram or Times office. Considerable blacksmithing done on those papers. They have vices enough however, without purchasing any from brother Kempton.

A new telephone company has been organized in Ann Arbor with some of our prominent business men as promoters. It is proposed to put in telephones at less than half the price now being paid the Bell Company, or $24 for business phones and $15 for residences. The scheme is certainly a good one as far as our citizens are concerned. There are hundreds of people who would put in telephones and have the convenient luxury in their own homes, if they could do it at a rate within their means.—Ann Arbor Courier.

The Press comments as follows on municipal proceedings in the junction village: "Addison's charter election is called for March 9 in Smith's Swarehouse, which is the councilroom designated for that date. The city dads take the councilroom with them, wherever they meet, sometimes using a harness shop, then a printing office, then the skating rink, and judging from the clerk's records, they occasionally use the back end of the grocery, and President Bowen declared a motion carried. Yea, High, Low, Pedro, 7. Nay, Jack, Game, 2.

Adrian Times: The Indianapolis Journal says: Ohio papers have much to say about what an effective competitor of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton the Brice lines will be with the completion of the Lima Northern. The amusing feature of this is that the Lima Northern was offered to the Woodford syndicate, owning the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, on the most reasonable terms, but the syndicate showed no disposition to purchase. If it was likely to be such a formidable competitor the C., H. & D. people would doubtless have secured it.

Monroe Democrat: Uncle Joe Bennett, of Adrian, whose days "Are from everlasting unto everlasting," whirled a short corner the other day, struck a stone and was pitched against the curbing. No damage to the curbing, but Uncle Joe's forehead looks as though he had just returned from Langtry, Mexico. Uncle Joe never lost his balance but once before. That was when he was U. S. marshal. The time, years ago; scene, several rods along the Monroe & Adrian branch where the official plowed up the earth and landed in a frog pond. He had leaned too far out from the platform and lost his hold. The hand car came along as Uncle Joe crawled to the surface and spluttered to the foreman to throw him a life preserver. "O look at 'im! look at 'im!" exclaimed that worthy, "Howly Moses but it's the divil!" "No," said Uncle Joe, "it's a revenue officer in distress."

"Well, it's all the same thing; stick the crow-bars in 'im men." But the oroide silver plated voice of the officer prevailed, and Uncle Joe lived to become president of the Adrian Benevolent Association and also of the Lenawee County Savings Bank.

Another application for the pardon of John Y. McKane, the Gravesend, N. Y., ex-boss, has been filed with Gov. Morton.

The Ideal Panacea.

Rev. John Burgus, Keokuk, Iowa, writes: I have been a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church for 50 years or more, and have never found anything so beneficial, or that gave me such speedy relief as Dr. King's New Discovery. Taught by the Same Master.

A professor was waiting for a train at a railway station, and, having nothing better to take up his mind, began chaffing a half-witted fellow who did odd jobs about the place. "I say, Jamy," said the professor, in a tone intended to reach the ears of the bystanders, "were you ever at college?" "No, sir," answered Jamy, "but I've been at school." "Indeed," said the witty professor. "And who had the honor to be your schoolmaster?" "Maister Black." "Why," said the wit, "he was my schoolmaster, too!" "Do tell me!" exclaimed Jamy. "Man, who'd 'a' thought old Black could have turned out two like us?"

Pingree on Trusts.

Petoskey, Feb. 29.—Mayor Pingree, of Detroit, spoke at the Petoskey Normal academy Friday evening on the subject of direct and indirect taxation. As an example of indirect taxation stress was laid principally on excessive charges by railroads. Mayor Pingree prefaced his address on taxation with some remarks on education, in which he gave some novel suggestions for the training of teachers.

Favors Detroit Bridge Bill.

KEPT AHEAD OF THE BULLETS.

Astounding Swiftness of Foot Shown by a Georgia Razor-Back.

Col. Taylor Jenkins, who lives a few miles north of Blakely, is known throughout that section as one of the most truthful men in it. At least, so says the Early County Times. Recently, while Mr. Jenkins was out hunting, his dogs began barking at something in a large hollow log. It was a wild hog. He took the hog home and dropped it in his cornfield. It is there now. A few weeks ago Mr. Jenkins went out to kill it, thinking he could easily do to with his unerring rifle. He searched about till he "jumped" it. Down a corn row it went like lightning. He leveled his rifle and "cut down" on it, but never touched a hair. He "jumped" it again and shot again, but no hog. Again and again he "jumped" it and shot at it, with the same result. He began to wonder what could be the matter. The corn rows were as straight as moonshine whisky and his gun true as the third party to Tom Watson, yet hit it he couldn't. To shoot at the hog as it ran off down the corn rows was just like shooting at it standing, so far as getting a "bead on it" was concerned. To make sure that he didn't "wobble" off the hog he put up a small target and "cracked down" at it five times, then took his ax and chopped in and found five balls all in one hole in the middle of the spot. That settled it—that the fault was not in him or the gun, but the hog had outrun the bullets.

LONDON DOGS OUT CALLING.

It appears, from an article in the Figaro by M. Paul Megnin, that in London at the present time it is not only the fashion for a lady to provide her lapdog with a little wardrobe and even a handkerchief, but to have visiting cards made for it, too. When a fashionable lady pays a visit, taking her lapdog with her, she sends up the dog's card along with her own.

M. Megnin says he was visiting the editor of one of the leading sporting papers in London, when the servant brought in two cards, one that of a lady and the other as follows:

MRS. FRIVOLITY.
Collie.

Asked if he knew the name on the card, M. Megnin said he presumed it was some dog fancier. He was greatly surprised to see a lady come in, accompanied by a handsome collie.

M. Megnin went to a stationer's shop and ordered 100 cards for his little dog. He was again surprised to find that the stationer had some ready printed, neatly packed in pretty little card cases.

BEN FRANKLIN'S BIG HEAD.

How He Wore His Wig in His Pocket at the French Court.

The difficulties encountered recently by the lineal descendants of that great man, statesman, patriot and everything else that men properly hold in estimation — Benjamin Franklin — in having themselves enrolled among the Colonial Dames, recall an anecdote of him, says the Washington Post, embalmed in the family records of the sage of Monticello, but which, so far as the writer knows, has never been published. When about to present himself for the first time at the court of Versailles he was informed by the master of ceremonies that a wig was a sine qua non. Now, his head was so large that no ordinary wig would begin to fit it, and the situation was embarrassing in the extreme. However, one was found sufficiently large to pass him through the antechambers, after which he was permitted to remove the ridiculous conventional appendage and place it in his ample pocket, whence it never again emerged to public gaze.

Cox and His Brownies.

Palmer Cox says the idea of writing about the brownies came to him from reading Scotch traditions concerning these amusing little elves. They were, he says, almost unknown in America until he began writing about them, but in Scotland they had existed in the folk lore for 500 years. The Scotch brownie, according to Mr. Cox, was a beneficient sort of sprite, whose only three emotions were joy, wonder and terror. It was supposed they were never seen by human beings, but went about at night performing helpful deeds for the country folk, at the same time getting a deal of fun themselves out of kindly pranks.

Trained Goats.

In Switzerland and other mountainous countries the goat leads long strings of animals daily to and from the mountains, but it is in South Africa that it is particularly kept and employed as a leader of flocks of sheep. Should a blinding storm of rain or hail drive the silly sheep before it, or cause them to huddle together in a corner, so as to suffocate each other, the trained goat will wake them up, and by a method best known to himself will induce them to follow him to a place of safety.

Not Scientific.

A song with the title: "There's a Sigh in the Heart," was sent by a young man to his sweetheart; but the paper fell into the hands of the girl's father, a very unsentimental physician, who exclaimed:

"What wretched, unscientific rubbish is this? Who ever heard of such a case?"

He wrote on the outside:

"Mistaken diagnosis: no sigh in the heart possible. Sighs relate almost entirely to the lungs and diaphragm!"

It was with a general and personal feeling of regret that our citizens heard the news on Monday last that Anderson & Co. had so far succumbed to the financial exingencies as to file several chattel mortgages on their large stock for the security of creditors. Security of this nature has been given to the extent of about $33,000. The book accounts of the firm aggregate $18,000 and their stock invoiced more than $35,000. The chief factor which has worked the distress of a house doing the amount of business which has been done here even up to this week, has been the condition of collections during the past few years. Their large amount of assets which appear under this head, and which are nearly all collectable, clearly bear out this statement. All creditors are satisfied of the solvency of the firm and will give them ample opportunity to realize on their present stock and accounts. This they are pushing every effort to accomplish, and they will certainly succeed.

To be kept thoroughly well posted on the news of such an eventful year as 1896 promises to be, a person should read the columns of a live, wide-awake metropolitan paper beside the county or local newspaper. Now is the proper time to begin a subscription, which will cover the Presidential campaign, the great speeches, the November election and the outcome of all the wars and troubles abroad. If intending subscribers will heed a word of advice they will send $1 to The Twice-a-Week Republic. They will receive in return twice every week for a year a copy of the spiciest, newsiest and most entertaining newspaper in the country. The Twice-a-week Republic will make a specialty of giving the political news and speeches on both sides and at the same time keep up the very entertaining departments it has always contained. A big inducement is offered to those who become so interested that only a daily metropolitan paper will meet their wants. The Daily and Sunday Republic has been reduced to only $6 a year or $3 for six months.

No firm ever did more for a town, either as a business corporation or as individual citizens, than Anderson & Co. have done for Tecumseh. The people of the surrounding country, as well as residents of Tecumseh realize this, and their sympathy for the company in their present trouble is plenteous and sincere. Now, fellow citizens, is the time to substantiate your feelings of sympathy and pay up. They have accommodated you. It fact it is the very cause of their present trouble. They have carried and accommodated you and your neighbors for small amounts until the totals amounted to a burden which they could carry no longer. The stores have been closed for the purpose of marking down the immense stock to figures at which a ready cash value will be realized. Every creditor has the utmost confidence that every thing has been and will be done to protect their interest. With this assurance and with the customery energy of the firm the concern will continue to do business at the old stand. If you are a friend to Anderson & Co., and to Tecumseh, go down in your stocking and pay up. If you have not the money, borrow it, and do your duty.

MARY W. OSBORN.

Died, in Elkhart, Ind., Feb. 27, 1896, Mary W. Osborn in the 67th year of her age.

Mary W. Osborn (nee Mary Wheeler) was born in Abington, Mass., Nov. 26, 1809. She was married to John W. Osborn Nov. 6, 1827. With her husband and family she removed to Tecumseh, Mich. in the fall of 1840, where they resided for many years. There were born to this union eleven sons and daughters, nine of whom survive the mother. Two have gone to the other side, James W. Osborn, a citizen of Tecumseh for many years, who died in 1874; and Edward W. Osborn, who died in infancy. The remains were brought to Tecumseh for burial, and on Sunday, March 1, were followed to their resting place by eight of the surviving children and seven grandchildren. She, together with her husband, united with the M. E. church in their early life, and both remained consistent members of that church to the end. To say that she was a devoted wife and mother, is but a mild expression of her virtues; no trial or hardship was too much for her to undertake when the comfort of her family was involved. As we who are left can fully attest, we mourn her loss. No, not the loss of a dear mother but the absence, for she is not dead, but bore into a higher life. The finger of God touched her and she slept, but only soon to awake to a brigther and more joyous forever.

CARD OF THANKS.

The children of Mrs. Mary W. Osborn desire to express their sincere thanks to the neighbors and friends, for their kind sympathy and help on the occasion of the burial of their mother.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the loved ones of our departed sister, and, as a society, we shall greatly miss her gentle, loving presence and generous giving hand of a dearly loved friend, but in our loss we know she has gained a rich reward in the mansions of bliss.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal organs on which it acts. It is [illegible] all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, then laxatives or other remedies are not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, then one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Calling Anew the Sheep Who Have Gone Astray—The Lord Hath Laid Upon One the Iniquity of Us All.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage delivered the following sermon to his Washington congregation, taking for his text:

All we, like sheep, have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all.

Once more I ring the old Gospel bell. The first half of my next text is an indictment: All we, like sheep, have gone astray. Some one says: "Can't you drop that first word? That is too general; that sweeps too great a circle." Some man rises in the audience and he looks over on the opposite side of the house, and says: "There is a blasphemer; and I understand how he has gone astray. And there in another part of the house is a defaulter, and he has gone astray. And there is an impure person, and he has gone astray." Sit down, my brother, and look at home. My text takes us all in. It starts behind the pulpit, sweeps the circuit of the room, and comes back to the point where it started, when it says: "All we, like sheep, have gone astray." I can very easily understand why Martin Luther threw up his hands after he had found the Bible and cried out: "Oh! my sins, my sins!" and why the publican, according to the custom to this day in the east, when they have any great grief, began to beat himself and cry, as he smote upon his breast: "God be merciful to me, a sinner." I was, like many of you, brought up in the country, and I know some of the habits of sheep, and how they get astray, and what my text means when it says: "All we, like sheep, have gone astray."

Sheep get astray in two ways; either by trying to get into other pasture, or from being scared by the dogs. In the former way some of us got astray. We thought there was better pasturage somewhere else. We thought if we could only lie down on the banks of a distant stream, or under great oaks on the other side of some hill, we might be better fed. We wanted other pasturage than that which God, through Jesus Christ, gave our soul, and we wandered on, and we were lost. We wanted bread, and we found garbage. The farther we wandered, instead of finding rich pasturage, we found blasted health and sharper rocks and more stinging nettles. No pasture. How was it in the club house when you lost your child? Did they come around and help you very much? Did your worldly associates console you very much? Did not the plain Christian man who came into your house and sat up with your darling child give you more comfort than all worldly associates? Did all the convivial songs you ever heard comfort you in that day of bereavement so much as the song they sang to you—perhaps the very song that was sung by your little child the last Sabbath afternoon of her life.

Far, far away,
Where saints immortal reign,
Bright, bright as day.

Did your business associates in that day of darkness and trouble give you any especial condolence? Business exasperated you, business wore you out, business left you limp as a fag, business made you mad. You got dollars, but you got no peace. God have mercy on the man who has nothing but business to comfort him! The world afforded you no luxuriant pasturage. A famous English actor stood on the stage impersonating, and thunders of applause came down from the galleries, and many thought it was the proudest moment of his life; but there was a man asleep just in front of him, and the fact that that man was indifferent and somnolent spoiled the occasion for him, and he cried: "Wake up, wake up!" So one little annoyance in life has been more pervading to your mind than all the brilliant congratulations and success. Poor pasturage for your soul you find in this world. The world has cheated you, the world has belied you, the world has misinterpreted you, the world has persecuted you. It never comforted you. Oh! this world is a good rack from which a horse may pick his food; it is a good trough from which the swine may crunch their mess; but it gives but little food to a soul blood-bought and immortal. What is a soul? It is a hope high as the throne of God. What is a man? You say, "It is only a man." It is only a mane gone overboard in sin. It is only a man gone overboard in business life. What is a man? The battle ground of three worlds, with his hands taking hold of destinies of light or darkness. A man! No line can measure him. No limit can bound him. The archangel before the throne can not outlive him. The stars shall die, but he will watch their extinguishment. The world will burn, but he will gaze at the conflagration. Endless ages will march on; he will watch the procession. A man! The master piece of God Almighty. Yet you say: "It is only a man." Can a nature like that be fed on husks of the wilderness?

Substantial comforts will not grow
On Nature's barren soil;
All we can boast till Christ we know
Is sorrow, sin and toil.

Sinai's terrible batteries have been unlimbered above your soul, and at times you have heard it thunder: "The wages of sin is death." "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." "By one man sin entered the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." When Sebastopol was being bombarded two Russian frigates burned all night in the harbor, throwing a glare upon the trembling fortress; and some of you, from what you have told me yourselves, some of you are standing in the night of your soul's trouble, the cannonade, and the conflagration, and the multiplication, and the multitude of your sorrows and troubles, I think, must make the wings of God's hovering angels shiver to the tip.

But the last part of my text opens a door wide enough to let us all out and to let all Heaven in. Sound it on the organ with all the stops out. Turn it on the harps with all the strings atune. With all the melody possible let the heavens sound it to the earth and let the earth tell it to the heavens. "The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." I am glad that the prophet did not stop to explain whom he meant by "him." Him of the manger. Him of the bloody sweat. Him of the resurrection throne. Him of the crucifixion agony. "On him the Lord hath laid the iniquity of us all." "Oh!" says some man, "that isn't generous, that isn't fair; let every man carry his own burden and pay his own debts." That sounds reasonable. If I have an obligation and I have the means to meet it, and I come to you and ask you to settle that obligation, you rightly say: "Pay your own debts." If you and I, walking down the street—both hale, hearty and well—I ask you to carry me, you say, rightly: "Walk on your own feet! But suppose you and I were in a regiment and I was wounded in the battle and I fell unconscious at your feet with gunshot fractures and dislocations, what would you do? You would call to your comrades, saying, "Come and help; this man is helpless; bring the ambulance; let us take him to the hospital!" and I would be a dead lift in your arms, and you lift me from the ground where I had fallen, and put me in the ambulance and take me to the hospital and have all kindness shown me. Would there be anything bemeaning in my accepting that kindness? Oh, no! You would be mean not to do it. That is what Christ does. If we could pay our debts then it would be better to go up and pay them, saying, "Here, Lord, here is my obligation; here are the means with which I mean to settle that obligation; now give me a receipt; cross it all out." The debt is paid.

But the fact is we have fallen in the battle; we have gone down under the hot fire of our transgressions; we have been wounded by the sabers of sin; we have been wounded by the sabers of sin; we are helpless; we are undone. Christ comes. The loud cloud heard in the sky on that Christmas night was only the bell, the resounding bell of the ambulance. Clear the way for the Son of God. He comes down to bind up the wounds, and to scatter the darkness and to save the lost. Clear the way for the Son of God. Christ comes down to us, and we are a dead lift. He does not lift us with the tips of His fingers. He does not lift us with one arm. He comes down upon His knee, and then, with a dead lift, He raises us to honor and glory and immortality. "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." Why, then, will a man carry his sins? You can not carry successfully the smallest sin you ever committed. You might as well put the Apennines on one shoulder and the Alps on the other. How much less can you carry all the sins of your lifetime? Christ comes and looks down in your face and says: "I have come through all the lacerations of these days, and through all the tempests of these nights; I have come to bear your burdens, and to pardon your sins, and to pay your debts; put them on my shoulder; put them on my heart." "On him the Lord hath laid the iniquity of us all." Sin has almost pestered the life out of some of you. At times it has made you cross and unreasonable, and it has spoiled the brightness of your days and the peace of your rights. There are men who have been riddled of sin. The world gives them no solace. Gossamery and volatile the world, while eternity, as they look forward to it, is black as midnight. They writhe under the stings of a conscience which proposes to give no rest here and no rest hereafter, and yet they do not repent, they do not pray, they do not weep. They do not realize that just the position they occupy is the position occupied by scores, hundreds and thousands of men who never found any hope.

If this meeting should be thrown open and the people who are here could give their testimony, what thrilling experiences we should hear on all sides! There is a man who would say: "I had a brilliant surroundings; I had the best education that one of the best collegiate institutions of this country could give, and I observed all the moralties of life, and I was self-righteous, and I thought I was all right before God as I am all right before man, but the Holy Spirit came to me one day and said: 'You are a sinner,' the Holy Spirit persuaded me of the fact. While I had escaped the sins against the law of the land, I had really committed the worst sin a man ever commits, the driving back of the Son of God from my heart's affections, and I saw that my hands were red with the blood of the Son of God, and I began to pray, and peace came to my heart, and I know by experience that what you say is true." "On Him the Lord hath laid the iniquity of us all." Yonder is a man who would say: "I was the worst drunkard in the city; I went from bad to worse; I destroyed myself; I destroyed my home; my children cowered when I entered the house; when they put up their lips to be kissed I [illegible] when my wife protested against the maltreatment I meted her into the street. I know all the bruises and all the terrors of a drunkard's woe. I went further and further from God until one day I got a letter, saying:

"'MY DEAR HUSBAND: I have tried every way, done everything and prayed earnestly and fervently for your reformation, but it seems of no avail. Since our little Henry died, with the exception of those few happy weeks when you remained sober, my life had been one of sorrow. Many of the nights I have sat by the window, with my face bathed in tears, watching for your coming. I am broken-hearted. I am sick. Mother and father have been here frequently and begged me to come home; but my love for you and my hope for brighter days have always made me refuse them. That hope seems now beyond realization, and I have returned to them. It is hard, and I battled long before doing it. May God bless and preserve you, and take from that accursed appetite, and hasten the day when we shall be again living happily together. This will be my daily prayer, knowing that He has said, 'Come unto me all ye that and are heavy laden, and I will gives you rest.' From your loving wife,

"'MARY.'

"And so I wandered on and wandered on," says that man, "until one night I passed a Methodist meeting house, and I said to myself, "I'll go in and see what they are doing;' and I got to the door, and they were singing.

All may come whoever will—
This man receives poor sinners still.

And I dropped right there where I was, and I said: 'God have mercy!' and He had mercy on me. My home is restored, my wife sings all day long during work, my children come out a long way to greet me home, and my household is a little heaven. I will tell you what did all this for me. It was the truth that this day you proclaim: 'On him the Lord hath laid the iniquity of us all.' Yonder is a woman who would say: 'I wandered off from my father's house. I heard the storm that pelts on a lost soul; my feet were blistered on the hot rocks. I went on and on, thinking that no one cared for my soul, when one night Jesus met me, and He said: 'Poor thing, go home; your father is waiting for you, your mother is waiting for you. Go home, poor thing!' And, sir, I was too weak to pray, and I was too weak to repent, but I just cried out I sobbed out my sins and my sorrows on the shoulders of Him of whom it is said 'the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all.'"

Someone comes here to-day and I stand aside. He comes up three steps. He comes to this place. I must stand aside. Taking that place He spreads abroad his hands, and they were hailed. You see His feet; they were bruised. He pulls aside the robe and shows you his wounded heart. I say: "Art thou weary?" "Yes," He says. "Weary with the world's woe." I say: "Whence comest Thou?" He says: "I came from Calvary." I say: "Who comes with Thee?" He says: "No one; I have trodden the wine-press alone." I say: "Why comest thou here?" "Oh!" He says, "I came here to carry all the sins and sorrows of the people." And He kneels. He says: "Put on my shoulders all the sorrows and all the sins." And, conscious of my own sins first, I take them and put them on the shoulders of the Son of God. I say: "Canst Thou bear any more, oh Christ?" He says: "Yes, more." And I gather up the sins of all those who serve at these altars, the officers of the Church of Jesus Christ—I gather up their sins and I put them on Christ's shoulders, and I say: "Canst Thou bear any more?" He says: "Yes, more." Then I gather up all the sins of a hundred people in this house, and I put them on the shoulders of Christ, and I say: "Canst Thou bear more?" He says: "Yes, more." And I gather up all the sins of the assembly, and put them on the shoulders of the Son of God, and I say: "Canst Thou bear them?" "Yes," He says, "more." But He is departing. Clear the way for Him, the Son of God. Open the door and let Him pass out. He is carrying our sins and bearing them away. We shall never see them again. He throws them down into the abyss, and you hear the long reverberating echo of their fall. "On him the Lord hath laid the iniquity of us all." Will you let Him take your sins to-day? Or, did you say: "I will take charge of them myself, I will risk eternity on my own account?" I know not how near some of you have come to crossing the line.

A clergyman said in his pulpit one Sabbath: "Before next Saturday night one of this audience will have passed out of life." A gentleman said to another seated next to him: "I don't believe it; I mean to watch, and if it doesn't come true by next Saturday night, I shall tell that clergyman his falsehood." The man seated next to him said: "Perhaps it will be yourself." "Oh! no," the other replied, "I shall live to be an old man." That night he breathed his last. To-day the Saviour calls. All may come. God never pushes a man off. God never destroys anybody. The man jumps off, he jumps off. It is suicide—soul suicide—if the man perishes, for the invitation is, "whosoever will, let him come;" whosoever, whosoever, whosoever!

How sweet the Gospel's charming sound!
Come, sinner, haste, O! haste away,
While yet a pardoning God is found.

In this day of merciful visitation, while many are coming into the kingdom of God, join the procession Heavenward.

Seated in my church was a man who came in who said: "I don't know that there is any God." That was on Friday night. I said: "We will kneel down and find out whether there is any God." And in the second seat from the pulpit we knelt. He said: "I have found Him. There is a God, a pardoning God. I feel Him here." He knelt in the darkness of sin. He arose two minutes afterward in the liberty of the Gospel; while another sitting under the gallery on Friday night, said: "I gone; last week I might have been saved; not now—the door is shut." "Behold the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world." "Now is the accepted time. Now is the day of salvation." "It is appointed unto all men once to die, and after that the judgment!"

The Road Man of Texas.

One of the features and a most valuable medium to the isolated settlers of the Lone Star State is the Road Man. Equipped with a team of wiry mustangs, and wagon, whose capacious interior is filled with the many necessities of pioneer life—from the tiny rattle for the baby to the calico for the dress, canned fruits, etc., and last, but not least, medicines most needed by the dwellers whose neighbors are often miles away. The road man is shrewd and knows a good thing when he sees it and how to profit by it. Mr. J. G. Lincoln is a road man and he writes under the date of Feb. 16, '96, "I had the good fortune to come into possession of a package of your Catarrh Balm, and although I have been troubled with catarrh for several years, I can say that it cured me. I think it is the greatest catarrh medicine out. I am a road man. Since using your remedy I have told several people where I travel and these would buy it if I had it. At what price can you sell it to me in quantity—My Sunday point is Paris, Texas, for the next two Sundays." Pretzinger's Catarrh Balm is indorsed by all who give it trial and its worth is becoming known far and wide. Sample sent for 2c stamp, or a full sized package for 50c., by Pretzinger Bros., Chemists, Dayton, Ohio.

Milk Pans,

and pails, and cans, and bottles (even baby's)—or anything that you want particularly clean, ought to be washed with Pearline. You'll save work, in doing it, and it's a great deal more thoroughly done. Dairies and dealers use Pearline extensively. Just try it once on your milk-ware or butter-ware—and then say if it isn't the most satisfactory way of cleaning. Pearline is the most economical thing you can use, too: You get so much more out of it. 365 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

A SPECIFIC —FOR—
La Grippe, for Colds, Coughs, AND LUNG TROUBLES,
AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Two years ago, I had the grippe, and it left me with a cough which gave me no rest night or day. My family physician prescribed for me, changing the medicine as often as he found the things I had taken were not helping me, but, in spite of his attendance, I got no better. Finally, my husband,—reading one day of a gentleman who had had the grippe and was cured by taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,—procured, for me, a bottle of this medicine, and before I had taken half of it, I was cured. I have used the Pectoral for my children and in my family, whenever we have needed it, and have found it a specific for colds, coughs, and lung troubles."—EMILY WOOD, North St., Elkton, Md.

A man's health carries him through the world. He depends on it for enjoyment, for happiness, for success, for the achievement of anything he has in hand. Americans take big chances. They risk everything in business. They have confidence in their brains and their ability. The American business man is active, flexible, elastic. Knock him down with failure and he is up again in a minute. As long as he keeps his health, failure doesn't mean anything to him. He has lost a little time, but that is all. If he can keep his health, he will go on to success. He feels sure of that, and yet his health is the very thing he neglects more than anything else. His health is the rope by which he climbs to success. It behooves him to keep the rope in good condition, and not to neglect broken strands. When the rope of health breaks even a little bit, it should be mended at once. It is easier to keep health than it is to regain it. When a man feels himself running down, when he realizes a loss of vitality and energy, he must call a halt. He is on the down grade. The strands of his rope are parting rapidly.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has helped thousands of men in just this way. It makes rich blood, it forces out impurities and kills germs. It doesn't make any difference what name you call your trouble by—dyspepsia—kidney disease—rheumatism—consumption—skin disease, the "Golden Medical Discovery" will cure it absolutely. Some of these diseases can retain hold on the body when it is full of rich, pure blood.

Every man who cares to keep his health should have Dr. Pierce's "Common Sense Medical Adviser," finely illustrated book of 1008 pages. Sent to any address on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only.

The News Condensed

Important Intelligence From All Parts.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The Proceedings of the First Session.

In the senate on the 20th Senator Allen (Neb.) offered a substitute for the pending Cuban resolution. It authorizes and requests the president to issue a proclamation recognizing the independence of the republic of Cuba. Senator Carter (Mont.) in speaking on the tariff bill charged the republicans in the senate and house with deserting the republican national platform on both the tariff and money questions, and with taking their orders from the white house, where a democratic president is in command. He said he believed that the protection of American industries was necessary to American prosperity, but the bill and adjourned sine die. The governor signed the measure.

and the two would hereafter go hand in hand. In the house a bill was introduced for the erection of a national mint at Chicago. The Van Horn-Tarsney contested election case from the Kansas City (Mo.) district occupied most of the session.

Senator Vest spoke in the senate on the 27th in favor of recognizing Cuban independence. The army appropriation bill, carrying $23,279,000, was passed....In the house resolutions were presented declaring it to be the sense of congress that a state of war exists in Cuba; that the insurgents be given the right of belligerents, and that it is the sense of congress that the government of the United States use its influence to stop the war, if necessary, by intervention, and pledging the support of congress. After debate the vote on the resolutions was postponed one day. John C. Tarsney (dem.), from the Fifth Missouri district was unseated, and his opponent, Robert T. Van Horn (rep.), was seated.

By a vote of 41 to 6 the senate on the 28th ult. adopted a concurrent resolution favorable to Cuban belligerency and independence. The main feature of the debate was the speech of Senator Sherman, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, who arraigned Spain and her government in the most scathing language. ....The entire day in the house was spent in the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill, and considerable progress was made. The speaker presented the president's veto of the bill to lease certain lands in Arizona for educational purposes.

The senate was not in session on the 29th ult....In the house the bill authorizing the governor and local officers of Arizona to lease the educational lands of the territory for school purposes, which was vetoed by the president, was passed over the veto by a vote of 198 to 88. Most of the day was consumed in the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill.

Bills were passed in the senate on the 2d authorizing the addition of 1,000 enlisted men to the navy; to prevent the carrying of obscene literature and articles designed for indecent and immoral use from one state or territory to another, and to establish a retired list for the revenue marine service. Senator Allison's (Ia.) credentials for the term beginning March 4, 1897, were presented....In the house the struggling patriots in Cuba were eulogized and sympathized with in a two-hours' debate and the resolutions by the house foreign affairs committee favoring the insurgents were adopted as a substitute for those of the senate by a vote of 263 to 17. The senate joint resolution directing the secretary of agriculture to purchase and distribute the seeds authorized by the current law was adopted.

A CHINESE SERVANT.

Ah Sing agreed to come to us for the trifling sum of $35 a month and all his afternoons to himself, says a writer in Lippincott's.

"Me go see Joss afternoons," and go to see Joss he did, or rather to some opium-joint to smoke his pipe, with the greatest regularity every afternoon. But on the whole, he was a good servant; he cooked well—all the "China boys" do that—he waited horribly; they all do that likewise.

One day as I was giving him some orders, Ah Sing looked at me. "Mrs. S——, you husband dead, or him run away?"

"Oh! In California most times him run away."

For which delightful comment on the divorce system of southern California I found it in my heart to forgive Ah Sing many iniquities.

If you can put up with the entire independence of the Chinese, with their absolute unteachableness in every department except the kitchen, you are better off than with the Spanish. A Chinaman is only too delighted to get a new receipt, and will practice with the utmost patience till he acquires perfection; but suggest to him to sweep down the stairs, and see what a response you meet with!

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S PEACH.

A Hostess' Mistake and the Guest's Good Nature.

A young lady sends to the Chicago Tribune a little anecdote of Abraham Lincoln. She says that a good many years ago, when her father was a small boy, her grandfather brought Abraham Lincoln home one night to supper. He was then a poor young man practicing law in Woodford county, Ill.

It was a cold, stormy night, and grandma hurried around getting supper. To have something nice, she opened a jar of preserved peaches. Lincoln spent a long time over his peach, and finally left it on the plate.

Grandma noticed this, and as soon as he and grandpa had gone into another room she went to look at the dish. Then she saw that instead of a peach she had given the visitor the little muslin sack which contained the peach kernels and the spice. She hastened into the other room and began an apology, but Mr. Lincoln said:

"That was all right, Mrs. Perry. My mother used the same thing, and it was so good that I wanted to get all the juice out of it."

To Encourage Matrimony.
